Gold soars a record $13

Times News Services

Gold took a big jump in Europe today to open at yet another record price spurred by Thursday's late surge on the New York bullion market.

The price catapulted by $13.250 in Zurich, topping last week's record leap of $11, to open at a record $346.25 U.S. an ounce. In London, the price jumped $10.875 to $346. ($402.29 Canadian, at today's exchange rate.)

"The gold market has gone berserk," said precious metals expert Peter Gignoux of the international brokerage house of Bache and Co. in London.

Gignoux said much of the gold buying was by dealers frantically trying to cover short positions taken earlier this week in the belief that gold prices would go down.

A number of analysts had predicted price corrections following a $40 rise in a month. And gold prices did subside markedly in the last two days after touching an intra-day high of $341.75 in Zurich Sept. 6.

The price slipped a fraction at the morning fix in London to $345.750.

"The overnight jump in New York caught the market by surprise and caused heavily renewed speculative demand," a dealer in Zurich said.

Mocatta and Goldsmid reported the market was nevertheless steady. "Gold was strong in London this morning but actual business was steady," a dealer said.

One explanation for the jump came in reports of a possible gold shortage because of lower South African sales.

There is a physical shortage of gold for several reasons, according to New York analyst Louis Vigdor, vice president of bullion dealers Manfra Tordella Brookes.

"While South Africa releases production figures, we don't know how much gold it is actually selling. There are rumors, which we haven't been able to confirm, that they might be trading gold for oil from a non-OPEC country."

Vigdor said he also believes some gold being sold by the United States has been disappearing into central banks. "For example, look at West Germany's gold reserve figures, which have built up to around 90 million ounces," he said.

This appeared to confirm a claim by Canadian fiancial analyst and noted "gold bug" Vernon Myers, who said Thursday the central banks were buying gold and this presaged a major financial collapse.

Myers, who now lives in the U.S., a fugitive from Canadian tax authorities, told a meeting of financial analysts that gold would continue to soar as the West reels under the collapse of paper money. (See page 16.)

The U.S. dollar opened slightly firmer on most money markets, although the rate in Frankfurt was unchanged at 1.8130 marks.

In Tokyo, the U.S. dollar closed at 223.975 yen today, up from 222.125 Thursday.

Dealers said the jump was due to rising interest rates in the United States, making the dollar more attractive.

Goods which cost $100 in 1971 had almost doubled in price to $192.80 in August, Statistics Canada reported today.

And while the the August price rise of four-tenths of one per cent was the smallest monthly increase this year, it pushed the annual inflation rate up to 8.4 per cent from 8.1 per cent a month earlier.

The federal agency credited the small monthly increase to a seasonal decline in food prices, but said the annual inflation rate was pushed upward when combined with increases in the previous 11 months.

Statistics Canada said its monthly consumer price index, which measures the cost of a basket of commonly purchased goods and services, rose to 192.8 in August from 192.1 in July. A year ago it stood at 177.8, and in 1971 it was $100.

Put another way, the purchasing power of a 1971 dollar in August was about 52 cents — virtually unchanged from July — down from 56 cents a year earlier.

Statistics Canada said food prices declined seven-tenths of one per cent in August after an increase of 1.7 per cent in July.

Prices for food consumed at home in August were 9.8 per cent higher than a year earlier while the cost of food away from home was up 11.9 per cent.

Statistics Canada also noted its monthly survey found prices for alcoholic beverages consumed in licensed premises were up as were the costs of men's haircuts and women's hairdressing services.

The increase in the annual inflation rate to 8.4 per cent pushes it closer to the nine per cent that Finance Minister John Crosbie has predicted will be the average inflation rate this year. That compares with 9 per cent inflation in 1978, 8 per cent in 1977, 7.5 per cent in 1976, 10.8 per cent in 1975 and 10.9 per cent in 1974.

Still to be recorded in the inflation index are the higher gasoline and heating oil prices resulting from a $1-a-barrel increase in the domestic price of oil that took effect July.

Economic forecasters have predicted little relief in inflation rates in the year ahead, particularly with still-higher energy prices looming.

Vancouver shows the lowest annual inflation rate of the cities surveyed by Statistics Canada, and Victoria, while not included in the survey, is considered to have similar trends.

Storm victims in blackout

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Thousands of storm area residents remained without electrical power today in the wake of hurricane Frederic.

Armed National Guard troops aided local and state police in patrolling expensive beachfront homes and businesses to protect against looters.

Police and Civil Defense authorities said they had decided to reopen the Pensacola Beach, Fla. area today, but only to residents. Officials said some residents would have to be taken to their homes by shuttle buses because of damage to roads and debris.

The suburban area of about 1,000 homes was especially hard hit by the hurricane that smashed ashore Wednesday night and early Thursday. Police said a curfew would be in effect from 8 p.m. until 6 a.m. to discourage looters.

President Carter today flew to the Gulf Coast for an aerial inspection of the damage caused by the hurricane's 200 kph winds.

Carter planned to make a helicopter inspection of damage in the Mobile area, then fly to Pensacola to view the destruction there, before returning to Washington by mid-afternoon.

In Mobile, a 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew was also in effect and police have arrested 15 people during the night for curfew violations. However, there were no new arrests during the night for looting.

Mayor A.J. Cooper of nearby Pritchard, Ala., ordered his officers to give looters two warning shots and then "shoot to kill" if they don't surrender.

Alabama Gov. Fob James warned looters they were "taking their lives in their hands" and said they would be "dealt with in the most severe manner" by guardsmen armed with M16 rifles. Sixteen looting arrests were made on Thursday.

The resort communities of Gulf Shores and Dauphin Island in Alabama were almost uninhabitable today. A draw bridge that was Dauphin Island's only ground link to the mainland was destroyed. Police and guardsmen used four-wheel drive vehicles to reach Gulf Shores, where most of the vacation homes stretching from the town 40 kilometres to the tip of the Fort Morgan Peninsula were heavily damaged or destroyed. Roads there were covered with several feet of sand.

Several motels at Gulf Shores, which depends on tourism for its economy, were levelled.

Three in race for mayor's job

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Ald. John Hayes today announced he is running for mayor of Victoria, and similar but semi-official announcements quickly came from fellow aldermen Murray Glazier and Bill Tindall.

Tindall, manager of the Better Business Bureau, said it's been known for several months he's going to run.

"Later this month I'm going to make an official announcement on it."

Glazier, who is chairman of the Capital Regional Disrict, couldn't be reached by the Times today but he told a radio station that he, too, is in the race.

"I'm running for mayor but I just haven't decided when to announce it."

The ambitions of both men have been a poorly-kept secret for months, but Hayes is the first candidate officially to announce his entry into what is expected to be a crowded race for retiring Mayor Mike Young's office.

"What we need is a nonpartisan mayor who can get council operating as a team," Hayes told a press conference today.

The 37-year-old property appraiser quit his job 10 days ago at Morguard Properties Ltd. to run for mayor. He was elected to council in early 1976 in a byelection brought about by the resignation of Sam Bawlf.

His platform is a mixture of a more open municipal government, promises of more policemen and warnings about serious problems that the city will have to deal with in the 1980s.

"There's a feeling that we're still somewhat of a backwater of North America and eccentric," said Hayes. "It isn't so.

"We're faced with some big city problems and we

Airline ticket fraud netted agent $1.5M

NEW YORK (AP) — A 28-year-old travel agent pocketed more than $1.5 million in ticket sales from three airlines then apparently flew out of the country, authorities said Thursday.

The scheme, which took advantage of a built-in lag time in airline ticket-accounting procedures, may have netted the agent as much as $3 million, depending on the value of airline tickets still outstanding, Brooklyn District Attorney Eugene Gold said.

Gold said Chaim Einhorn has been indicted on 12 counts of grand larceny.

The indictment alleges Einhorn failed to report and pay for approximately 2,000 airline tickets ordered over a 10-month period from British Airways and Trans World and Pan American Airlines.

Gold said the agent opened Vacation Planning Center, a Flatbush Avenue travel agency, in January 1978, authorities said. The agent pocketed revenues from the sale of tickets from April 1978 to February 1979.

Airlines agents, investigating debit memos for $136,000 in outstanding tickets, discovered in February that Einhorn had disappeared with his family and abandoned his agency, Gold said.

Gold said the agent wrote himself a $2,100-ticket from New York to Zurich, Switzerland, Tel Aviv, Israel, and London.

Einhorn allegedly wrote and sold tickets, but never submitted weekly sales reports to the Air Traffic Conference, an airline enforcement agency that regulates the sale of airline tickets. The reports document sales and authorize payment for tickets from the agent's bank account.

Gold said the agent was able to bilk the airlines because of an accounting procedure that requires airlines to match a carbon of the ticket submitted by the agent with the carbon submitted by the passenger on boarding the flight. The lag is at least 90 days at TWA, six months at Pan Am and nine months at the London-based British Airways.

When ticket carbons were not matched, the airlines submited debit memos to the Air Traffic Conference, whose officials investigated and notified the district attorney.

Foothills line gets B.C. vote

DELTA (CP) — The provincial government has endorsed the Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. proposal for an all-land pipeline route to carry Alaskan oil south.

At an impromptu news conference Thursday, Premier Bill Bennett said the endorsement is part of the government's energy policy to be disclosed prior to the first ministers' conference in November.

But Bennett said he will oppose any plans to ship Alaskan oil south by tanker along the B.C. coast.

Bennett said the $1.5-billion Foothills pipeline would take advantage of the proposed energy and transportation corridor along the Alaska Highway, which passes through northeastern B.C.

"We reject and oppose those proposals that would put tankers off B.C. waters or into the fragile area of waters that would be affected by B.C.," Bennet said.

The pipeline parallels the proposed $15-billion Alaska Highway gas pipeline to transport natural gas from Prudhoe Bay to the continental United States.

Bennett said he was disclosing the government's endorsement now because of the time factor. U.S. President Jimmy Carter has promised a decision on an oil pipeline by December and Canada's National Energy Board is to hold hearings in October.

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said the all-land route was one of four alternatives being considered.

SO THEY'VE DONE SOMETHING ABOUT EXPLODING BOTTLES; WHEN WILL THEY DO SOMETHING ABOUT EXPLODING PRICES?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Until last week, Jim Dillon was a struggling artist who drove a bus to pay his bills.

But now the bus ride is over for the 36-year-old North Vancouver resident. He's still an artist, but he no longer has to struggle because he was presented Thursday with a Loto Canada cheque for $1 million.

Dillon was one of six winner's in last Friday's draw.

"I've only bought about a half dozen tickets before," said Dillon.

"I would also like to take a little sailing trip and I want to establish myself as an artist."

Dillon quit his job as a bus driver Monday.

Verigin denies torch order

NELSON (CP) — Orthodox Doukhobor leader John J. Verigin denied Thursday that he has the power to place a curse on anyone nor has he ever told anyone to burn buildings or commit any acts of violence.

Verigin repeated the statements during his two-hour testimony at his county court trial in this southeastern British Columbia community on three charges of conspiracy to commit arson.

"I say before people and before God, never have I ever in my lifetime counselled or even suggested burning or bombing — that would be contrary . . . to what I revere in life," Verigin said.

"Never have I been with them for their stated purpose," Verigin replied firmly when questioned about statements by several acknowledged Sons of Freedom Doukhobors who testified that Verigin ordered them to burn various buildings.

Asked by his lawyer Harry Rankin, if he has the power to curse people, he replied: "Good God, no; I am an ordinary human being with no supernatural powers . . . these statements by fanatics . . . take me back to the dark ages."

Freedomites who testified for the Crown said that Verigin had threatened them with a seven-generation curse if they did not carry out his orders.

"In folklore among peasant people it is a common expression 'You be cursed,' when one is angry," Verigin said.

"In Doukhobor mythology, the only reference to a curse is made if you do something wrong against God's will, God's wrath will be upon you — following the principle of you will reap what you will sow."

Crown counsel Dennis Overend of Vernon asked Verigin about Freedomites who testified against him, and who said they consider him their leader.

"I have never accepted their regard in that sense," Verigin replied. "I do not want to associate with anyone who commits acts of violence."

Verigin testified that he had a drinking problem, but

Ferry Corp. won't discipline Alberni's captain for error

The man at the helm of the Queen of Alberni when it went aground in Active Pass won't be disciplined despite the fact both B.C. Ferries and the Ministry of Transport say he made an error in judgment.

B.C. Ferries general manager Charles Gallagher said the error by veteran Captain Al Bahry did not involve negligence.

The Queen of Alberni went aground on Collinson Reef in Active Pass at 7:10 on Aug. 9. Millions of dollars of damage was done to the ferry and vehicles on board and 96 passengers and 22 crew were forced to evacuate.

Gallagher said that Bahry anticipated that steering a normal course might cause his vessel to be hampered by the Queen of Tswwassen, entering the pass from the other end.

"He steered deeper into Georgeson Bay than is customary and the strong tidal flow he encountered when steering from port to exit the bay then contributed to the Queen of Alberni being set down on the reef," said Gallagher.

He said that Bahry had made at least 8,000 sailings through Active Pass and had been thoroughly familiarized with the vessel.

It was Bahry's second trip as master of the Alberni.

The report by the ferry corporation was in accord with a Ministry of Transport report released earlier Thursday which also found that Bahry made an error of judgment but it did not amount to negligence.

The MoT report also said that small fishing vessels in the pass were not a factor in the grounding.

Nevertheless, the MoT is concerned with the safety hazard caused by the small boats.

Federal minister of state for marine matters, J. Robert Howie has asked the Coast Guard to meet with all interested parties to discuss traffic in Active Pass.

Steve Rybak, regional manager of public affairs for Transport Canada, said Thursday that one meeting on the issue has already been held and another is being planned.

He said the meeting was attended by representatives from the coast guard, the RCMP, fisheries and the B.C. Ferry Corp.

Rybak said the first meeting, held in late August, was aimed at narrowing down the options — deciding who can regulate what and how regulations can be enforced.

The second meeting will be devoted to coming up with a realistic proposal for a course of action, he said, and the proposal will then be submitted to various groups, including boaters, for comment.

Booze use increases by 8.9%

OTTAWA (CP) — The average Canadian spent $170.90 on liquor last year, Statistics Canda reported Thursday, including $80.60 for spirits, $23.60 for wine and $66.80 for beer.

Total sales of alcohol for the year were $4.01 billion, an 8.9-per-cent increase from the previous year and 54.4 per cent higher than 1974.

Government revenue from alcoholic beverages for 1978 was $1.94-billion, a seven-per-cent increase from 1977.

This revenue figure includes not only sales and taxes but also funds from licences and permits as well as fines.

There were 1,632 liquor stores across the country. Ontario had 36 per cent, Quebec 20 per cent, British Columbia 13 per cent, Alberta 12 per cent and all other provinces less than five per cent each.

Thirty-three new liquor stores opened last year.

Mediator enters BCSC dispute

Both sides involved in the B.C. Systems Corp. contract dispute are to meet Monday morning in Vancouver with mediator R.J. Phillips in an effort to work out a settlement.

Corporation spokesman Ross Cameron said today five days have been set aside for the talks and management is prepared to meet over that period.

The 360 employees, members of the B.C. Government Employees Union, took a strike vote in Victoria Wednesday and in Vancouver Thursday.

Results of the vote will be released Monday, BCGEU spokesman Robbie Robinson said today.

Meanwhile, talks are continuing in an effort to avert a strike Monday by B.C. Building Corp. employees.

Negotiations resumed Thursday the day after the BCGEU filed 72-hour strike notice on behalf of the 1,150 employees.

Both sides in the dispute are observing a news blackout on the talks.

Both the BCBC and the B.C. Systems Corp. disputes centre around management proposals to remove provisions from existing contracts as well as a wage offer lower than that gained by 40,000 BCGEU employees in a tentative agreement now being voted on.

Talks are also continuing in Vancouver in an effort to reach a settlement in the ferry dispute.

The Weather

Weather map unavailable today

Skies were clear over much of the province last night under a ridge of high pressure. A weak frontal system remains across the Alaska panhandle which will move southwards today giving some rain to the north coast. This system will continue southwards giving a few showers to the central interior today and to the south coast by late Saturday. Cooler air behind this system will bring to an end the current spell of warm sunny weather.

Banks 'dodging taxes'

OTTAWA (CP) — NDP finance critic Bob Rae says the big banks are using a tax loophole to lower their rate of tax to below that paid by the average worker.

Rae said the giant Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce paid no tax at all in the second quarter of this year, despite profits of $39 million.

He said the Royal Bank of Canada paid tax of only $1.7 million on profits of $57.7 million in the third quarter, a tax rate of less than three per cent.

Rae said all the chartered banks combined paid taxes of a little more than $30 million on profits of $291 million in the third quarter.

That is a tax rate of only 10.4 per cent or a lower rate than that paid by a single man with no dependents earning $180 a week.

He said there was little talk about plugging the tax loopholes.

One loophole Rae referred to was the use of term preferred shares and income debentures as a type of collateral by companies borrowing from the banks.

The earnings on the debentures and shares, which are paid to the banks, are not taxable.

Former finance minister Jean Chretien closed the loophole Nov. 16, 1978 — date of his budget — saying it was costing federal and provincial governments $500 million a year in lost tax revenues.

Although the budget was never passed, Conservative Finance Minister John Crosbie has said he will ask for quick passage of the tax measures in the new Parliament this fall.

Ev McCrimmon, spokesman for the Commerce, said the bank paid lower taxes this year not only because of the use of debentures and term preferred shares. He said the bank had higher operating costs and narrower "spreads" between the rates charged for loans and for deposits.

A spokesman at the Canadian Bankers' Association, a lobby group for the banks, made the same point.

Rae said the NDP plans to make an issue of the tax loophole.

Broken rod blamed for AirWest crash

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the crash of an AirWest Twin Otter plane in Coal Harbor here last September which resulted in 11 deaths found today that the plane crashed because of failure of a control rod in the left wing flap system.

Dave Woolgar, foreman of the five-member jury, said the failure of the control rod, caused by stress corrosion, had made the aircraft uncontrollable when it plunged into the harbor.

The jury said that the federal transport ministry should place greater emphasis on accident prevention and made six recommendations, among them that passengers on all commercial flights receive instructions in all emergency safety procedures.

The jury proposed that backup systems for flap control be designed and made mandator in all Twin Otter aircraft, and that all other systems in the aircraft which could result in loss of control should be examined closely.

All directly-involved parties, including manufacturers, the transport department and operating airlines, should give top priority to immediate investigation of all air crashes to determine their cause, the jury said.

Such investigations should be followed by prompt, corrective action.

The jury also said that the transport department should exercise better control of aircraft manufacturers' product modifications.

De Havilland was not directly referred to in the jury's decision.

Acid rain nibbles at Port Moody

PORT MOODY (CP) — Cars are rusting at an accelerated rate. Eavetroughs are disintegrating rapidly and corroding nails are causing roof shingles to drop. A film of yellow powdery gunk settles on cars at night.

Homeowners in parts of this industrial community at the head of Burrard Inlet, about 25 kilometres east of Vancouver, say acid rain — a mixture of sulphur dioxide and water vapor becoming mild sulphuric acid — is eating roofs, and roofing firms back them up.

Officials say a visibility problem exists in some areas, but add that refineries and mills are cleaning up their act.

The most vocal residents are those in College Park, a high-priced suburb overlooking a thermal electricity plant, several oil refineries, a cedar mill and Pacific Coast Terminals which handles millions of tons of sulphur each year.

"If one doesn't get you, another will," said one resident.

However, one official said people living in a marine environment can expect erosion and rust.

2 cabinet ministers face damage suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two British Columbia cabinet ministers are being taken to court to stop the hunting of caribou and moose in Spatsizi Plateau Wilderness Park, 320 kilometres north of Smithers in central B.C.

Jim Wright of Twelka is seeking unspecified damages against Environment Minister Rafe Mair and Parks Minister Jim Chabot.

A claim submitted in B.C. Supreme Court says that the ministers were given the responsibility to protect caribou and moose herds by cabinet order on Dec. 3, 1975, and had breached that responsibility by permitting hunting in the 1.67-million-acre park.

It asks for a declaration that the ministers "are under duty to preserve for the benefit of the public of this province the wildlife species located within the boundaries of the Spatsizi Plateau Wilderness Park and that the issuance of hunting permits for moose and caribou is breach of this duty."

Wright, who is described as a wildlife photographer, said reports on the park prepared by biologists call for an end to hunting there because there are no surplusses of moose or caribou.

Nimpkish band prefers pool over new hospital

ALERT BAY (CP) — The Nimpkish Indian band would rather have a swimming pool than a new $1.5-million 15-bed hospital to replace the aging St. George's Hospital, a former federal public health nurse said Thursday.

Vera Robinson, who now works for the band as a family counsellor, said the band feels the money could be used more effectively.

"It could be used in preventitive health and to improve living conditions," she said.

"I expect there will be a big move to have the old hospital upgraded. It should be good for at least another 15 years."

The new hospital was announced in late August by provincial Health Minister Bob McClelland on the basis of a report done for him by an Anglican priest who did not meet formally with the band.

Federal Health Minister David Crombie, meeting with the band Tuesday, said no federal funds would be available for the hospital until the band had approved the plans.

667 forced out by dam project

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says 667 people will be flooded out of their homes if B.C. Hydro goes ahead with construction of new dams on the Peace and Liard Rivers.

The newspaper said Thursday it had obtained a confidential report which says the flooding would result in the loss of the most scenic and challenging portion of the Liard River for wilderness canoeing and three or four established or proposed parks.

Two against all odds

The two heavy-weights in Canada's tag-team wrestling match against inflation and a huge current account deficit are making pre-bout noises in much the same vein as Muhamed Ali.

Finance Minister John Crosbie warned Canadians this week that "Mr. Nice Guy is out." The president of the Treasury Board, Sinclair Stevens, told the financial administrators of the federal public service that everyone must realize "there are new boys running the show."

Former prime minister Pierre Trudeau once said that to bring the economy back under control, Canadians had to lower their expectations. Although the Tory cabinet ministers' rhetoric is different, their intent is much the same.

Nevertheless, they must translate that new rhetoric into the results that escaped the Liberal administration. If they don't, it's doubtful a wholesale auction of Canada in a few years' time would raise enough dollars to payoff the country's debts.

Crosbie and Stevens face formidable adversaries. By the end of the current fiscal year (March 31) the most optimistic prediction puts Canada's spending deficit at $11.3 billion. If a family spends more than it earns, it has to borrow and repay the loan with interest or lose the furniture.

To cover the deficit, Canada borrows on the international money markets. The debt is added to what has been borrowed in the past to cover previous spending deficits.

The total national debt now stands at a staggering $50 billion. In the first four months of this year, the interest payments on the government's debt amounted to about $2.5 billion. And like everything else, the interest payments are going up. Total interest will be about $1.6 billion more than last year. The Clark government had to increase its spending ceiling three per cent this year to $52.6 billion to cover the higher interest rate.

Canada has spent itself into an economic quagmire. Because the country has lived too long on the graces of a good credit rating, Stevens now has to wrestle as tough as he talks. It's clear the national economy won't grow fast enough to absorb a debt which at present spending rates will reach $100 billion by 1983.

Stevens must do as he says and bring government expenditures more in line with revenue. And while he is attempting to make the civil service more efficient, Canadians as a whole will have to put up with fewer government services and selected tax increases.

Since the average Canadian is in part responsible for the government debt, even if he had little say in its creation, he now has little choice but to help pay for it. He should demand from his elected officials a balanced budget as soon as is practically possible.

Crosbie is faced with trying to control inflation without creating a recession and more unemployment. He's right about one thing. Recent history has shown that we can't spend our way out of an economic downturn with massive tax cuts and the creation of huge government work projects.

Given the current account deficit, money spent on such projects has to be financed and paid back with interest. And the jobs created are only temporary; when the work is completed, more money has to be borrowed at high interest rates to funds still more uneconomic project.

As Crosbie climbs into the ring, he knows that the major reason to fight inflation is the fact it doesn't affect everyone equally. People in the lower income brackets — the 20 per cent of Canadian families below the poverty level, the non-union workers, the old age pensioners, the people on social assistance — are hit the hardest.

Everyone needs shelter, food, clothing and some energy. But people on low and fixed incomes see a greater percentage of their disposable income on such staples as inflation soars skyward. They don't fuel inflation. They are consumed by it.

To encourage conservation, the price of Canadian oil must rise and some of the windfall profits used to pay the country's debt. But the poor need to be sheltered from escalating heating costs.

It's estimated the cost of building materials is increasing 1.5 per cent a month, mainly because of foreign demand. Interest rates are also rising. This is not the time to introduce an across the board mortgage deductibility plan. At most, the government should make available mortgage incentives to those who can demonstrate need.

Common economic wisdom says inflation is a combination of psychology and demand. Crosbie must try to curb demand, both for government services and consumer items purchased only by people in higher income brackets. The same wisdom says stabilizing demand will stablize prices. This should also be good psychological therapy.

Good luck to both Crosbie and Stevens.

Memories of a crisis past

WASHINGTON — As diplomatic tensions grow over the Soviet presence in Cuba and the feared creation of a nuclear-equipped island "fortress," Americans are reviewing the lessons of the 1962 missile crisis — the world's closest-ever brush with atomic extinction.

Even though the chilling drama is unlikely to repeat itself, there are a few disturbing parallels. Both were preceded by an apparent U.S. intelligence breakdown, and both set off a wave of American militaristic feeling.

In the latest case, as in 1962, the Soviets first boldly denied an incursion, and then insisted they were only concerned about he defence of Cuba against U.S. imperialism.

Yet there is one important difference: in 1962, the Soviet Union was clearly a second-place nuclear power. Today, the balance is roughly equal.

Desperate gamble

Seventeen years ago in October, to use Nikita Khruschev's memorable phrase, "the smell of burning hung in the air." In the privacy of the oval office, President John Kennedy confided to his brother that he was preoccupied with the "death of the children of this country."

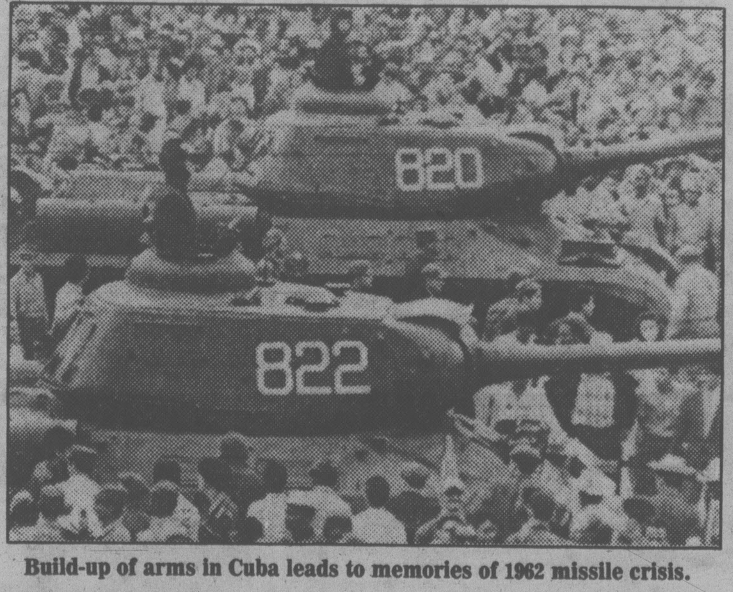
In staring down the Soviet Union, which was installing its missiles only 90 miles from U.S. shores, Kennedy indulged in brinkmanship of the most dramatic (and some say, foolhardy) kind. For 13 harrowing days, the world watched the unfolding of a desperate American gamble.

Would the Soviet ships steaming toward Cuba turn back in the face of the U.S. blockade? And later, how would the Kremlin react to a 24-hour ultimatum to dismantle the missile sites?

As Dean Rusk said at the time: "We looked into the mouth of the cannon; the Russians flinched."

The relatively low-key nature of the U.S.-Soviet talks in Cuba in recent days suggests that President Carter is not about to start cranking up the cannons.

At the same time, U.S. officials are saying that the Soviet presence in Cuba in 1979, with a combat brigade, sophisticated aircraft and perhaps even nuclear submarines, does not compare with the 1962 threat.



Build-up of arms in Cuba leads to memories of 1962 missile crisis.

The implication is clear: the U.S. has no desire to return to the precipice of October, 1962, as heady as that victory may have been.

The "thirteen days," which historians now tell us was partly a Kremlin maneuver to test President Kennedy's will, began on Oct. 16. Incredibly, as late as Sept. 19 of that year, U.S. intelligence was blind to Soviet intentions in Cuba.

President Kennedy, who realized he would face impeachhment if he refused to act, was torn between two options. The more hawkish cabinet members and congressmen pressed for an invasion, a "surgical strike" against the missile bases.

Others, like U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, urged compromise. He favored a tit-for-tat deal in which the U.S. would pull its missiles out of Turkey and Italy and withdraw the marines from Guantanamo Bay, a U.S. base in Cuba.

Kennedy saw major flaws in both these extremes, and decided instead on a high-seas blockade, a barricade of ships stretching for 500 miles. This was meant to show American force, while giving the Soviets an avenue of retreat. "I am not going to push the Russians an inch behond what is necessary," he said privately.

The blockade worked. A flotilla of Soviet ships escorted by combat submarines turned back on Oct. 24. But the drama had only begun.

The next day, a fresh batch of U.S. reconnaissance plane photos showed that Soviet personnel in Cuba had accelerated the pace of work at the missile sites, and that modern Ilyushin bombers were being uncrated and assembled.

It was later calculated that Soviet nuclear firepower in Cuba could have wiped out most U.S. population centres, parts of Canada, and much of South America.

Kennedy stepped up the U-2 flights and the following day, a Friday, he instructed the state department to prepare a crash contingency plan for setting up a Cuban civilian government after an invasion.

The U.S. military was placed on full alert, with fully-loaded B-52 bombers in the air.

The gun was cocked, but communication between Washington and Moscow continued. In the early evening of Oct. 26, Kennedy received a long, rambling letter from Khruschev which suggested that the Soviet premier was feeling the strain.

As Robert Kennedy relates in his book Thirteen Days, the letter was "long and emotional," highly personal and somewhat rambling. The bottom line offered great hope: The Kremlin was ready to pull out its missiles if the U.S. would promise not to invade Cuba.

But once again, U.S. optimism was dashed. A second letter came quickly on the heels of the first. Although signed by Khruschev, it was cold and formal, demanding that the Americans yank their missiles out of Turkey. It was apparent that the Kremlin hard-liners had taken charge.

Meanwhile came the shattering news that an American U-2 pilot had been shot down over Cuba and killed.

It was the bleakest moment of the 13 days. The U.S. would have to retaliate. "There was the feeling," Robert Kennedy wrote, "that the noose was tightening on all of us, on Americans, on the world, on mankind, and that the bridges to escape were crumbling."

Unique ploy

The president confided to his brother that a military confrontation seemed likely, and that the daring gamble had failed.

It was then that the younger Kennedy struck on a unique diplomatic ploy. Why, he asked, don't we simply ignore the second Kremlin letter, and respond favorably to the first communication from Khruschev, with its conciliatory tone?

This done, he then met with the Soviet ambassador in Washington and delivered an ultimatum: Begin dismantling the missiles within 24 hours, or prepare for an American air strike in Cuba, with all that entailed.

In time, he added, the U.S. would remove its missiles from Turkey. This would be final offer.

The next morning, Sunday, Oct. 28, the White House received an urgent communique from Khruschev. The Kremlin would submit to the U.S. terms. The missile bases would be dismantled under United Nations supervision, and the bombers removed.

The world stepped back from the precipice.

Homes shaken

One becomes truly disgusted when one's home is literally shaken underneath him/her by inconsiderate developers. Such is the case on the corner of Cook and Fairfield. Early in the morning front end loaders or bulldozers break the normal patterns of life by creating noise levels far above those of the morning street traffic. In fact, all day long the revving of diesel engines permeates every house around. A fine layer of dust covers trees, clothing on lines, the grass and even people walking by. The windows have become grey and dirty; cars equally so.

One really wonders if old common law "rights" still exist. Nuisance at this level truly decreases — makes impossible — the enjoyment of one's dwelling space. What of the much-acclaimed pollution control ideology? Why does no one care any more even when the decibel level inside their own homes climbs with each movement of some (ear-plugged) workman's arm?

The residents have lost their voice, but I speak. The condominium-crazed society gives one no rest.

A letter arrives in the mail. The tenant opens it. A real estate company has written to inform him/her that 30 feet of the back yard will be reduced to dust or excavated. There is no apology for the sudden change in the very area one has paid rent to enjoy. There is no decrease or rebate in rent similar to the reduction of the land one enjoyed only a week before. Opportunity was given the tenants to move before the house began shaking and the noise began to make it unbearable to inhabit during daylight hours.

One can be sure the unfair situation in which some residents of the Cook/Fairfield area find themselves is but a commonplace occurence and one can expect little assistance from the system which supports it. — M. Wright, 1115 Collinson Street.

Partial horror

Concern over the plight of "boat people" has become fashionable, as compared to the thousands of children who die from hunger every day in backward countries while unsaleable food is destroyed. This may be due in part to the seeming alleviation of the refugee problem being at hand, while according to conventional political mythology no solution to starvation is in sight. In fact, about 90 per cent of the population would like to find refuge from this world system of class ownership of the means of life and production for traffic/profit. The extreme victims are the order of the day.

The ethnic Chinese of Vietnam were doing fairly well in the struggle up the acquisition ladder, until the Vietnamese disagreement with mainland China designated them as an internal menace to the new state capitalist rulers. Offshore oil finds and other rich loot have been the bone of contention between the former allies.

The Viet authorities have tried to solve two problems while exporting the undesireable human commodities, the second being to replenish their depleted treasury in the form of a gold ransom from each fleeing family. Nice to have, after the expensive Cambodian military campaign to help provide the travelling salesmen of their new Russian sponsors with a foot into the Asian doorway to customers and raw materials.

Wherever they turned, the refugees would collide with otherwise nice people, conditioned by the planned scarcity of world capitalism into predaceous behavior. If it wasn't unscrupulous peddlers of leaky boats, it was pirates at sea. (Some of the pirates respectably exact surplus value from wage-slaves via small businesses on shore, while pillaging other entrepreneurs offshore).

Then there are the Southeast Asian nations who care not to see the delicate exploitative-racist balance of their social climes disrupted by the sudden influx of these refugees. So many who had not drowned were towed to sea, to try again.

Imagine the welcome to places like Britain, the U.S. and Canada where these desperate people were offered "homes and jobs," or as the spider said to the fly, "come into my parlor." Yes, there are apartments for rent, houses with mortgages on the never-never plan, employers with itchy palms, and racism. They have survived total horror to embrace the partial kind. None of which is necessary, since the means exists to provide happiness for all humanity, if it is owned by all and organised in their interests. The only obstacle is unawareness. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Avenue.

Doublespeak

I am gravely disturbed by the Orwellian doublespeak used by Douglas Fisher in his three part series on Canada and its natives (Times, Sept. 4-6) where an oppressed minority are themselves accused of racism for simply asking the rest of us for those "privileges" which the rest of us take for granted. As a media superstar, it seems to me that Mr. Fisher bears a great obligation for responsible journalism. Instead, in this instance, he has pandered to the same dark forces in our country who have reacted so irrationally to the agony of the Boat People. He attacks our native leaders and their objectives in the most inflammatory terms. He talks about the birth rate statistics in exactly the same way the bigots have been talking about "breeding" and the Vietnam refugees on the radio hot-line shows.

Yet when one hears the views of great native leaders like George Erasmus, Noel Starblanket or Harold Cardinal, or reads a book like Heather Robertson's Reservations are for Indians, what other attitude can non-native Canadians adopt but one of contrition and then atonement no matter what the cost? Harold Cardinal puts it most eloquently in the final chapter of his The Rebirth of Canada's Indians; "There are times when despair is being an Indian in Canada."

Mr. Fisher is undoubtedly a fine journalist — one of our best and generally a very compassionate man. Yet his stand on this issue seems to prove the truth of the old saying: "You can't take the boy out of the man". In his case, the boyhood and young manhood was, I believe, spent in that burned over district of Northern Ontario between Thunder Bay and Kenora where irrational prejudice against our native peoples has been endemic for generations. — James N. Knechtel, 2067 Lorne Terrace.

Biased diatribe

So Helen Lawrenson doesn't like Margaret Thatcher. But is that any reason why the readers of the Weekend Magazine (Sept. 1) should be subjected to a shamelessly biased diatribe which sneered at all aspects of that lady's politics, background, personality and appearance?

Since I'm decidedly left-wing politically, I never thought I'd find myself defending Maggie Thatcher. I've just returned from a year in Britain, however, where I've seen and heard a great deal of her on the "telly". I did not find her voice "plummy" or particularly "hoity-toity", and I felt that her smile was generally rather pleasant, and quite unlike a "mechanical facial tic." A rather attractive person, in fact, although one would hardly gather this from the two unflattering pictures in Weekend.

I find it rather admirable that the daughter of a seamstress and a grocer should, in a class-conscious and male-dominated society, work her way through Oxford, through bar examinations, and through gruelling years of opposition before finally becoming prime minister. Ms. Lawrenson, however, remains unimpressed; all this effort is simply an illustration of Mrs. Thatcher's "devouring ambition."

But the really cheap shot, I feel, is the comparison of Margaret Thatcher to Adolph Hitler. Certainly, nothing she has done in her very short term of office merits the drawing of this parallel, which reminds me of the Communist-smear tactics which are so often used against socialist political leaders.

Please, let's have a little more objective journalism in future! — Susan Gage, 3970 Olympic View Drive.

Proof needed

The PetroCan controversy is not going to be resolved logically by a feverish, non-confidence vote from the opposition the minute the Commons sits in October.

What is needed is cold proof from our federal government that PetroCan is not a profitable government corporation for Canada's taxpayers to subsidize — or it is a profitable government corporation for Canada's taxpayers to subsidize. — J. Wickstrom, 3264 Shelley Street.

A profile . . . or character assassination?

JOAN SUTTON
Toronto Star

I just had a few days away from the daily deadline and I spent them with my nose in a magazine or a book.

My first reading choice — Helen Lawrenson's profile of Margaret Thatcher in Weekend magazine — didn't amuse, relax or inform me. But it certainly made me angry.

I met Helen Lawrenson in Toronto last year, and I liked her. Over 70, she is marvellously energetic, deliciously funny and outrageously candid.

Lawrenson is an experienced and well-known journalist, but before anyone takes her vicious profile of Mrs. Thatcher too seriously, they should know something more about its author. They should also understand that the Weekend article was not an interview. The piece has to be read carefully before that becomes apparent, but nowhere in it is there a direct quote from Mrs. Thatcher; nowhere in it is there an account of an actual meeting between Lawrenson and the British prime minister.

And I presume that no one bothered to call Mrs. T to ask whether she would care to comment about what had been written about her.

Instead, we are presented with Helen Lawrenson's impressions of the prime minister; impressions fed by other articles, by Mrs. Thatcher's appearances on television, in Parliament, in public, by her speeches and by gossip.

The result is a smart-assed, snide and bitchy account that twists Margaret Thatcher's character, motives and values. A friend who read it said, "That's not a profile, it's a character assassination."

Although the article purports to tell us what Mrs. Thatcher is really like, we learn far more about Helen Lawrenson. Nothing could make this article fair, but the reader could have been forewarned. He could have been told, up front, something about the writer.

I quote from Helen Lawrenson's own autobiography, Whistling Girl. "Of any pronouncement, I ask myself: 'Who says it?' What could be a possible motive?"

Lawrenson was an active member of the American Communist party for many years. She describes herself as a Marxist, disenchanted with the Soviet Union and communism, not because there is anything wrong with its theory but because of what people have done with it. She was a member of New York cafe society in the '20s and '30s, a founder of the club, Cafe Society, where Billie Holiday got her start, and she was an editor of Vanity Fair. She was, and still is, a beauty, and was mistress to both Bernard Baruch and Conde Nast.

I point this out not to be judgmental. As I said earlier, I liked Helen Lawrenson and I'm sure she'd be much more fun than Margaret Thatcher as a dinner companion. But can we be surprised that she scorns Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative views, that she makes fun of Mrs. Thatcher's appearance, that she heaps sophisticated ridicule on the PM's values?

The most ironic comment in the article is Lawrenson's note that Mrs. Thatcher has failed to appoint many women. Thatcher is no feminist, never has pretended to be, but when Lawrenson dipped her pen into this poisoned ink, sisterhood wasn't very much on her mind either.

Band-tailed pigeons

This is beginning to look like one of those autumns when the Band-tailed Pigeons and I get to know each other a little better. Or should I say it's one of those autumns when I get to know the Band-tailed Pigeons a little better; whether they get to know me any better is up to them.

Usually, Band-tailed Pigeons are birds that seem to exist far out on the fringe of my birding experience. It's not that they're rare — far from it; Band-tailed Pigeons, while not common, are certainly a familiar part of the bird scene of southern Vancouver Island. But, to me at any rate, they're notoriously reserved cusses, always managing to keep as much distance between me and them as is consistent with just being able to see them.

Most of the time, I see them high up, hurrying along in small, scattered parties, heading on some errand of import only to Band-tailed Pigeons. Sometimes I hear the startling crack of their wings as a party suddenly abandons the top of a Douglas Fir, where their color and quiet habit has made them all but invisible. Or other times, mostly on quiet spring mornings, I hear their gentle, almost ventriloquial cooing — so often mistaken for the hoots of owls — as courting pairs announce that their intentions are purely "honorable."

But, as for getting a good look at Band-tailed Pigeons, those occasions are reserved for autumns like the one we seem about to enjoy. What's so different about this autumn? Acorns, my friend! Acorns, those big, meaty nuts produced in thousands by our beloved Garry Oaks; the things from which great oaks grow.

The funny thing about Garry Oaks and their acorns — and I suppose this is true of most oaks — is that not every autumn is an acorn autumn. Some years, I guess because of the growing conditions during the summer, the oaks produce few if any acorns. These low years may also be the result of good acorn years; producing a heavy crop of nuts every three or four years may be all a healthy oak is up to.

Whatever the reason, this looks like a good acorn year. A glance at any oak is all you need to confirm that. At the end of every branch and the centre of every bunch of leaves is a cluster of shiny yellow-green fruit, which — given a few weeks of autumn sun — will soon become rich brown acorns.

I've been watching the gradual change for a couple of weeks now as the acorns expand and ripen, and I have not been alone in my interest; the Band-tails have been watching too.

They appeared about the end of August — just when the acorns were becoming obvious. At first their usual shyness kept them high in the firs but now they're making frequent sorties into the oaks, checking the condition of the crop.

So far, I've seen no evidence of harvesting, but every day — sometimes several times a day — a party of Band-tails will drop into my favorite oak and parade along its branches inspecting the acorns. Then, and only then, do I get a chance to get a good look at these big, wild cousins of our domestic pigeon.

And they're a sight to see close up, with their blue-gray business suits and bright yellow accessories — eyes, beak, and feet and legs — offset with snapping white collars.

Now, with their normal wariness submerged by their love of acorns, the Band-tails and I can see eye-to-eye, they in their oak and me in my kitchen, and renew our friendship of three years ago — which, by the way, was in good acorn year too.

Ottawa's hidden spending

LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — In a cabinet full of low profiles, Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens stands out like a huckster among morticians. With his new miracle-potion system of sector-by-sector "spending envelopes," declares the ebullient Stevens, the days of runaway government spending are ended.

Over at the Finance Department, John Crosbie has been cutting a rather more dour figure. His worry is a budget deficit of more than $11 billion, and he is well aware that Stevens' envelopes will barely dent its decimal points.

Election rhetoric notwithstanding, the cost of government programs has had little to do with the rising deficit. Since 1974, the last time Ottawa's accounts showed a surplus, no costly new spending programs have been launched.

A series of major tax cut initiatives have been, though — from selective sales tax reductions to investment tax credits to interest and dividend deductions.

Last spring, in its Economic Review, the Finance Department noted that the 1978 revenue loss from tax cuts introduced since 1974 amounted to half of the 1978 deficit. (Reduced revenues resulting from the weak economy presumably accounted for most of the rest.)

Joe Clark's campaign promises — virtually all of them tax cuts of one form or another — won him the label "the seven billion dollar man," and Crosbie has been awkwardly trying to back off from them ever since the day the government changed.

STEVENS . . . 'propounding myths'

Yet Stevens continues to propound the myth that it is government's direct spending rather than its tax expenditures (as selective tax cuts are known) that are responsible for the deficit. The only time he has acknowledged the role of such tax measures was in a mid-summer joint statement with the minister of finance.

There is nothing wrong with the use of tax expenditures, said the statement. "Sometimes the tax system is the most efficient and effective means of delivering a program."

But that being the case, it observed, "in evaluating government spending, some account should be taken of tax expenditures as well as direct outlays."

Indeed it should.

In "The Hidden Welfare System Revisited," a report released earlier this year, the National Council of Welfare compared the increase in Ottawa's direct spending with its tax spending between 1975 and 1976 (the latest year for which tax data was available). It found an increase of 17.9 per cent for tax expenditures, compared to 10.4 per cent for direct outlays.

Some months ago, the Business Council on National Issues put forward its assessment of how Parliament's conduct of the nation's business could be improved. Among its recommendations was that Canada adopt the U.S. practice of presenting a tax expenditure as well as a direct expenditure budget each year.

At the same time that the Business Council was formulating its recommendations, the Lambert Royal Commission was putting the finishing touches to its tome on government financial management.

Not one of its 165 recommendations took any cognizance whatsoever of tax expenditures.

It is possible to argue in the Commission's defence — though not very convincingly in my view — that its terms of reference were so narrowly defined as to confine it to the mechanics of direct outlays only.

Certainly the Auditor-General's financial watchdog responsibility is limited to direct expenditures. Still, I wish he would stop saying — as in his recent speech to the Canadian Institute of Public Administration — that we are "well on the way to restoring full and effective control of the public purse."

We aren't, and we won't be until tax expenditures are brought out of the closet and subjected to the same scrutiny as direct spending.

Completely ignoring the roughly one dollar in four of government spending which passes through the tax system, Clark, in a post-Jasper statement, eulogized the new spending envelope elixir as "a means to ensure that the government is clearly accountable to the public for the decisions taken on very dollar of public expenditure."

Cost figures for each of the multitude of selective tax-break provisions of the Income tax Act have been calculated by the Department of Finance, and are available for release in conjunction with the November budget.

If no such accounting appears this fall, the reason for its absence, I am told, could just be a last-minute mechanical problem. But if it fails to surface again with next year's budget, that will mean its publication has been blocked for political reasons.

LONDON — It is no longer true that traffic flows round London's Trafalgar Square with all the headlong impetuousness of frozen lard flowing uphill. All the same, my car was actually stationary when the one behind ran into the back of it; so it was with a feeling of strong righteous indignation that I got out to inspect the (fortunately minimal) damage. "Sorry, darling!" said the driver of the car. "DON'T call me darling when you've just run into my car, you stupid nit," said I. He got back into his car with a shrug; women, you could just see him thinking, there's no pleasing them.

I don't believe men have the faintest idea why their ghastly gallant little gestures can make women so angry they could choke. I knew a husband who forgot his wife's birthday and turned up hopefully with an orchid at eight in the evening, thinking all would be well; he was truly amazed when his wife, who would have preferred a real present at breakfast, simply burst into tears. I know a public relations officer who bungled things for a friend of mine in such a way that she spent the whole of the Easter weekend prostrated with inoculations and vaccinations, only to be told that the longed-for trip to Pakistan was off; the man simply couldn't understand why she was so cross when he offered to take her out to a 'champagne lunch' to make up.

And I once had a row with an editor about a really serious work issue, and whether a particular outsider should or should not be allowed to muck about with my articles; I'm quite sure the man would have been absolutely astounded to learn that I gave his big bunch of red roses to the daily cleaner within minutes of their arrival.

It is not that we don't like courtesies. It is not that we want everything on a tough, no-nonsense, man-to-man basis, no frills, no social oil — when, in heaven's name, did two men ever do business like that? What makes us hopping mad is the assumption that we are so feeble-minded that the red roses will do instead of a sensible arrangement about the work; that we can be flattered out of suing a man who ought to be sued; that the poor little addlepated lady will be so overcome with all the gallantry that she won't even see what the big, crafty men are up to. Like hell she won't; she'll just be crosser than a wet cat that you thought she was so easily bamboozled.

By all means send me an orchid — to cement a successful deal; no better or worse than pouring a celebratory Scotch for a businessman. Certainly say something nice about what I'm wearing — when things are going right; but don't think saying "that's a nice frock" is a substitute in the very slightest degree for saying "You did a good job." And do not think, if you bring home a bunch of flowers, that looking at them makes up in any way for sitting alone looking at the clock, while you spent five hours drinking with your mates and didn't even telephone.

It's an odd thing, but I've noticed that it's often the men who fuss around most with the olde-worlde gestures, who are in fact the quickest to put women down, in anything that really matters. "Now, we mustn't let the fair sex have all the argument their own way," say the stuffed-shirt chairmen as they cut short a female committee member. "I'm sure you wouldn't want to bother with all this rather disgusting detail," says the department head, as he leaves you out of the real decision-making. "Do let me get you a chair — a drink of water — a cushion," says the man running the meeting — effectively turning it into a Social Occasion, and you, as a woman into a superficial extra.

I've always thought the extreme women's lib position on male/female courtesies was silly; that it doesn't actually matter if the chap picks up your dropped notebook for you, pulls out a chair, lights your cigarette — goodness, I've lit men's cigarettes for them, if it comes to that. Why refuse to pour out the Board coffee, when what matters is being on the Board in the first place?

But every now and then one of these tiresome little gallantries makes me wonder if they aren't right; if it wouldn't be better to have people think you are a truculent old cow, than to think that they only have to sprinkle a few rose-petals around for you not even to notice the cess-pit into which they've just chucked you.

Serious women's libbers won't even have a door opened for them, which has always struck me as daft. I once asked a Texan lawyer (female) what was the approved position on revolving doors: let him put you into one ahead of him, and it's against your principles; but if he goes in ahead of you, you'll be doing the pushing to get him round.

"Well, you know they say a Hungarian is a man who can go in a revolving door behind you and come out in front?" said this lady. "I'm Hungarian, and I'll tell you how it's done. You go in behind him, and then give the door such a whirl he has to go round a second time. Does that answer your question?"

It does, lady, it does. Though all I really want is to go round at the same rate as the fellas — without roses, without posies, and especially without being called 'darling'.

New York

The stock market rallied sharply today, shrugging off the rapid spread of a record 13 per cent prime lending rate in the banking industry.

Many of the nation's banks raised their prime rates this morning to 13 per cent, joining New York's Chase Manhattan Bank at that record level. But the news came as no surprise to Wall Street.

London

The London stock market firmed up near the close of moderate trading today.

The Financial Times index was up .9 to 468.5.

Golds, banks and industrials advanced. Oils were steady.

L.J. BUSH

The appointment of L.J. Bush as Vice-President of Canadian International Paper Company has been announced by C.S. Flenniken, President and Chief Executive Officer. Mr. Bush joined the company in 1947 and, after holding various positions in the financial area, was appointed Comptroller in 1967. This appointment is effective immediately.

CN sells Hotel Fort Garry

WINNIPEG (CP) — The long-rumored sale of Hotel Fort Garry was confirmed Thursday with an announcement by CN Hotels that the 65-year-old landmark has been sold to Harvard Investments Ltd. of Winnipeg.

Takeover date for the 265-room hotel, officially opened Dec. 23, 1913 and situated near the junction of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers in Winnipeg, is Nov. 1. Sale price was not disclosed.

The sale was announced jointly in a news release by J. G. Cormier, CN's vice-president of public affairs and hotels, and J. D. Perrin, president of Harvard Investments Ltd.

They said the property will continue to operate as a hotel and CN is prepared to provide management assistance for up to six months.

Bell, CNCP to interconnect

OTTAWA (CP) — Bell Canada and CNCP Telecommunications are attempting to work out technical aspects of providing interconnected services to the business public, a CNCP spokesman has said.

Jim McDaniel, CNCP general sales manager, said during a government computer conference that the service will be the result of a three-year battle by CNCP to achieve interconnection with the Bell Canada network.

The federal cabinet in August rejected an appeal by Bell and other telephone companies to defer a decision by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission ordering the link-up.

McDaniel said Bell refused to meet with CNCP until after the cabinet decision, but now Bell was co-operating in a friendly and professionaal way.

McDaniel said interconnection is an evolutionary step in Canadian telecommunications and the benefits would be long-term rather than immediate.

Abacus creditors' gamble lets wounded firm survive

CALGARY (CP) — A wounded Abacus Cities Ltd., once a leader in the world of tax-shelter development companies, is struggling to get back on its feet after a vote of confidence from its unsecured creditors.

Creditors representing debts of almost $50 million turned down an opportunity to send the company into bankruptcy Thursday and voted overwhelmingly to give the struggling company another chance.

At a day-long meeting, they accepted the company's reorganization proposal, allowing Abacus to continue operating on a reduced level.

About 40 residential and commercial developments, mostly in Western Canada, ground to a halt May 11 when Abacus was forced into receivership.

President Ken Rogers, blamed by some for many of the company's troubles, told reporters after the meeting he hoped some projects could get under way by the first week of October.

"There is an awful lot of work to be done. . . . 'but I'm relieved we had a good victory today,'' he said.

Rogers said new agreements would have to be signed with many contractors before work could begin. Abacus manages developments on behalf of its 3,500 client-developers, mainly professionals and executives who gain tax benefits from their investments.

Company's receiver Thorne Riddell Inc., issued a damning report earlier Thursday, alleging incompetent management, expansion beyond financial capacity and expansion into areas in which management had limited experience.

It also said Abacus lacked sufficient working capital, kept inadequate accounts and ignored legal advice.

An Abacus balance sheet issued June 29 claimed $31.3 million more in assets than liabilities.

"We believe that surplus to be substantially overstated and probably closer to zero dollars,'' said receiver Mel Zwaig, president of Thorne iddell.

Rogers said Abacus prepared the statement assuming the company would continue to operate and benefit from the increasing value of its assets, while Thorne Riddell assumed a quick liquidation of assets.

Abacus says all creditors will be paid under its proposal, among the first secured creditors, primarily the Bank of Montreal.

Abacus blames the bank for much of its troubles, citing the bank's recent reluctance to extend credit and its move to call back loans and securities commissions in Alberta and British Columbia for delaying approval of its projects. The fall of the company also has been linked to the complex takeover of an Ontario firm last year. The legality of the move has been questioned.

The receiver's report said bankruptcy is likely even with the proposal's approval.

Under the proposal, Abacus officers are required to tender their resignations to the trustee, Thorne Riddell, but Rogers said the move is largely symbolic and few resignations will likely be accepted. The proposal also is subject to approval of the courts.

Under the guidance of Rogers and his brother Bill, Abacus grew from a modest beginning in 1970 to the largest tax-shelter company in Canada with reported assets of more than $500 million last year.

Myers sees cash crash

MONTREAL (UPC) — Vernon Myers, a financial analyst and founder of Oilweek magazine, sees gold prices soaring to $400 an ounce as the western hemisphere reels under the collapse of paper money.

Myers, who addressed about 100 financial analysts Thursday via satellite hookup from his Spokane, Wash., office, predicted the U.S. dollar will collapse before the end of 1980 as the West suffers a massive depression.

"With interest rates at 13 per cent in the United States right now, I don't know how much further we far we can go,'' Myers said. "If we can hold it there the big money storm may be another two years away, though I doubt we can hold it.''

Myers, 67, who was unable to attend the seminar in person because of a $1.8 million tax evasion conviction in Canada two years ago, said the gold rush on world markets was no longer a case of speculators hedging against inflation because major banks are running low of cash and buying bullion.

"Gold prices this time is based on a worldwide condition,'' he said. "This involves buying by central banks and when they begin to buy gold and the very big money starts to buy gold it's not a speculative market.''

Gold, which was decontrolled in the United States Dec. 1, 1974 and has climbed from about $103 an ounce in 1975 to its current value of the about $343, will continue to be a safe investment, he added, though it may experience a minor depreciation of about $15 an ounce over the next few months.

"I think any correction will be temporary anyway and I think we're in a move on gold that will take it up to $400,'' he said.

Myers, founder of the Oilweek magazine and publisher of the Myers Finance and Energy Bulletin, is well known in the financial community for his theory that inflation will end with a "bang'' as big business folds in the wake of the collapse of paper currency.

"I would think it will come any time beginning late fall up until the next 18 months and I don't think we can avoid it for more than 18 months,'' he said, adding that anything could trigger the collapse including the failure of Chrysler Corp. to be revitalized or the failure of a couple of major banks in the United States or Europe.

"The banks are in a very bad position for cash now and it would not take much to trigger this storm,'' he said. "I think you'll have a period of two or three months when things will be pretty rough, disruption of food, energy and heat supplies.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were slightly weaker in quiet trading on the Canadian bond market Thursday, as participants await the upcoming Government of Canada bond issue.

The short end of the market was unchanged. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues dropped one-eighth of a point. Corporate issues remained the same.

Day-to-day money was available at 11½ cent.

Dealers said that bond prices are moving in line with fluctuations in the U.S. bond market.

The federal government announced details of the 1979-80 Canada Savings Bond series Wednesday night. The issue, with an annual coupon of 10¼ per cent, is not expected to draw more than $1.5 billion in net cash, the Investment Dealers Association of Canada said. The coupons on outstanding Canada Savings Bond issues over the last five years have been raised to 10¼ per cent in order to prevent redemptions in these issues in exchange for the new 1979-80 series. Analysts said market participants are confused over the future course on interest rates.

Visa preparing to wage travellers-cheque battle

By FLOYD NORRIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The once-sleepy travellers-cheque industry is growing more competitive, with issuers turning to price-cutting as Visa prepares to enter a business dominated by a handful of firms.

Visa, the bank credit-card system, says the first cheques bearing its emblem will go on sale about Nov. 1. Those cheques will be issued and backed by individual banks, not by Visa itself.

Two of the Visa banks — First National Bank of Chicago and Barclay's, the big British bank — are vying to sign up sales agents nationwide, in competition with such established issuers as American Express, Citibank and Bank of America.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see cheques offered without fees," said Visa President D. W. Hock.

Travellers cheques are sold to consumers for fees ranging up to one per cent of their face value. The customer gets the security of a promised repayment if his cheques are lost or stolen and the issuer gets the use of the customer's money until the cheque is presented for payment.

That "float" is where travellers' cheque companies make their money, and the profits can be huge. While all companies closely guard their sales figures, American Express says the average float — the amount of its cheques outstanding — was $2.2 billion in the second quarter.

American Express charges banks the highest fees for selling their cheques — 33 cents for $100 face value — and therefore must persuade consumers to demand American Express cheques. Bank of America and Citibank charge only 10 cents and at least some of the new Visa banks are not levying any charges.

Those charges are standard, but the recent competition, bankers say, has involved a variety of ways to return money to banks that sell a lot of a single company's cheques. All the issuers appear to be playing that game.

One reason for the competition is that this is a good year for travellers-cheque issuers, although gasoline problems slowed sales in June and July. High interest rates mean higher profits from the float.

"We're obviously delighted, on a parochial basis, when short-term rates go up," said Michael Lively, the president of American Express' travellers cheque division.

With profits high, existing issuers have found it difficult to persuade banks not to issue Visa cheques and keep the float for themselves.

They have concentrated on warning that huge losses could be around the corner, as issuers must pay when cheques are forged. Lively said American Express paid out $50 million for forged cheques in the last three years.

Ernest Young, the head of Bank of America's cheque program, says he thinks forgery and costs of administration will make it impossible for issuers to make money on volumes of only $100 million a year or so.

The Visa program has reduced the fees it will impose on issuers for the use of its trademark, administrative expenses and advertising. Some saw this as a cost-cutting measure brought on by raised competition, but Hock says it was a sign of strength, showing Visa now expects to be selling cheques at an annual rate of $2.7 billion by the end of the year.

Hock says the Visa cheques will be sold nationally by March, when an advertising campaign will be launched.

He said 35 banks will be issuers, mea ning they keep the float and risk the forgeries.

Chrysler denies aid bid

By J. R. DUPUIS
CP Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — D. H. (Don) Lander, president of Chrysler Canada Ltd., said Thursday the company has a strong hold in the Canadian market and is not looking for the federal government to bail it out.

"It's not a bail-out," Lander told reporters gathered for the national preview of Chrysler's 1980 model line-up, which includes two new entries, the Mirada and St. Regis.

But he refused to give any details of a plan Chrysler submitted to both the federal and Ontario governments for the future development of the company.

However, he did say at a press conference later that the plan was not crucial to Chrysler Canada's continued operation.

"It's a long-range plan and has many elements of it over a long period of time."

Chrysler Canada lost $30 million last year, but still remains a strong third in the Canadian market, although its sales have slipped four per cent so far in 1979.

Lander said the slump was due to the fact that Chrysler had no standard-sized car to offer, a situation he hoped would change with the introduction of the St. Regis and improved Grand Fury.

Lander also admitted that some of the sale slump may have been caused by bad publicity from the troubles of its Detroit-based parent corporation, which lost $207 million in the second quarter alone and has sought financial aid from the U.S. government.

He also said Chrysler Corp. in Detroit has no plans to sell its interest in the Canadian subsidiary, as it has done with some of its other assets.

Lander said the outlook for new car sales in Canada for the 1980 model year is firm. He predicted that car sales for the industry in 1980 would total 970,000, including imports, with truck sales about 385,000.

"That would mean total new motor vehicles sales of more than 1.35 million units, and that would also mean the automotive industry continuing to play its very significant and influential role in Canada's over-all prosperity."

Fuel economy is emphasized in Chrysler's new models. For instance, the company claims the Cordoba-Mirada base vehicles will deliver a combined fuel economy rating of about 43 kilometres a gallon, an increase of 18 per cent over last year's models.

COURT OF REVISION for 1979 VOTERS LIST

Pursuant to Section 47 (a) (3) of the Municipal Act, the Court of Revision will sit on Monday, October 1, 1979 at 7:30 P.M. in the Council Chamber of the Municipal Hall, Saanichton, B.C., to hear all complaints and to review and correct the List of Electors, and may

(a) correct the names of electors in any way wrongly stated therein; or

(b) add the names of electors omitted from the List; or

(c) strike out the names of persons from the list who are not entitled to vote, or who are disqualified from voting; or

(d) correct any other manifest error therein and shall add to the List of Electors the name of any person who was qualified to have his name entered on the List of Electors on the thirty-first day of August, and for this purpose, an application may be accepted as duly completed under Section 35, if delivered to the Court of Revision at its first sitting.

Company reports

BP

British Petroleum reports that a 35 per cent increase in crude oil prices has boosted its profits to $1.76 billion for the first half of this year.

The company said the profits would have been even higher but for a 15 per cent increase in Britain's petroleum revenue tax and the weakness of the U.S. dollar which cost BP $1.1 billion.

The company reported better results from marketing operations in Europe, including Britain, and higher incomes from its 52 per cent share in the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio.

The group's production from North Sea oil fields averaged 478,000 barrels a day in the first six months of the year compared with 451,000 barrels a day in the same 1978 period.

Britain's Conservative government recently announced plans to sell off some of its holding in BP as part of its program to reduce state ownership of industry.

Steintron Int.

Steintron International Electronics Ltd. of Vancouver reports a decline in net earnings to $34,000 or two cents a share for the six months ending June 30, compared to $69,000 for the corresponding period in 1978.

However the company said sales jumped 16.3 per cent to $32.4 million this year from $27.9 million a year earlier.

Steintron said pressure on profit margins arising from the increased value of the Japanese yen accounted for the lower earnings.

During the last period, additional extraordinary earnings of $229,000 or 32 cents per share came from asset sales. Extraordinary earnings last year were $89,000 or 12 cents per share.

AGRICULTURAL LAND RESERVE APPEAL AND ZONING BY-LAWS

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the following proposed Agricultural Land Reserve Appeal and Zoning By-laws will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council on the matters contained therein at a PUBLIC HEARING, to be held in the COUNCIL CHAMBER of Saanich Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, on MONDAY, September 24, 1979, at 7:30 p.m.

a) AGRICULTURAL LAND RESERVE APPEAL. The Corporation of the District of Saanich intends to appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to exclude the following lands from the Agricultural Land Reserve:

"Part Lot A, Section 65, Lake District, Plan 7493" (25.37 acres off Beckwith Avenue)

This exclusion would make provision for park and residential property in line with the ultimate completion of the North Quadra Plan. (Consideration of the above was adjourned from the Public Hearing of August 27th, 1979, to this Public Hearing.)

b) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1979, No. 4350". To rezone Lot 1, Section 33, Victoria District, Plan 29873 (1010 Bristol Road) from Zone District RS-2 (detached housing) to Zone District RM-1 (low density apartment). This application is subject to a Development Permit.

c) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1979, No. 4351". To rezone Lot 3, Block 1, Section 44, Victoria District, Plan 4753, (2600 MacDonald Drive) from Zone District RS-18 (detached housing — 2,020m² min.) to Zone District RS-12 (detached housing — 930m² min.)

d) "ZONING BY-LAW, 1978, AMENDMENT BY-LAW, 1979, No. 4352". To rezone Part Section 8A as shown on 270-R except 3669 R/W, Section 8A, Lake District, Plan 270-R and Part of Lot 1, Part of Lot 2, West Part of Lot 3, and Part of West Part of Lot 4, all Section 8A, Lake District, Plan 7392 (Maltwood Museum Site and southerly 2.7 acres) from Zone District P-1 (civic institutional) and A-1 (rural) to Zone District C-2 (general commercial).

A copy of the proposed by-laws and Agricultural land Reserve Appeal may be inspected at the Municipal Hall, 770 Vernon Avenue, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday, except Statutory holidays.

Chiropractors eye opt-out

Chiropractors will discuss opting out of the B.C. medical plan when they meet in Victoria at the end of the month.

The chiropractors are dissatisfied with their fee structure and the limit placed on the number of visits paid for under the plan.

B.C. Chiropractic Association president Dr. Brian McLaughlin said the association's board is not recommending opting out but there is great dissatisfaction and five members have dropped out already.

"The fees we are getting are less than inflationary and opting out may be the only way to get an increase," McLaughlin said today.

He said the limit placed on the number of visits means that many people resort to pain-killers or suffer more pain than is necessary.

"If they can't get chiropractic care which is helping them, they may go for more expensive care which is not helping them," he says.

Under the medical plan there is a dollar limit on chiropractic care.

In 1973, senior citizens could make 20 chiropractic visits a year. As the fees have gone up, the number of visits has dropped.

Now senior citizens are able to make about 14 visits a year.

The limits are under review by the government but a spokesman in the health ministry says they have not yet come before cabinet.

McLaughlin says the chiropractors have been waiting more than a year for some word on increased visits.

If chiropractors opt out, patients would pay cash for services, recoup the allowed amount from the government and carry the burden of the difference — $3 to $4 per visit.

The chiropractors are also unhappy that they are not given access to medical X-rays.

They meet in Victoria Sept. 29.

Foreign students rejected

Foreign students are appealing a restrictive new provincial government policy denying them access to Camosun College.

College principal Lloyd Morin said today three or four students made appeals to the education ministry during the past few months.

Some successfully manage to work out arrangements with the ministry. One girl refused admission returned to her native country, reapplied and was accepted, he said.

Students on visitors visas are not allowed to enter B.C.'s 21 community colleges and public technical institutes under the new policy.

Morin said Camosun is following the ministry's directive to the letter.

An education ministry memorandum currently being circulated says the colleges and schools should not admit foreign students unless they are being sponsored through inter-governmental agreement or if they have won an academic competition or international scholarship.

Students with landed immigrant status are admitted. The rest appeal to the government or return home, he said.

The policy has been in effect for a couple of years, but the ministry is tightening restrictions because it believes the number of foreign students is rising.

Morin said Camosun doesn't keep records of foreign students who are admitted to the college.

"That information isn't relevant," he said, adding that the ministry probably gets its statistics from federal immigration.

Morin said the education ministry's stand is very clear.

It believes the B.C. public shouldn't have to contribute to the education of foreign students.

However, foreign students are allowed to enrol, no questions asked, in non credit courses such as painting if they pay the entire cost.

An Enlish language course is offered by Camosun on a dual fee structure — landed immigrants contribute part of the cost, but foreign students must pay the entire amount, Morin said.

Dean Goard, provincial director of post-secondary operations and planning, said Thursday some foreign students are using their visas as a means of getting into the country and staying here.

He said the number of students involved was less than one per cent of enrolment and no B.C. students were being denied access because of the presence of foreign students.

Housing starts up

For the second consecutive month the number of housing starts in the Victoria area surpassed 1978 levels, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation said today.

There were 215 starts in August, up from 128 in the same month last year.

The August starts consisted of 180 single family homes, 21 apartment units and 14 duplex units.

This compares with August, 1978, totals of 126 single family homes, two duplex units, and no apartments.

Total starts for the first eight months of this year is 1,030, compared with 1,301 at the same time in 1978.

This year there have been 842 single family homes, 42 duplex units, 31 row houses and 115 apartment units.

In the corresponding 1978 period the totals were 751 single family homes, 150 duplex units, 28 row houses and 372 apartment units.

There are only 73 newly-completed houses on the market at the present time compared with 171.

The number of new condominiums for sale has fallen to 55 and the number of vacant new apartments in the region is 46.

N-power okay premature Chamber says

By AL FORREST

A brief from the B.C. Chamber of Commerce urging the provincial government to proceed with nuclear power on Vancouver Island was premature, Victoria chamber president Mel Cooper said today.

"I believe we need far more information before proceeding with nuclear power on this island. There are too many unanswered questions."

Cooper said the Victoria chamber supports a study of nuclear power but is not prepared to endorse nuclear development in advance.

"In effect we're sitting on the fence on this one. I know that's not a popular position but in this case it's a very legitimate place to be."

Vancouver Islanders have a right to be more wary than anyone else because this is where any B.C. nuclear plant would be located.

The issue, which has been simmering throughout the 1970s, came to a head at the last provincial chamber meeting when the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island presented a resolution advocating nuclear power. (Victoria is not a member of the ACCVI).

"When it came to a vote, we abstained," Cooper said.

"We said nuclear power was a very big issue beyond glib answers and emotional decisions. We advocated further research into the pros and cons."

However, the resolution passed and was presented to the provincial cabinet last week.

Most vocal advocate of nuclear power has been the Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce, which wants an N-plant in that city.

Gordon Shrum, when he was chairman of B.C. Hydro, said Nanaimo was under consideration but an even better site would be Port Renfrew, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, northwest of Sooke.

The present chairman, Robert Bonner, actively promotes development of nuclear power for the island but has refrained from indicating any specific sites.

Cooper said islanders have a right to ask for thorough research into the question because they would be the most affected.

He said the Victoria chamber agrees additional power sources must be developed but it has not yet been demonstrated that nuclear power is the best answer.

"Even the people at the top are not 100 per cent sure about this one. The experts disagree."

The B.C. chamber resolution to the provincial cabinet states: "CANDU nuclear power reactor units, as developed by Atomic Energy of Canada and as constructed and operated by Ontario Hydro, have proven to be safe, very dependable and economically feasible and should be given most serious consideration.

"Special consideration should continue to be given to the development of nuclear power with a plant situated on Vancouver Island . . ."

Councils blamed for parking mess

The Camosun College board of governors Thursday blamed the Lansdowne campus parking mess on Saanich and Oak Bay councils.

A group of about 20 students attended the board meeting to protest a parking space shortage which is forcing many students to park illegally, and involves the risk of being towed away.

Also under fire was the lack of alternative transportation and exorbitant parking fees which can cost students as much as $200 a year.

Complaints from surrounding neighborhoods about students parking on residential streets go back a long way, and the situation has been worse this year. A new multi-purpose building on campus eliminated 100 parking spaces.

To discourage automobile use, pay parking was introduced in some lots but this resulted in more students parking off campus.

The widening and paving of Lansdowne has aggravated the situation, and many of the same residents who complained about off-campus parking scuttled college plans for new on-campus lots.

Low bid lost out

The protests of the low bidder were ignored as Victoria city council went ahead Thursday night and approved the purchase of 1,000 street lights from Sylvania at a cost of $105,450.

Don Halliday, representative of Westinghouse Canada Ltd. which offered the city the lights for $94,950, protested saying, the stated reason for buying from Sylvania — they'd fit spare parts the city already has — is not valid.

"I've used a lot of different types... this Cat outproduces the others 2 to 1."

Garry Schmitt, lift truck operator at the Kelowna warehouse of Calona Wines Ltd., knows lifts; and he rates his Caterpillar M40 Electric Lift Truck "a beautiful machine".

"Production-wise, there's not a machine in here that can compete with this Cat. I can run faster with a full load than the next fastest machine can run empty . . . I've got 14 hours use out of the batteries . . . it lifts pallets four-high with no problem . . . it's quiet and smooth . . . it's got plenty of power . . . and the side shift forks make life easier in tight storage and narrow aisles."

Whether you rate Caterpillar Electric Lift Trucks from behind the wheel or behind the desk, you can count on speed and manoeuverability that give you profitable performance and maximum space utilization; heavy duty construction that delivers long term durability; superior design and engineering that mean low cost maintenance and minimal down time.

For quiet, pollution-free and cost-effective materials handling, the switch is on to Caterpillar Electric Lift Trucks. Buy, lease or rent a Cat to match your needs: with 36-volt or 48-volt power, in models from 2,000 lbs (1,000 kgs) to 10,000 lbs (4,500 kgs) capacity . . . all backed by fast Finning service at 51 locations.

Landowner's burger plea unappetizing to council

Victoria is aiming a blow at North American culture by banning a Burger King in the 800-block Yates Street, a downtown property owner told city council Thursday night.

"I think it's a very negative reaction for the city to take because this type of facility is what people want," said Logan Mayhew, who owns the parking lot where Robert Philipchalk wants to build a Burger King drive-in, beside the Capitol Theatre.

"Free-standing food outlets are a way of life," he said.

A representative of other owners in the area applauded city council's decision to eliminate drive-ins as a permitted use of certain commercially-zoned land.

"We subscribe to this. We support it," said Frank Butler, property manager of Brown Bros. who said he also spoke for the Worthington estate, owners of ABC Electric next door to Mayhew's property and another Blanshard Street owner.

It would create a tremendous traffic bottleneck and take away needed parking spaces created on the Mayhew property only a few months ago when the old National Motors building was razed, said Butler, who urged the city to buy the land.

But both he and Mayhew were united in opposing a related bylaw which would create a development permit area of the blocks bounded by Blanshard, Quadra, View and Johnson, allowing the city to impose certain design controls on developers.

"Many property owners are absent from the city whose properties are directly affected," said Butler.

Less than a week's notice in the press of the public hearing was insufficient, he said.

After the public hearing, council moved against the Burger King on the legal front. It accepted a recommendation from city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to appeal Mr. Justice Tom Berger's ruling in B.C. Supreme Court on Wednesday that the city must issue a building permit

In his decision, Berger stated the city was attempting to change the rules in the middle of the game.

Good clinic on campus

Thursday was a red-letter day for the Red Cross at Camosun College's Interurban campus.

A blood donor clinic brought in 228 volunteers, one of the best days on record at the college.

The clinic ended a four-day drive to help replenish the blood bank, depleted during August, and lifted the total to 1,174 pints.

Red Cross was hoping to get 800 pints during this week's drive.

The blood bank dispensed about 2,500 pints of blood in Victoria last week.

Three-flight-a-day sked to Port Angeles aired

Pearson Aircraft Ltd. on Monday will begin three-flights-a-day service between Port Angeles and Victoria Airport.

The trip, in 10-passenger Cessna 402 twin-engined planes, will take about 15 minutes.

From Port Angeles there will be connecting flights to Seattle.

Earl Pearson, president of the Port Angeles company, said travelling time between Victoria and Seattle, with the stop at Port Angeles, will be one hour and 20 minutes.

One-way fares are $13 to Port Angeles plus $25 from Port Angeles to Seattle.

At present there are two Victoria air services to Seattle.

Pacific Western Airlines flies 115-seat Boeing 737s twice daily between Victoria Airport and Seattle in 30 minutes.

Airwest Airlines has twice-a-day Inner Harbor to Lake Union (Seattle) service using 18-passenger Twin Otters in a 40-minute flight.

The new air service will leave Port Angeles at 8:30 a.m., 11 a.m. and 3:05 p.m. daily and from Victoria Airport at 10:20 a.m., noon and 4:30 p.m.

Pearson said the company has smaller planes available if the passenger total on the Victoria-Port Angeles route is less than anticipated.

Beware tourist fever: Blencoe

Ald. Robin Blencoe warned about "catching tourist fever" when Mayor Mike Young disclosed Thursday night the provincial government's Heritage Trust has pledged $30,000 as a first step towards fixing up Chinatown.

Although he supported the city's renovation plans, Blencoe said other cities have sold their souls for the tourist dollar.

"It seems another part of the tourist sugar, just another way to make a few dollars," he said.

"That isn't wrong in itself," said the mayor.

"I have some real concerns about what tourism can do to a city. We're all catching this tourist fever," replied Blencoe.

"We all sell ourselves for dollars all the way down the line. You only have to look to Hawaii as an example."

The mayor said the city's plans for the century-old district along Fisgard are not "crass and commercial."

"We're rehabilitating what is a derelict, and in some sections is a condemned part of town."

Council endorsed its land use planning committee report on the Chinatown plan, and also backed the $2.3 million Royal Theatre renovation scheme — both of which depend heavily on provincial government cash.

'Rabbit warren' house gets daycare approval

A daycare centre on St. Andrews Street in James Bay for 25 children was approved Thursday night by city council.

The approval came after owner Jessie Laronde allayed fears of the neighbors and some aldermen that the noise and the traffic would be too much for the quiet residential street.

You won't see any children "screaming and yelling or kicking and biting," she told Mayor Mike Young, who was worried that all 25 children would be out at one time in the yard of the house at 115-117 St. Andrews.

Daycare workers are trained to take care of their young charges, she said, and part of the success is "not to hype them up . . . they're not a bunch of screaming banshees." Only eight to 10 would be outside at one time, and then only from about 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and after 3 p.m.

Young was worried about the condition of the old house.

"It's pretty unsightly right now. As a matter of fact, it's shocking. A rabbit warren would be an accurate description."

Mrs. Laronde said the government licensing authorities set strict standards and she has met them in her other daycare centre.

Cleve Tuttle of 120 St. Andrews said he spoke for six other property owners on the street in opposing the size of the centre. He proposed it be limited to 10 children, but council approved Mrs. Laronde's proposal, only aldermen Bil Tindall and Ron McKenzie supporting a motion to reduce the number.

Mountbatten Place

City council paid tribute to the late Lord Mountbatten Thursday night as it adopted a proposal to name a new street off Terrace Avenue in the Rockland district in his honor: Mountbatten Place.

An IRA bomb killed Mountbatten last month.

Unions fight Panama barge

COQUITLAM (CP) — A Pananamian-registered barge that unionists claim is bilking the federal government of taxes and threatening Canadians' jobs is the first of several that will soon be plying West Coast waters, say union spokesman.

Maxine Zubrigg, a spokesman for the Nanaimo and District Labor Council, warns that six more vessels similar to the Douglas Fir will soon be operating in B.C. waters.

A spokesman for Maple Leaf Shipping, the Canadian-based company that operates the barge, denied the charge and said the company simply is exercising its right to operate as cheaply as possible.

The Douglas Fir, a self-propelled barge manned by 12 Japanese crewmen, was delayed by union pickets at Port Alice on northern Vancouver Island when it delivered bunker oil from California there last month.

Members of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers and the Merchant Guild Service were later ordered by the B.C. Supreme Court to withdraw their pickets at Port Alice and the vessel picked up a load of lumber and headed for Nanaimo.

It was held up there for four days by members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union.

The Canadian Labor Congress said last week it would support union attempts to disrupt the company's business.

"They are robbing the legitimate Canadian towboat operators of their business," said Donald Montgomery, congress secretary-treasurer and chairman of the congress' council of maritime unions. He also said the ship escapes Canadian taxes by registering in Panama.

"This kind of irresponsibility cannot be tolerated and the congress fully supports the efforts of the B.C. trade unions to convince these charterers that their business future in Canada is pretty grim if they persist in their present course of action."

Cel Cosulich, spokesman for Rivtow Straits Ltd. agrees shipping laws should be tightened and said two company barges are not working because the Douglas Fir is carrying logs to California, a business it usually handles.

John May, Maple Leaf spokesman, denied five more vessels will take up the route, but confirmed the vessel's owner, Toko Line Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of a Japanese company, is ready to launch a sister barge.

May declined to comment on his company's response to a congress demand that they replace the lower-paid Japanese crew with Canadian seamen and register the vessel in Canada.

He said the charterer is simply exercising its right to ship goods in the cheapest manner possible and is following policy set down by the former Liberal government.

Before the judge

A 37-year-old woman was found not guilty Thursday in provincial court of the attempted murder of her mother by reason of insanity.

Sharon Darlene Hansen, 2605 Blanshard, was charged with the Aug. 4 stabbing of her 62-year-old mother, Pearl Hope Eddy.

Judge Harold Alder dismissed the attempted murder charge and Crown counsel Richard Law entered a stay of proceedings on a charge of causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure.

Alder ordered the woman to be held at the pleasure of the provincial cabinet for psychiatric treatment.

A 48-year-old man who was given nine days in jail on Tuesday by Judge Blake Allan received a seven-month sentence Thursday from the same judge.

Gerald Fitz Davison, no fixed address, had a Vancouver charge of breaking and entering waived to Victoria and pleaded guilty.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said the break-in occurred sortly after 3 p.m. Sept. 2 at the King Edward campus of Vancouver City College, 2750 Oak. Vancouver city police responded to a silent alarm and a police dog picked up a scent and led officers to Davison in the child care centre inside the school.

Davison received a nine-day sentence Tuesday for breach of probation.

A 23-year-old man serving a seven-month term for a drug offence was given an additional 90 days by Allan.

Denis Wayne Molcan, 3553 Wascana, pleaded guilty to possession of two boxes of stolen tools.

Court was told Molcan was arrested Aug. 6 at Douglas and View and taken to police headquarters where some drugs were found on him.

Police executed a search warrant at his residence and found the tools, valued at $500.

Molcan was given the seven-month jail term Aug. 31 for possession of LSD for the purpose of trafficking. He also was given a one-month, concurrent term for simple possession of marijuana. Seven days earlier, he was sentenced to three months for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

John Curtis Alton, 21, of 2507 Dowler Place, was fined $150 for stealing flower baskets belonging to the city.

Laughton said two youths were reported taking flower baskets from the area of the Memorial Arena at 11:25 p.m. on Aug. 23. Victoria police spotted Alton and a companion carrying baskets at Blanshard and Queens. When questioned, Alton told officers they had found them. Laughton said damage was placed at $50.

A co-accused has been remanded until next Monday for plea.

An 18-year-old charged with breaking and entering and possession of stolen property was released on his own undertaking and remanded until next Friday for election of his trial method.

Mark Cyrus Zaburs, 1304 Grant, was charged with a break-in Monday at CAV Electronics, 764 Yates, and possession of stolen stereo equipment.

Victoria police said they recovered about $6,500 worth of stereo equipment Wednesday night and that two juveniles have also been charged.

Lloyd Richard Penner, 17, of Edmonton, who smashed the window of a bus Wednesday night at the Swartz Bay ferry terminal, was given a suspended sentence, placed on 12 months probation, and ordered to make restitution within four months.

Laughton said the incident occurred about 8:25 p.m. after Penner and a driver for Vancouver Island Transit Ltd. became involved in an argument over fare payment. Penner became angry, Laughton said, got off and smashed the side of the bus, breaking a $126 window.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Olay Clarence Stensrud, 52, of 1144 Rockland, $500; Leonard Gordon Shanse, 48, of 7175 Hagen, $450; Manuel Joseph Medeiros, 24, of 3830 Quadra, $400; and Norman Robert Pletz, 21, of 9676 Seventh in Sidney, $350.

Fined $400 for impaired driving and another $100 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident was 19-year-old James Darrell Campbell of Winfield, who obtained his release Wednesday from the Canadian armed forces.

Curious about cathedral?

Two men were found guilty by a county court jury Thursday of break-in with intent to commit an indictable offence in a basement area of Christ Church Cathedral March 8.

Judge F.A. Melvin was to sentence Ronald Gary Hamer, 18, and Michael Joseph Poulliotte, 20, today.

The jury deliberated three hours and five minutes.

Crown counsel N.K. Varma told the jury the only issue was the intention of the two men who were found by police in the basement area at night.

He said their defence seemed to be that they had gone there out of curiosity but it was up to the jury whether this was to be believed. While it is difficult to read what is in a person's mind, the jury could draw inferences from the evidence.

Manor rescued by non-profit charity group

Gillain Manor — the alcoholic treatment centre for executives — has been taken over by a non-profit charitable foundation.

The centre, which had been having financial problems, announced Thursday all interests in the property at 1515 McTavish in Sidney have been taken over and the manor will operate as a non-profit venture.

The centre has been handling between 20 and 30 patients daily at a rate of $175 a day with each stay averaging three weeks.

Executive director Dr. George Strachan said the non-profit organization has acquired all the assets of Gillain Manor and all the operations previously carried out in the institution.

The building, he said, cost just under $4 million.

Farmer Construction Ltd. began building the treatment centre in 1973 on the north slope of Mount Newton but in early 1975 the project went financially awry.

In 1977 the B.C. Development Corporation offered to insure a $2.6 million mortgage so that Farmer, who by then owned the building, could complete the project.

Strachan, a former director of Alberta's Alcoholism Foundation, was president of Gillain Manor Ltd., a subsidiary of Abacus Cities, and piloted it through its financial shoals.

He said private interests, concerned with the work of the Gillain Foundation, had acquired the assets and operation with Farmer Construction donating $100,000 toward the acquisition.

Strachan said a financial drive hasbeen launched with a target of $300,000 needed to complete capital projects and continue other operations.

With Gillain Manor's financial problems finally resolved, Strachan says he intends to step down as executive director and a replacement will be sought.

He will step into the less demanding role of founder-consultant to have more time to spend on writing, lecturing and research.

Gillain Manor was officially opened on Oct. 3, 1978. It had been 12 years in the planning.

CBC building isn't for sale

The CBC has had a number of tentative feelers from people interested in buying its never-opened Victoria headquarters at Blanshard and Kings here but the building isn't really up for sale, an official said Thursday.

Len Lauk, provincial supervisor of the CBC, said no official decision has been made to sell the $2 million-plus red, orange and yellow building and until then a sale is still sometime in the future.

With federal government policy still in a state of flux and much bigger items like Petro-Canada at the head of the agenda, Lauk said a decision by the treasury board on disposing of the building is not likely to be made quickly.

But Lauk said the CBC will listen to anyone with an offer.

One interested party remains CKVU television station in Vancouver.

President Daryl Duke said his company is still working on a feasibility study of branching out to Victoria, and the CBC building is part of that. The study should be completed by the fall.

When the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission calls for applications for the Channel 10 frequency left vacant by the CBC pullout, Duke said CKVU wants to be ready with its bid.

"Whether the CBC building is the one we want to inhabit, we don't know."

Part of the study is the type of television service CKVU would offer the city, he added.

It wouldn't necessarily be just a repeat broadcast of programming originated by CKVU in Vancouver.

"It might be 98 per cent independent from CKVU. It might be 100 per cent."

Making Your Home More Saleable!

If you have put your home on the market, you'll want to give yourself every advantage. Any little touches which will speed its sale are well worth the extra effort.

Try to imagine you are seeing your house for the very first time. A freshly painted set of front steps or door-sill goes a long way toward creating that important first impression of a well-cared for home. Repair loose door knobs, drippy taps, cracked windows, broken light switches. Not that these are big things in themselves, but they can give the impression that there are other more serious ones.

Create a warm, inviting atmosphere by having floors and countertops shiny-clean. Buyers can visualize their own furniture in your home with greater ease if yours isn't too crowded. Getting rid of clutter makes the house appear larger.

It won't make four-bedrooms out of three, but cleaning out cupboards, closets, back-porches, and hallways seemingly adds space.

If it's a dull day, turn on lights, if chilly, or an evening viewing, light the fire. Fresh flowers and a spritz of scent don't hurt either.

Realtors advise you not to accompany prospective buyers on a tour of your home. Your presence may make them feel nervous, and actually discourage them from viewing it completely.

For more ideas on selling your home quickly, for the price you're asking, and for other interesting articles on homes, don't miss future issues of Homes Today.

Contractors, unions team to cut political red tape

Victoria area contractors and building trades unions have teamed up in an effort to counteract "the dismal record" elected officials have in dealing with millions of dollars in project proposals.

The two groups — the Construction Association of Victoria and the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council — have established an industry liaison and initiatives committee.

One of the major goals of the committee will be to make joint submissions to municipal councils urging speedy approval of projects and development proposals.

In a joint press release, the two groups said what is happening now in many instances is that projects are stalled while councils worry about their impact on segments of the community rather than make decisions based on the good of the community as a whole.

"The industry recognizes the right of any citizen's group to make the best and most forceful presentation of their views," joint industry spokesman John Schibli said in the press release.

"However, all concerned must recognize the right and obligation of elected representatives to consider the viewpoint of all concerned and render decisions which may be contrary to some opinion, while satisfying the over-all balanced growth of the community."

The industry spokesmen say the record speaks for itself.

Investors come forward with proposals for housing, commercial and industrial projects and are constantly frustrated by red tape, indecision and long drawn-out requirements to revise and attempt to satisfy the whim and fancy of everyone.

Schibli, secretary-treasurer of the building trades group, said in an interview the contractors and building trades won't always be able to agree on the merits of given project proposals.

However, when they do they will team up and "put the heat" on the politicians to get things moving.

Schibli said there is still 10 to 15 per cent unemployment among his members in the Victoria area.

The figure climbs to 25 per cent for carpenters and laborers.

Using the Royal Oak industrial park proposal as an example, he said there comes a time when, after hearing from all sides and a favorable vote has been taken, that "people should get off their hobbyhorses and pull together."

The situation has got so ludicrous that councils now are resorting to threats of legal action against regional districts and vice versa, he said.

From now on elected officials will have the construction industry to deal with.

"We will be there to ensure that matters are dealt with in a fair and proper manner and to remind elected officials that decisions must reflect the needs of the entire community."

Bears find feast in trash

NELSON (CP) — What's garbage to humans is a gourmet feast to bears, and an increasing number of the animals are looking for meals in West Kootenay residential areas, says a fish and wildlife officer.

Wildlife officer Gary Smythe said Thursday his office now is handling up to six complaints at any one time.

One local resident complained Wednesday about a black bear in his backyard and a brown bear in his front yard. A mother and her three cubs were shot Thursday after being found in a tree near a house.

Some bears can simply be caged and released in remote areas, Smythe said, but others — like those Thursday — must be killed.

Smythe said a former wildlife officer who knew the bear's taste for human garbage used to class dumps like the French Michelin guide rates restaurants. The British Columbia Hydro camp at the Mica Creek dam site near Revelstoke, reknowned for tasty throwaways, was a four-star dump or a site "extraordinaire".

"Animals were lining up to feed there, first the grizzly bears then the black bears. The wolves would patter in about 4 a.m."

Smythe also says people complain more now because they are less tolerant of wildlife.

"So it comes down to us to control animals and keep them away from the people instead of working toward our original goal which is to increase and enhance wildlife for the enjoyment of the public," he said.

Bear populations, he said, have increased because society's habits have changed. Bear is no longer sought after for its meat and the ecology movement makes hunting unpopular.

Parents vow to save school

HAZELTON (CP) — Parents seeking to have the Two Mile school reopened say their concerns for their children are more important than the school board's reasons for closing the school.

About 25 parents and supporters met with Frank Hamilton, superintendent of school district 88, in this northwestern British Columbia community Thursday.

Hamilton cited low enrolment, inadequate instruction and incomplete facilities as reasons for closing the two-room school.

Enrolment had dropped to 12 from 50 in the past few years, he said, and the school's principal and only teacher could not adequately instruct the five grades.

Dave McCreery, chairman of a committee set up by the parents , argued that children who started at Two Mile had no problems keeping up with other students when they were transferred in Grades 6 and 7.

"We haven't seen any indication that the children have had problems when they were transferred to other schools," he said.

"The battle is just beginning," said one parent. "By no means do we intend to quit."

Socred defends coal rap

NDP leader Dave Barrett hasn't told the whole story in criticizing the coal royalty structure of the provincial government, Mines Minister Jim Hewitt said Thursday.

The provincial government, he said, taxes the coal mining industry a fairly substantial amount — up to 62 per cent of a mining company's gross profits from a mature mine.

Barrett alleged this week that the government let $11 million slip through its coffers last year by not increasing royalties to $2.50 from $1.50 a ton, as Barrett's government had intended to do before its defeat in 1975.

Hewitt said the Social Credit government has increased licence and land rental lease fees, which when coupled with the existing royalty amount, is heavy taxation.

Barrett also alleged that major oil companies have been collecting leases throughout the province during the past few months and will be allowed to wait until coal prices rise before doing any major development.

Fire hazard swelling

A warm spell expected to continue in B.C. for several days is increasing the forest fire hazard, says the B.C. Forest Service.

With the hunting season now open in most B.C. regions, the ministry has urged all hunters to use extreme caution in the woods. This year's fire season is the second worst in B.C. history, with 3,380 forest fires reported so far, up from 2,232 in 1978. The year 1970 was the worst, with more than 4,000 fires.

Fish seizure insurance condemned

TERRACE (CP) — Seizure insurance available to United States fishermen arrested for breaking another country's laws is tantamount to the U.S. government condoning law-breaking, says Jim Fulton, New Democratic Party MP for Skeena.

"It's very similar to there being billboards in the state of Washington saying 'Planning to rob a bank in Vancouver? Pick up your robbery insurance before you go'," Fulton said in an interview Thursday.

SC reviewing libel law

DELTA (CP) — The British Columbia government is reviewing its defamation laws to see if any changes are needed to protect newspapers from libel in letters to the editor and other forums of public commentary.

Deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel said Thursday he ordered the review Wednesday on his return from a Quebec meeting of Canadian justice ministers. At the meeting, all provinces agreed to change their libel laws, if necessary, to overcome a decision last November by the Supreme Court of Canada which they agreed restricts freedom of the press.

Delta hit by strike

DELTA (CP) — Civic workers in this Vancouver-area municipality went on strike Thursday after voting 98 per cent to reject their latest contract offer.

Gary Johnson, local president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, which represents the 450 workers, said the offer did not include enought protection on the matter of job evaluation. The union set up picket lines at all municipal operations, Johnson said.

Love's labor lost in sex shop plunder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Television's Love Boat lived up to its reputation as a seagoing singles bar Thursday when a crew member of the ship's real-life stand-in was arrested for doing some after-hours shopping at a city sex emporium.

Police said a 27-year-old man was charged in connection with a overnight break-in at the Love Shop. An assortment of naughty nighties, sexy underwear and a used sexual aid in for repair were reported taken.

The man was turned over to immigration authorities. He was a crew member of the cruise ship Pacific Princess, the seagoing set of the popular television series.

Kamloops PC MP nixes Grit lawyers

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP says that lawyers who supported the Liberal Party in the last federal election will not be hired to do legal work in Kamloops for the government.

Kamloops MP Don Cameron said "they are my political enemies and I don't see why political enemies should get the work."

Kamloops to try for Canada Games

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Council will ask the federal government to select this Interior British Columbia city for the 1984 Canada Games.

Dennis Kuzat, city recreation manager, said Thursday the success of the B.C. Winter Games held last March showed the city could hold the national games.

Fire closes Pitt Lake logging camp

Opera is Vernon's triumph

BY AUDREY JOHNSON

While opera's fascination for its devotees is much concerned with the fact that it is a compilation of all the arts, its success depends principally on two — the arts of the director and conductor and the qualities of the singers.

As Pacific Opera's Merry Wives of Windsor is well served in these matters, one can say without going further that the production is a success. In fact, in some ways, a triumph.

Finding themselves suddenly without a conductor less than a month before first performance, with the complication of stage direction problems and one last-minute cast change, the situation was dicey. But at this point PO's luck changed with the availability of Timothy Vernon.

With just 10 days to go Vernon took over rehearsals in the dual role of conductor and stage director. The result is something of a miracle. Vernon's natural dramatic flair together with his by now considerable experience as music director-conductor for the Canadian Opera Company, have created a lively, appealing and musically adroit production.

At Thursday's first of four performances, the entire ensemble from the Victoria Symphony players in the pit to every member of the cast of singers and dancers responded to Vernon's dynamic yet sensitive and musically assured direction.

As to his staging of the work, it is smooth, uncluttered and makes good sense at moments of climax. If it tends to be rather formal, remember that there was no time for experiment and that Vernon as stage director had to make his ideas adapt to elements that were already present.

Director and stage designer customarily work together from the beginning, inter-relating thoughts and concepts. But this is not to be taken as a criticism of Tom Taggart's set design. In fact the tilted circular ramping worked to the advantage of everyone and I found the stylized abstractions of scene units quite acceptable (with some reservations about the opening.)

For those unfamiliar with Merry Wives, be assured, it is delightfully melodic, whimsical rather than broadly comic in this instance; vocally gratifying. The lovely popular overture — conducted and played in excellent style — is thoroughly exploited in the final ensemble when the arboreal masquerade is played out on stage.

The story of Otto Nicolai's opera is based on Shakespeare's play of the same name. It concerns the fat, elderly and amorous Sir John Falstaff, the two unwilling objects of his affections, Mistresses Page and Ford, their jealous husbands and various plots to punish the foolish Falstaff. The complimentary thread to all this is true romance in the form of Page's daughter Anne, her love, Fenton and her father's determination to wed her to one of two unwelcome suitors.

This cast is altogether gifted vocally and well matched, resulting in some especially pleasing episodes of ensemble singing. An excellent example is the "quartettino" between Anne and her three lovers in Act II.

Selena James as Mistress Ford, at ease and skillful in her characterization, uses her clear flexible soprano beautifully throughout but nowhere to greater advantage than in the elaborate and exacting coloratura recitative and aria of Act I.

Nancy Holmes' lovely mezzo soprano is effective in the conspiratorial Mistress Page role and Ingrid Attrot as Anne is outstanding. Her warm, glowing, smoothly produced soprano invests the role with a romantic hue and a beauty that is quite arresting.

Falstaff brings forth many unsuspected dramatic skills and enhances Edgar-Samuels' vocal reputation. Particularly memorable is his performance of the drinking song and his remarkable appearance in the finale where he assumes a gigantic pair of antlers.

Richard Margison endows the young lover with his fine tenor voice and combines pleasingly in affecting duet work with Ingrid. The excellent bass of Garth Gislason is advantageously used in the role of Page. Effective and enjoyable also is the work of Peter Bradley, Barry Bowes and Rory Hammond.

Only one flaw appeared on opening night. The sound system was out of balance and tended to coarsen certain parts of the projection.

Student dies, rioting erupts

AREQUIPA, Peru (AP) — The death of a 16-year-old student touched off a 48-hour general strike and protest Thursday characterized by violent clashes between demonstrators and police.

The strike was called to protest the slaying of Fernando Perales, who died Wednesday of a bullet wound he received in a scuffle with police, reporters said.

Firework storage limit okayed

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith likes fireworks as much as anyone and protested when council was asked to endorse restrictions on stores which sell them.

People are being regulated to death, Smith said, adding that fireworks are popular in his family.

Smith said he does not want to see firework retailers forced into dropping the business through a new regional bylaw limiting storage to 50 pounds.

But after Ald. Peter Bunn said he had researched the matter fully through the fire department before the bylaw was recommended to local councils by the Capital Regional District, the mayor abandoned his protest and council approved the bylaw.

"Fifty pounds may not sound like much, but in the case of fireworks, they weigh lightly, to use an old English phrase," Bunn told council.

The bylaw was drafted following a fire in stored fireworks two years ago in which a Chinatown resident was killed.

CLC opens UIC cut protest

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress is preparing a national lobbying campaign opposing the federal government's proposed reductions in unemployment insurance benefits.

Representatives of 100 congress-affiliated unions met in Ottawa this week to discuss a document that raises questions about universal coverage and other facets of unemployment benefit payments — and reacted angrily to it.

Shirley Carr, congress vice-president, said in an interview Thursday that the Conservative government has said it wants meaningful consultation.

"If they think that by giving us this document they are engaging in consultation, they don't know the meaning of the word. They are not going to get anywhere with this kind of attitude."

Among questions the document raises are whether seasonal workers should receive unemployment insurance and whether family income should be considered in payment of benefits.

Congress president Dennis McDermott has said in a letter to Employment and Immigraion Minister Ronald Atkey that the government document has as its basic thrust "the total destruction of the unemployment insurance system as it has historically developed."

He said the intent of the document is to change the system from one based on social insurance to one that more closely resembles private insurance programs.

An objective review of the system would not begin from the premise based in the document, but from the point of view of meeting the needs of those whom the system is designed to help, McDermott said.

Mrs. Carr said the congress is particularly disturbed about plans to introduce changes in the Unemployment Insurance Act in the next session of parliament.

She said every level of the labor movement is being asked to put its weight against changes implied by the document. Representations will be made not only to the federal government, but also to municipalities which would face higher welfare bills if unemployment benefits are cut and to provincial premiers.

Next move in tuna war up to U.S.

OTTAWA (CP) — The next move in the so-called tuna war is up to the United States, says Marcel Cadieux, Canada's top maritime negotiator.

But Cadieux told reporters Thursday there is no urgency in settling the dispute which strained relations in August. The tuna season is virtually over and there is no guarantee the migratory albacore tuna will return to Canadian waters next year.

Earlier, Fisheries Minister James McGrath said he thinks American officials left a meeting with Cadieux realizing the U.S. must offer concessions to get fishing rights for the nomadic tuna in Canada's 200-mile fishing zone.

McGrath said outside a cabinet meeting "there has to be a trade-off — that's the only way we have these kinds on (fishing) agreements. I think they recognize that."

Cadieux and McGrath were commenting on a meeting here between U.S. and Canadian officials Wednesday. The meeting was called after Canada seized American fishing vessels pursuing the albacore tuna into Canadian waters.

American crews aboard the vessels have been charged with violating fishing laws and McGrath said the government won't drop the charges.

Cadieux said at a news briefing the next step in the bargaining over tuna is a decision by an American fisheries council on whether to develop an American herring fishery. That decision isn't expected until February or March.

Canada fears that if American fishermen develop a major herring fishery "they will be taking fish that would come back to Canadian waters to spawn roe," said Mike Hunter, a fisheries department official.

Canada has a lucrative herring fishery worth about $248 million a year. This includes herring roe — herring eggs — which are sold to Japan. Most herring on the West Coast spawn in Canadian waters.

Canada is asking the U.S. to promise it won't develop its own herring industry which would reduce herring stocks on the West Coast. Cadieux indicated this might be part of a package of concessions to balance American rights to fish albacore tuna in Canada's fishing zone.

If the U.S. Pacific Regional Fisheries Council decides to encourage an American herring fishery, that card can't be used in a package of American concessions, Cadieux said.

So negotiators on both sides would have to find other ways to work out a satisfactory exchange.

For that reason, the fisheries council findings next February or March are crucial to further tuna negotiations.

Cadieux and Hunter mentioned several other possible bargaining points but they would not say how many the U.S. would have to accept before American fishermen could catch albacore tuna within Canada's 200-mile zone.

These proposals include:

— Permission for Canadian tuna fishermen to unload their catches in American ports. Because they can't land their catches in U.S. ports, Canadian tuna fishermen can't fish in American waters as they don't have freezer facilities to preserve the fish until they return home.

— Some sort of joint halibut commission to handle the halibut fishery in Canadian and American waters to ensure halibut stocks aren't depleted. The current commission's mandate expires in March, 1981.

Insurer penalizes smokers

TORONTO (CP) — Following the lead of its U.S. counterpart, Allstate Life Insurance Co. in Canada announced it will give non-smokers a break on their life insurance rates.

Brian Caton, Allstate vice-president, said Wednesday that the savings will be three per cent for non-smokers who have stopped smoking for a year and and extra two per cent for those who pass a physical examination.

He said the rates should take effect by the end of the year. As in the U.S., Canadians will have to sign a certificate swearing they are non-smokers.

The only other insurer offering reduced rates to non-smokers is Abstainers Insurance Co., Caton said.

Parrot's appeal slated

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal union leader Jean-Claude Parrot is to appear in court Oct. 16-17 to appeal his conviction last spring of defying a law ordering striking postal workers back to work, a union spokesman said Thursday.

Parrot, leader of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers, was sentenced in the Ontario Supreme Court last May to three months in jail and 18 months on probation.

Parrot was jailed for one night before he was granted bail of $250 pending the appeal. It is scheduled less than two weeks before union and government representatives are to begin negotiations for a new collective agreement.

Parrot has said at recent public meetings that postal workers have no reason to be optimistic about new contract negotiations because the union will be dealing with the same management and the same demands although there is a new federal government.

Parrot said this week that key union demands are still job security, an end to the use of casual, non-union labor in the post office and the right to veto technological changes that would adversely affect workers.

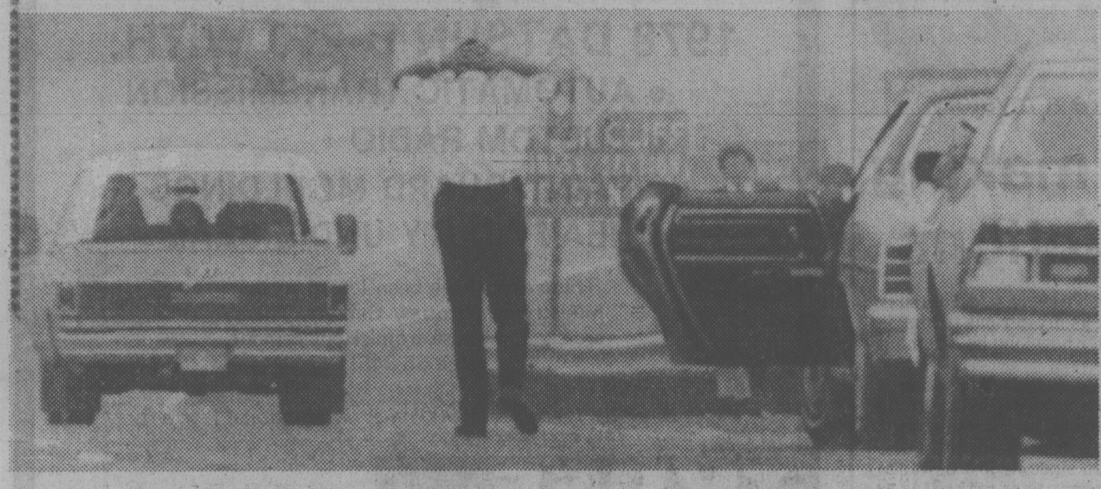
Gunman holds pistol to hostage's head in car, freed bank manager walks away



Policeman with hands behind head approaches car to talk robber into surrender

Fleeing gunman trapped

LIVELY, Ont. (UPC) — A young gunman who seized seven employees hostage when he was trapped inside a bank by police during a robbery was arrested Thursday as he attempted to flee with three of his captives.

"No one was hurt. The bandit surrendered without resistance," said Insp. Robert Cowley of the Sudbury Regional Police Force.

Police had given the robber a getaway car and allowed him to leave the Royal Bank of Canada branch with the bank manager and two women tellers after he released unharmed four other women captives.

Police trailed the gunman in patrol cars and by helicopter for more than an hour on a zig-zag course before cornering the getaway car.

The hostage-taking incident began about an hour before the bank's scheduled opening at 10 a.m. when city police responding to a silent alarm met the young gunman as he was leaving the bank, Cowley said.

"He commandeered an employee's car. We set up roadblocks and kept up surveillance with patrol cars and a helicopter. We blocked him in on a particular street and he gave up with no resistance," Cowley said.

Federal handouts given hue of gold

OTTAWA (CP) — Starting next month, some recipients of government cheques will be getting a golden-yellow-greeting instead of the old basic green, Roch LaSalle, supply and services minister, said Thursday.

He told reporters the cheques will be introduced into all government payment programs, including the family allowance, Canada Pension and old age security plans, by April 1, 1980.

The change of design will affect all 120 million government cheques issued each year and was made to help keep pace with the requirements of automated cheque-reading and electronic data processing equipment in use at most major banks and other financial institutions.

The cheques, which show a waving, golden-yellow Canadian flag, shading to ochre at the edges, will be less susceptible to counterfeiting and more clearly identifiable as government cheques, he said.

The design, the third introduced since 1930 when about 100 different varieties of official government cheques were used, was conceived by the Rolph-McNally-Gottschalk and Ash firm in Toronto.

Que. spurns Alberta money

QUEBEC (UPC) — The Quebec government has no intention of borrowing from Alberta's multi-million dollar Heritage Fund despite a surprise offer from the oil-rich western province, says Premier Rene Levesque.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed announced the offer Thursday, reversing a long-standing policy barring Quebec's separatist government from drawing loans on the from the $4.7 billion fund.

Appearing before the Heritage Fund watchdog committee meeting, Lougheed said "quite a few influential Canadians" had approached him and asked he reconsider his long-standing ban on Heritage Fund loans to Levesque's Pequiste government.

In Quebec, Levesque termed Lougheed's statement "absurd and pretentious," and added Quebec had no intention of borrowing money from Alberta's oil and gas profits savings to develop Quebec's energy sources.

However, Levesque did confirm Quebec was negotiating with Alberta to insure Quebec's future supply of Alberta natural gas.

Before his about-face Thursday, Lougheed had steadfastly maintained it would be "un-Canadian" to lend money to a government dedicated to splitting Confederation.

However, he told the committee, he was now convinced a Heritage Fund loan could be a strengthening factor for national unity.

So far, four provinces have benefited from the fund — $270 million has gone to Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Nova Scotia.

The loans were offered to provincial and federal governments.

Lougheed intensified his pitch for more business from his fellow premiers, arguing strenuously that Canada's balance of payments and trade deficit is "probably our number one economic problem."

He said other governments are going to the New York money market for loans in the hope the Canadian dollar is undervalued and will climb back to the 90-cent (U.S.) level.

But such actions exacerbate the drain of Canadian money leaving the country, he said.

GM extends pact for Canadians

TORONTO (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. and the union representing its 31,000 workers in Canada have agreed to extend the workers' current contract past the deadline of midnight Friday night.

The breakthrough in negotiations came Thursday in a unanimous decision by members of the United Auto Workers' master negotiating committee, Local 222 president Ted Murphy said.

The current three-year agreement will hold until either a new pact is made or a new deadline is set by the union.

The agreement came one day before General Motors workers are scheduled to walk off the job on a selected strike basis across the United States.

There had been speculation that Canadian workers could walk out in sympathy with their U.S. counterparts even though a union spokesman at General Motors' largest plant in Oshawa, Ont., said Tuesday that local workers would stay on the job.

Worried send prayers to mollify taxman

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians who want to clear their consciences often send money to the receiver general, usually along with a holy picture or a prayer, a government official said Thursday.

Twice a month on the average, an anonymous money order or a crisp banknote arrives in amounts ranging from $1 to several hundred dollars.

R. R. Moore, chief of financial systems and accounting for the federal ministry of supply and services, said in an interview Thursday: "Each year we get $9,000 to $10,000 worth of conscience money."

"People do it because of religious beliefs. 'Do not steal.' They include holy pictures to clear their conscience."

Moore said most of the money comes from persons who have bought furniture across the border without paying duty. Some comes from retired civil servants and yet more comes from "people who have a problem and feel this is the only way to resolve it."

"They all indicate it's conscience money. They scribble a note and they talk about their religious beliefs."

He said the most interesting case he's seen involves term payments made under pseudonyms by a husband and wife.

"They're obviously making payments for back taxes and are asking us to keep a record under a nom de plume. We get the money and a note saying: 'This is conscience money. Would you mind recording in under ----'s account?' "

All the conscience money is recorded in government accounts and receipt is acknowledged by a newspaper notice in the town where the letter was postmarked.

U.S. bans 'sale' Air Canada rates

MONTREAL (CP) — The U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board has rejected an appeal by Air Canada to allow a special low-fare seat sale this fall for flights betwen Canada and the U.S., the airline said today.

"Despite all our efforts, the CAB's answer is an unqualified no," said vice-prsident Guy Chiasson in a statement

"As a result, we have no alternative but to offer refunds to those who have booked for trans-border flights or, at least, an opportunity to take their trips at the next best fare, charter class."

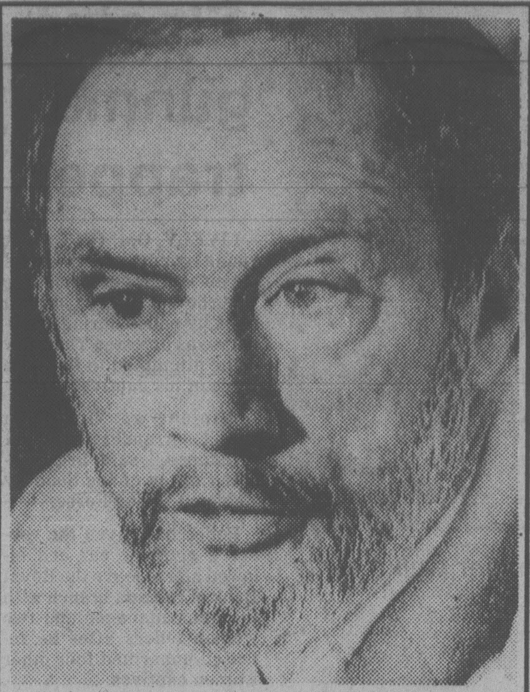
Last Friday, the CAB announced that it would allow the special seat-sale fares offered by Air Canada only for flights originating between Oct. 5 and Oct. 11. The airline appealed, asking the CAB to protect its passengers on flights originating in Canada for the balance of the planned seat-sale travel period. But the board has turned down that appeal.

Rail strike vote tally

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians will know in two weeks whether they will face a national railway strike this fall.

Union officials meet in Winnipeg Sept. 27 to tally results of a nation-wide contract vote by 22,000 shopcraft workers, the only group among 90,000 railway employees to reject a tentative agreement last May.

The workers are voting on a report by government-appointed conciliator Judge Alan D. Gold, who admitted early in August.



Trudeau . . . future a mystery

Trudeau making no predictions

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau said Thursday his future political plans are as mysterious to him as they are to others who wonder how long he'll remain Liberal leader.

"My long-term future is as mysterious to you as it is to me, now as in 1968," he said, referring to the year he became party leader and prime minister.

Many Liberals have been preoccupied with questions of Trudeau's leadership since he lost power to Joe Clark's Progressive Conservatives in the May 22 general election.

At a news conference, he was asked whether he would quit the leadership after Quebec's referendum on independence, expected next spring.

"Do you have an idea when that referendum will be?" he asked.

"I know you don't and I don't either."

Students pilots crash, die

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP) — Two single-engine planes from a local pilot training school collided in mid-air Thursday, killing the 19-year-old student pilots in both aircraft.

Francois Senechal, from the Quebec City suburb of Charlesbourg, and Jacques Plante, for Lac St. Augustin, just outside the provincial capital, were in their third year at the school.

They were the only people aboard their respective aircraft, which crashed to the ground following the collision above the nearby village of St. Ambroise.

About a dozen of the college's planes were in the air at the time of the accident, and none of the pilots was accompanied by instructors.

Divorce denied as welfare drain

TORONTO (CP) — A 29-year-old welfare mother has been denied a divorce because she wasn't seeking financial support from her husband.

Judge D. G. E. Thompson said a divorce would have left taxpayers to support the mother of three.

The woman, whose children range in age from nine to 12, has been separated for 4½ years. Ontario government mother's allowance is her sole income.

Her lawyer, Lawrence Papoff, said the woman's husband, a 30-year-old truck driver, has failed to pay $30-a-week child support payments ordered one year ago.

"It's no use chasing after him," Papoff said.

In his written decision, released earlier this week, Judge Thompson said the woman could come back to court for a divorce after she has added a claim for maintenance and notified her husband.

The court can then decide whether her husband should pay her support, and how much it should be.

Clark shuffles his mandarins

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government today moved Paul Tellier from his Liberal-appointed job of promoting Canadian unity from the Privy Council office to deputy minister of Indian affairs.

Other moves:

Sylvain Cloutier, who many Conservatives believe to have been too close to the Liberals in the past, is moved from deputy transport minister to head the Export Development Corp.

Arthur Kroeger becomes transport deputy minister, moving from his present job as Indian affairs deputy.

John A. Macdonald, at at present head of the Export Development Corp., is moved to the tariff board.

Guy D'Avignon is moved from being chairman of a special committee to review the merit principle in the public service to deputy minister of supply. He replaces J. M. DesRoches who is retiring.

Did Dief leave more?

OTTAWA (CP) — Documents in a safe in John Diefenbaker's former Parliament Hill office suggest there may have been a second trust fund established to help support the late prime minister and his wife Olive.

Sources confirmed today that a memo, written in Mrs. Diefenbaker's handwriting and found in the safe, refers to a $125,000 fund.

A source confirmed that another document found in the safe also makes reference to a second fund.

A first trust fund, containing $221,754.28 when it was set up in 1960, was revealed when Diefenbaker's will became public soon after his death last Aug. 16.

Tories eye crackdown on SIN

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government is considering ways to stop what many Tories consider to be illegitimate use of the 20 million social security numbers now in existence.

Perrin Beatty, a minister of state, said Thursday he hopes there will be legislation this fall stopping a trend toward using the numbers — often called SIN — as a national identifier open to many abuses.

If all goes as he hopes, the Conservatives will restrict the required use of the number within the government in hopes the private sector will follow suit.

Beatty, junior minister under Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens, has long been a fighter against what he says is abuse of the number that is required for certain social security functions.

He and other Conservatives have objected that all governments and many private industries, right down to supermarkets, require production of the SIN as a requirement for services.

They have said this is an invasion of privacy and leaves the very serious danger of some persons or governments illegitimately using SINs to get information on others from central computers.

There is no federal law that says the number must be used for anything else and the previous Liberal government brushed off Conservative complaints by saying a person need not give his number.

Beatty said the number is a useful administrative tool that must be limited in use.

He noted that the defence department uses the number. He said he recently instructed his officials to tell a supermarket chain it cannot deny services to customers who refuse to produce SINs as indentifiers.

He said he hopes to make it necessary for government to show the need for mandatory provision of SINs. When the need was not shown then it would be illegal to require the number.

The government should first clean its own house, he said. Then private industry would be expected to follow suit.If it failed then the government would have to force a change.

He said Privy Council President Walter Baker, responsible for all government legislation, is considering a change in a government requirement that Canada Savings Bond holders produce SINs when they cash in coupons.

Banks withhold 40 per cent of the value of coupons if the numbers are not produced. The money is deducted from income tax payments.

Beatty said an individual should be allowed to use SIN as an identifier if he chooses. But he should not be forced to in order to get a library card, cash a cheque, join a minor hockey league team, take ballet lessons, collect medicare or do a host of other things that have come to Conservative attention.

He said if there are reasons for having a national identifying number they should be debated in public. The use of SIN in that manner must not be brought in without Canadians realizing it.

Verigin denies arson command

for the last six months has brought it under control and considered himself a "recovered alcoholic."

Under cross-examination, he insisted that "My faculties are such that I am certain that never have I counselled directed or participated in acts of bombing."

Verigin, his wife and a former professor at the University of B.C. who said he has known Verigin for 30 years, were the only defence witnesses.

Judge David Campbell of Vancouver will review the evidence this morning before the nine-man, three-woman jury retires to reach a verdict.

A fourth count of conspiracy to commit arson against Verigin, 58, was stayed Wednesday because an unindicted co-conspirator could not be found.

Peter Astaforoff of Gilpin, B.C., faces two counts of conspiracy to commit arson and William F. Evdokimoff, 61, of the Nelson area, one count.

Verigin said he was literally driven to drink in trying to cope with the acts of terrorism conducted by Freedomites over the years, but would "like to see the day that they see the wrong of their ways and become human beings again."

But "as long as they commit arson, bombings or flagrant and obscene acts of nudity, I don't want to be associated with them."

He agreed with lawyer William Firmin of Vancouver, representing Evdokinoff, that there was considerable ill-feeling between himself and Evdokinoff, but denied any knowledge of whether Evdokinoff made made a statement to police implicating him.

In a 65-minute summation, Rankin said that "there's no hard evidence " against Verigin, and "every other single person made a deal (with the Crown) . . . there is absolutely no independent corroboration.

"Each one has already received their reward: no charges, no prison," he said.

Three of the men who testified that they set fires under Verigin's orders are named in the charges as unindicted co-conspirators.

Replying to Rankin's statement that the Freedomites who testified received "20 pieces of silver: no charges", Overend said that Olga Hoodicoff's "20 pieces of silver were six months in Okalla."

Mrs. Hoodicoff, 31, who had testified that Verigin told her personally to get some women and burn Sorokin's home, wept silently on a friend's shoulder in the tiny crowded spectator's gallery as Rankin attacked her part in the proceedings.

She had testified that she was convicted of conspiracy to commit arson for her attempt to burn Sorokin's home and was sentenced to jail.

Overend said statements about the "curse may sound silly to you but it may not be silly to them." He compared the curse with the religious version of hell.

Orthodox Doukhobors, who make up most of the audience of more than 100, groaned when Overend noted that a witness had said about Verigin, "This man has the power of the curse."

Italian DC-9 fails landing; 31 aboard die

CAGLIARI, Italy (AP) — An Italian jetliner plowed into a mountainside early today while attempting a landing in rain and fog at nearby Cagliari airport and airline officials said all 31 Italians aboard were killed.

The plane, a DC-9 of the domestic Italian airline ATI, carried 27 passengers and a crew of four. It had taken off from the city of Alghero on the northwest coast of this Italian island in the Tyrrhenian Sea and was to land at Cagliari Elmas Airport in the south before flying on to Rome.

Authorities at the airport said the pilot, Salvatore Penacchio, 35, radioed that he was preparing to land moments before radio contact was lost and the aircraft slammed into the Sarroch mountain range.

A worker at a factory near the mountain range reported seeing a "huge mushroom" of flame rise from the slopes about the time of impact.

There was no immediate indication what caused the crash.

U.K. plan riles white lobby

LONDON (AP) — White leaders of Zimbabwe Rhodesia today objected to a British-proposed constitution which would strip them of almost all their remaining power, a senior source at the peace conference said.

The four white ministers in the 22-member delegation, including former prime Minister Smith, made the protest at a meeting of the delegation in its hotel, said the source, who asked not to be identified.

The delegation, led by black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa, must formulate a joint position on the British proposals.

Muzorewa, the whites and leaders of the two minority parties in his delegation later met with with British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, the conference chairman, to seek clarification of the British draft.

The 15-page proposal was to be debated for the first time in formal session with the opposing delegation of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance when the five-day-old conference resumed.

Ald. Hayes announces ignore them at our peril. We're living in the dark ages as far as policing and waste disposal go."

He proposed hiring another 10-12 policemen but said they should be used to better effect than the present force.

"Enlightened communities these days are into team policing and foot patrols. We can't fiddle around with this issue any more. Get the boys in blue out of their cars and into the streets where they can do some good."

Transportation is another mess, the candidate said, saying it's something out of the 19th century.

"We are saturated. Our streets can't handle any more traffic."

Hayes backs a new transportation terminal on Store Street, to which B.C. Hydro city buses, Pacific Coach Lines and the E & N railway passenger service would all be relocated.

And the free bus system should be expanded to cover all of downtown Victoria. The money for this would come from scrapping the city's plans for all but one of several new carparks proposed for downtown.

Hayes said he also wants an aldermanic ombudsman at city hall.

At present, he said, a few conscientious alderman who spent a lot of time there get all the complaining phone calls and the problems. The job would be rotated among the eight aldermen, so the public would be sure to find at least one at city hall at all times.

Meetings of civic advisory groups should be opened to the public, Hayes said. He also criticized the present emphasis on tourist promotion.

"I'm fed up with the emphasis on providing facilities for tourists. It's about time we thought of our own Victoria residents."

The city should bring back the farmer's market to Centennial Square. It could sponsor a race like the Swiftsure, but for local yachtsmen only, and the annual flower festival suggested by the Chamber of Commerce is a good idea.

Beautifiction of View Street should be a priority to make living downtown more attractive, he added.

Correction notice

Due to an inadvertent error in the Bay's Sneak Preview Bay Day Flyer, appearing in this edition of your paper, prices on page 10 were switched. Item 10-3, the Acrylic warm-up suits should be $29.99 and item 10-6, the Adidas TRX joggers should be $26.99. The Bay hopes this error will not inconvenience its customers.

Non-cash Western carrots

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Western Express Lottery, whose sales have been off since a format change in June, says it plans to add more non-cash prizes.

The lottery distributed $2.16 million worth of $1 Winsday tickets for its first draw in September, down from $2.7 million worth in the June and July series.

Public relations director Len Gzebb said today the lottery expected sales would decline initially when it adopted the new format. But he said sales now are running at a level that the directors had projected.

In June, the lottery dropped the $25 prize that had been given for tickets with the last three numbers of the top draws. From next Wednesday, holders of these tickets will win five free tickets on the following week's draw.

"In terms of profit, the lottery is doing better than it was a year ago," Gzebb said.

TOWN TALK

Worst-kept secret up at the Leg is the fact that onetime Vancouver Sun reporter Hall Leiren is to become Premier Bill Bennett's press secretary.

But the official word won't come until Leiren gets back from a trip to Sicily, where coincidentally, Bennett's executive assistant Tony Tozer is also on vacation.

The lads are enjoying the trips courtesy of a sales contest promotion staged by a major manufacturer of electrical appliances.

Leiren is married to a daughter of Vancouver's Ben Wosk while Tozer got his trip through the Bennett Hardware stores.

Since the premier is on record as saying that nobody, but nobody in his office gets to take freebies (that's newspaper jargon for a no-charge junket) observers wonder if he'll rap any knuckles over the Sicilian swing.

An amateur historian complains to Town Talk that the monument makers at the National Historics Sites and Monuments Board in Ottawa have done it again.

First they stuck up a new bilingual plaque on the post office downtown which translates Cariboo gold strike into French as a "miners' labor dispute."

Now there's a new plaque on Juan de Fuca's cairn up in Walbran Park on Denison Road which credits Capt. George Vancouver as the first to sail completely around Vancouver Island, "followed by Galiano and Valdes."

Vancouver's men did prove that this was an island, but the credit for the first circumnavigation really must go to the two Spaniards.

They set out originally from Nootka Sound and Vancouver was surprised when he came up from the south and found them in what is now Vancouver's English Bay.

Later he rounded the north end of the island, but never set eyes on the west coast between Nootka and Juan de Fuca Strait. When Galiano and Valdes sailed into Nootka behind him, they were the first to travel all the way.

Then there's the young Saanich policeman — Times photographer Bill Halkett says he still had braces on his teeth — who this morning made like Jack Webb in that old TV series Dragnet.

The rookie demanded to know how come Halkett was at a vandalism incident this morning.

Told the Times learned of the case through its police checks, the policeman replied that police would never have revealed the case.

Halkett suggested the young man be sensible. The policeman demanded to see Halkett's identification and appeared a touch put out when informed that Halkett has worked for the paper for close to 30 years.

The final crunch came when the boy wonder warned sternly: "Nothing can be touched until the ID squad gets here."

Town Talk is informed that Ian Cass has been appointed an executive vice-president of the Victoria Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

We got the word in a press release which sings the praise of the former Saanich alderman in what can only be described as fulsome terms.

CASS . . . himself

Cass, says the press release announcing his appointment, is well-known in the community — not only for the vigorous role he played during his term on Saanich council — but also for his intensive involvement in community affairs and his energetic campaigning on many local issues such as public transit and affordable housing.

All in all, a heady tribute. Particularly since it appears to have been written by Cass himself. His name's at the top of the release with his phone number.

Crass, Mr. Cass, crass.

It was the fine italic script and mock-Chaucerian spelling which caught our eye: "You wud do us a grete honour to reserve tyckettes for our partye."

A couple of phone calls brought the explanation. Four Seasons musical theatre society, which puts on children's shows and amateur musical productions, is holding a medieval-style banquet at the Captain's Palace on Oct. 16 to raise money.

Jesters, troubadors and jugglers will entertain in the elegantly old-fashioned Pendray mansion and guests will dine on raw oysters with white wine, marinated salmon, quail and wild rice, pickled pig trotters and baked hare pie, with flaming steamed pudding, fruit and cheeses for dessert.

"We'll have knives and forks for those who want them but we encourage people to eat in the medieval manner," said society director Maureen Milgram.

There will be prizes for costumes and an eight-by-eight foot "painting" of the Malahat by Australian entertainer Rolf Harris will be auctioned off.

"Tyckettes" at $55 a couple are available from Mrs. Milgram at 5702 Old West Saanich Road, 479-2807.

Seaplane pilots from the mainland have now got the message that Greater Victoria watershed reservoirs are off limits for operations or skiplaning.

Greater Victoria Water District commissioner Ron Upward complained to the transport department that training flights were risking contamination of the water supply, or introduction of the noxious Asian milfoil weed.

Skiplaning is the seaplane equivalent of circuits and bumps done by trainees for landing and takeoff practice.

Transport Canada acting regional superintendent G.R.W. King said the restriction was published by the Canada Air Pilot, together with a map of the watershed.

Sooke Lake, Goldstream Lake and the smaller lakes in the watershed are to be used by aircraft only in case of emergency.

Anybody for tea or trap shoot?

Victorians can go trap-shooting or have tea at The Empress, play bingo or dance their hearts out — all for a good cause.

United Way organizers think that one reason this year's campaign to raise $1,020,000 will be successful is that many community groups are involved in promoting the campaign and sponsoring events.

Here is a list to clip and save:

Tonight:
Victoria Mayor Mike Young and a young guest from the Pearkes Clinic kick off the Canadian soccer championships — and the United Way campaign. Royal Athletic Park, 7:30.

Saturday, Sept. 15:
United Day for United Way. Mayors ask their municipalities to support the campaign.

Oktoberfest, Market Square, noon to 6 p.m. Beer, polka to the Chick Webb band. Proceeds from A&W Root Bear and Sweet Tooth Saloon to United Way.

Inner Harbor popcorn and pop, proceeds to United Way. Celebrities on hand.

Super Bingo, Victoria Curling Club, doors 5 p.m. Proceeds to United Way. Sponsored by Victoria and District Baseball Association.

Cash draw, Western Speedway Canada 200 Race. Gates, 6 p.m. Trophy dash, 8 p.m. Canada 200, 8:30. Tickets sold during evening for cash draw. Half to winner, half to United Way.

Sunday, Sept. 16:
Sidney Bingo, Sanscha Hall. Sponsored by Sidney Kiwanis. Mayor Norma Sealy and North Saanich Mayor Westwood will call first six numbers and ask support for the campaign.

Monday, Sept. 17:
Children's Poster Contest starts. Judging Oct. 16 by Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy and others.

Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22 and 23:
Trap Shoot, South Vancouver Island Rangers, Metchosin. Everyone welcome. Net proceeds to the campaign.

Sept. 22 to 29:
High tea at The Empress. Part of proceeds to the United Way. Special entertainment.

Monday, Sept. 24:
Big league hockey, Memorial Arena. Vancouver Canucks, Molsons, and CJVI donating 100 tickets to member agencies and putting up promotional displays. Ceremonial United Way face-off. Visiting team is Los Angeles Kings.

Sept. 28, 29:
Pizza Pieman promotion. One dollar from every large pizza to United Way.

Sunday, Oct. 7:
Demolition derby, Western Speedway. Trophy dashes, heat races, main event. All proceeds to campaign.

Sunday, Oct. 14:
Molsons-Harbour Towers Beach Golf. All entry fees to United Way.

Monday, Oct. 22:
Miss Victoria Pageant, Crystal Ballroom, Empress Hotel. United Way chairman Bob Harvey helps judge.

Oct. 22 to 26:
CJVI radio request line. Make a pledge, hear your song.

Nov. 16:
Student Dance-a-thon. (Disco is passé) S.J. Willis School. Twenty-four hours sponsored dancing from 7 p.m.

Other events with no dates set:
Miss Frith United Way Sale.
Student spelling bee.

Ask the Times

Q. Why do they call it Indian Summer?

A. The origin of the name of the warm period following summer and before winter starts is uncertain, but it seems to come from early American settlers. It may be named after the Indians who told the Americans this pleasant time would be coming or after the Indians who used the time to make more attacks on the settlers. It is caused by a warm mass of tropical air which remains stagnant and brings the calm clear weather. The same period is called Old Wives Summer in Europe and All Hallow Summer in England.

Mayor fed up with the city being 'corporate patsies'

Mayor Mike Young got mad at Victoria's electrical workers Thursday and said it's time the city stopped being the fall guy in labor negotiations.

"There's a feeling around here that we should be corporate patsies," Young told city council.

He disagreed with this approach and said the city should use the same publicity tactics that the 15 members of Local 230 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has adopted.

"We've adopted the attitude that only the union can fight and kick and scream, but the city — heaven forbid!"

The mayor asked council to run an ad in the weekend papers outlining the city's position, but only aldermen Bob Wright and Bill Tindall supported him.

City manager Jim Bramley said the ad — space had already been reserved in the papers — was "straight facts down the line" but several aldermen said publishing such an open letter to the public would only inflame the situation.

YOUNG

Young said the heart of the dispute is the 12-year relationship between city IBEW members' wages and the B.C. Hydro IBEW settlement. Victoria has always followed Hydro with a nine-month gap. Anti-inflation guidelines fouled up this orderly system.

The time lapse provision meant that city IBEW staff missed the worst effects of the guidelines, while B.C. Hydro employees got hit with a four per cent ceiling.

This year the city offered the IBEW the four per cent, or the same wage proposal accepted by the Canadian Union of Public Employees for some 2,000 other municipal workers in the Victoria area — seven per cent as of Jan. 1, 1979, and another 72 cents an hour next year.

IBEW business agent Jack Zettler has said before that his men want "instant parity" with Hydro, no more time lapse. Victoria police and firemen get paid the same as their Vancouver counterparts and so should electrical workers.

Young and Bramley said another worry of the city is the spreading gap between CUPE wages and what the 15 electricians, street light and traffic signal technicians are paid. Now, they get 30 to 35 per cent more and the IBEW contract demands would increase the spread to 40 per cent, the manager said.

Ninety to 95 per cent of the city's CUPE members make less than the lowest-paid IBEW worker gets, which is $10.11 an hour, said the mayor.

Young said the city IBEW local is an historical anachronism, dating to the days when Victoria had its own power plant. Only one other B.C. city has the same arrangement and elsewhere CUPE members do the jobs IBEW men do here.

IBEW workers were back at work today — which is the city's payday — after booking off sick Thursday and staging flying pickets at various city locations earlier

Crystal won't open until spring

The renovated Crystal Gardens won't open until next spring, project manager Ken Patton of the Provincial Capital Commission said Thursday.

The $2 million project was scheduled to open officially next month, during the convention of architects, builders and restoration experts coming here for the annual meeting of Heritage Canada.

But it's been put off to early 1980, Patton said, because the restaurant and shops on the Douglas Street side of the old swimming pool and dance emporium won't be finished until then.

The government wants everything ready and in place so as not to lose any of the impetus the project has created, he said.

The tropical plants and other furnishings for the indoor garden will be moved in this fall and work will proceed on the leased retail space through the winter.

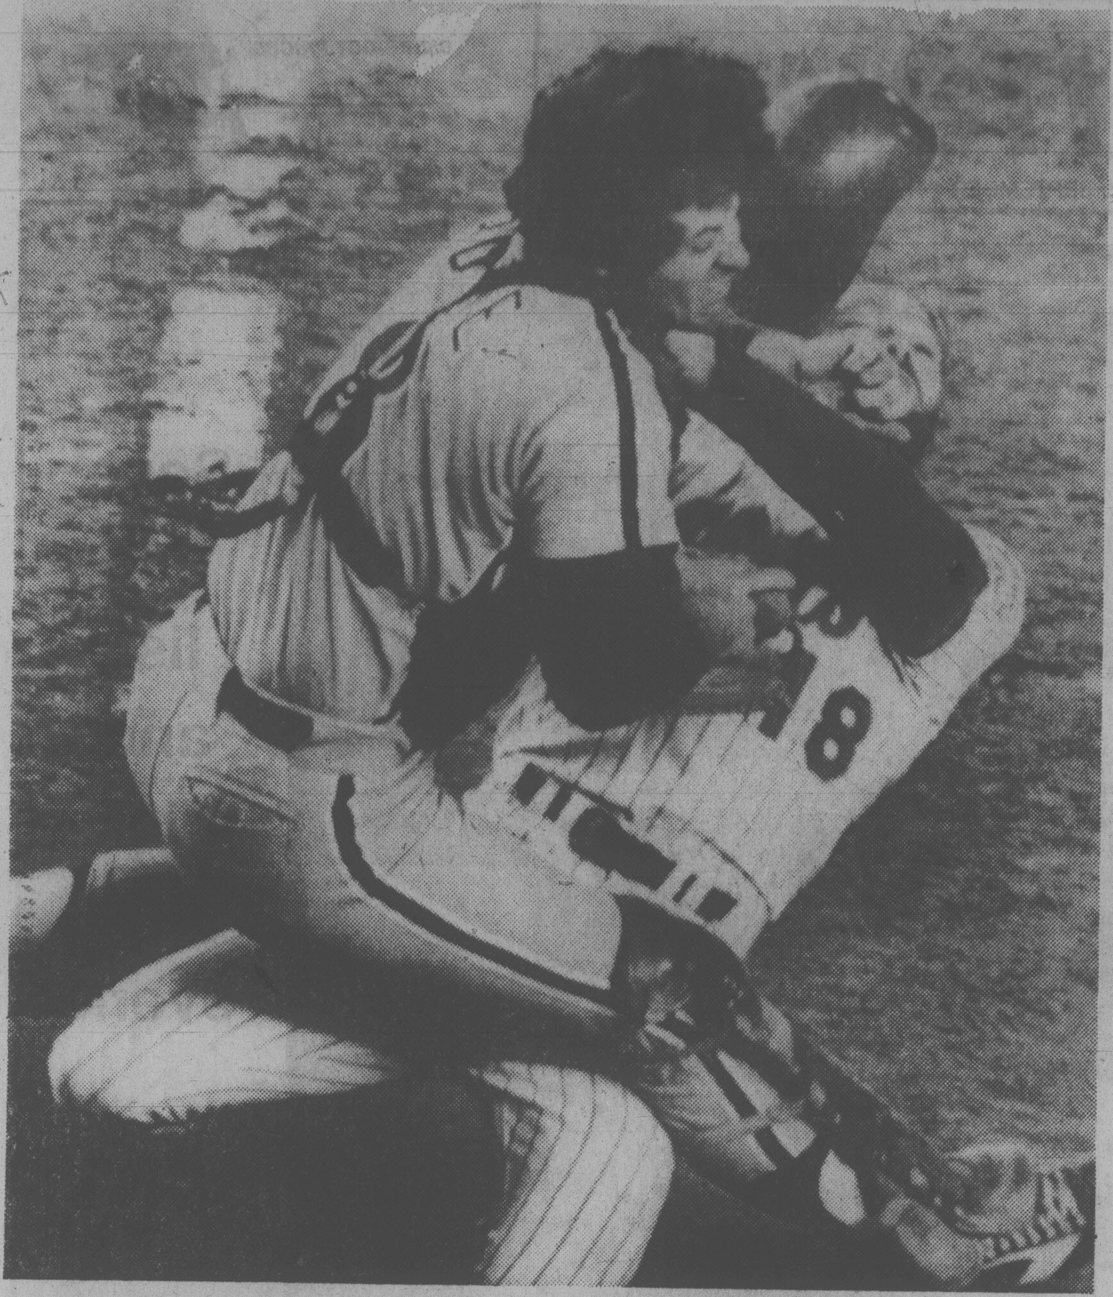
Bob Murphy of Realspan Properties Ltd., which is handling the leasing arrangements, said the successful applicants for the small street-side boutiques should be selected by next week.

By the Aug. 21 deadline, he had received a dozen gift shop proposals, and the same number for ice cream stands and fast food outlets.

But the government has ruled out fast food places because of litter and other reasons although ice cream is still in the running, though.

There were also eight proposals for handicraft sales, five art galleries, several photographic studios and eight miscellaneous, ranging from antiques to clothing.

Eight applications for the 6,000-square foot restaurant were made, most of them by local restaurateurs, and six are still being weighed.



JARRING ENCOUNTER between baserunner Joel Youngblood of New York Mets and catcher Bob Boone of Philadelphia Phillies determined outcome of National League baseball game Thursday at New York's Shea Stadium. Mets and Youngblood, attempting to score tying run in ninth inning, claimed Boone dropped the ball but umpire Terry Tata ruled runner out and Phillies 2-1 winners. (AP Wirephoto).

Expos have found a key to success

By Associated Press

Whatever it is — luck, talent, clean living — that makes a winner, Montreal Expos seem to have it.

"It's not only being good, you've got to be lucky in this game too,'' Expos outfielder Ellis Valentine says. "We've had the talent for two years, but now we're getting the breaks to go along with it."

A big break gave Montreal a 4-3 victory over Chicago Cubs Thursday night and helped the Expos open up a .003 lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East.

Trailing 3-2, pinch-hitter Rusty Staub came to bat in the bottom of the ninth with two out and the bases loaded. Cubs super-reliever Bruce Sutter was looking for save No.36.

Staub chopped a grounder down the first-base line. It hit a seam in the carpet at Olympic Stadium and bounded away from Chicago first baseman Larry Biittner, scoring two runs.

"There are seams all over this ballpark and there's no way you can adjust quickly in a bad hop,'' Staub said. "We've been getting some breaks, but we're playing like anything and it sure makes you feel like this is our year.''

The grounder handed young reliever Bill Atkinson his second win of the season.

"When I saw the ground ball in the ninth, I just thought to myself we're losing a half-game to Pittsburgh because they didn't play tonight,'' Atkinson said. "But nobody's dying on this club. It's a big happy family.''

"I thought I was going to get a good bounce and then it took off on me,'' said Biittner, who drove in two of Chicago's runs.

The Expos mounted the winning rally against Rick Reuschel, 17-10. Gary Carter singled with one out, and Valentine followed with another single, taking second on the throw to third.

Sutter came on for Reuschel and intentionally walked Larry Parrish. Rodney Scott then forced a runner at the plate to set the stage for Staub's fluke hit.

"I guess we're living right,'' Expos' manager Dick Williams said. "I know we're playing hard, and we don't quit.''

The Expos entered the contest a half-game behind Pittsburgh but actually in first place by less than one one-hundredth of a percentage point since they had played five fewer games. The Pirates had a home game against St. Louis rained out Thursday night. Montreal now has won six in a row and 16 of 17.

In other National League games, Atlanta Braves whipped San Francisco Giants 4-1, Philadelphia Phillies edged New York Mets 2-1 and Los Angeles Dodgers downed San Diego Padres, 8-6. Both Cincinnati Reds and Houston Astros, fighting for the NL West lead, were idle Thursday.

Meanwhile in the American League, Steve McCatty of Oakland A's became the first pitcher to defeat Milwaukee Brewers three times this season is and stretched his year's record to 11-9 as the A's went on to trounce the Brewers, 8-3.

He allowed 10 Brewer hits while Dave Revering backed him up with a pair of bases empty home runs and Jim Essian added an RBI single and sacrifice fly.

The A's in general and McCatty in particular thus are major reasons why the Brewers are unlikely to win the AL East championship, and the unlikelihood increased when first place Baltimore Orioles trounced Toronto Blue Jays, 10-4. The A's, with a 51-96 record, were 6-6 against the Brewers this year.

Elsewhere in the AL, Minnesota Twins beat Texas Rangers 7-4 in 12 innings and New York Yankees defeated Boston Red Sox, 10-3. The Cleveland Indians-Detroit Tigers game was rained out.

Tatra's manager has been around

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Hometown support belongs to Victoria West but Prairie sentiment rides with Winnipeg Tatra as Canada's four four finalists move into Royal Athletic Park for tonight's opening rounds in the national soccer championship for the Labatt's Challenge Cup.

The Wests, champions of British Columbia, have been there before. They brought the Canadian title to Victoria in 1976.

And 72-year-old Charlie Caithness also has been to the victory circle.

Caithness was manager of Winnipeg Scottish when that team, in 1962, was the last club side to bring the country's top amateur soccer prize to Manitoba.

In 1979, 17 years later, Caithness is back in the Canadian showdown as Tatra's manager.

Winnipeg goes against LaSalle Olympics of Quebec, at 6, in the first of tonight's two games. The Bob English-coached Wests have drawn Holy Cross of St. John's, Nfld., at 8:15.

Quebec plays Holy Cross at 1:15 p.m. while Wests face Tatra at 3 p.m. in Saturday's action that will set up Sunday's final.

Guided by player-coach Bob Cram, Tatra has another link with the Scottish champions of the past. The standout at fullback is Dave MacKenzie, whose dad, Don, starred with the Winnipeg team in 1962.

Dave MacKenzie, striker Doug Leeies, Cram, goaltender Arv Loewen and Tom Mooney are five reasons Tatra is in Victoria today.

MacKenzie and Leeies, who scored six of Canada's 12 goals, performed with the national side at last week's World Student Games in Mexico City.

Mooney scored the goal and the always-dependable Loewen racked up the shutout when Winnipeg defeated Edmonton Scottish 1-0 in the Prairie regional final last month.

Cram, incidentally, is NOT the Bobby Cram that came out of West Bromwich to play professionally with Vancouver Whitecaps.

But the confusion between the two Crams doesn't gall Winnipeggers as much as the Canadian Soccer Association's reluctance to recognize the fact that Scottish won the then-Dominion Challenge Cup by defeating Edmonton Edelweiss 6-0.

The CSA lists all the champions since 1913. There was no competition during the war years of 1916-18 and 1940-45. Nor, according to the CSA, was there competition in 1962-3.

"Let me show you something,'' Caithness said Thursday shortly after his arrival in Victoria. He pulled out a medal struck by the CSA and presented to Winnipeg Scottish members for their 1962 triumph.

"Vancouver didn't compete for the cup in those two years,'' he added, "so they figure there was no competition. Those guys in Vancouver always think they run the show.''

"We complained about the oversight and it (the winners' list) was supposed to have been fixed up.''

Sharif expands lead in pro squash series

Sharif Khan of Toronto, who has held the North American title for the past 10 years, took a 3-1 lead in the "Start of Season Challenge Series'' by beating Bryan Patterson of Birmingham, England, 3-0 Thursday night at the Sussex Club.

Khan, 34, won 3-1 in Thunder Bay and 3-0 in Prince George while Patterson, 33, who is ranked third in England and 22nd in the world, recorded a 3-0 triumph in Vancouver. The fifth match of the series, which serves as a buildup for the world championships later this month in Toronto, is in Hamilton and the final two matches will be played in Ottawa.

Both Khan and Patterson will be competing for the world title.

Khan set the pace from the start and controlled the centre of the court while posting a 9-7, 9-4, 9-4 win before a capacity crowd of 90.

The winner of each match in the series collects $300 and the loser takes $200.

Lakers deal for Haywood

Times News Services

Utah Jazz announced the trade Thursday of forward Spencer Haywood to Los Angeles Lakers for forward Adrian Dantley.

Dantley, a three-year National Basketball Association veteran out of Notre Dame, came to the Lakers as part of a four-player trade with Buffalo, where he was NBA rookie of the year in 1976-77.

Haywood, a 10-year veteran, was acquired from New York Knicks by the then-New Orleans Jazz last January in exchange for centre Joe Merriweather.

"We've been trying all summer to acquire a strong forward to compliment this team,'' said coach Jack McKinney of the Lakers, "and feel we've come up with one of the fine players in the league in Spencer.''

Meanwhile, Lawrence Butler, the leading collegiate scorer last season, has signed a contract with Chicago Bulls.

Butler, a 6-3, 180-pound guard from Idaho State, had a 30.1 point average last season and shot 51 per cent from the field. He scored in double figures in all but one of his collegiate games and was a second-round draft pick by the Bulls.

Seventeen NBA teams who open their pre-season camps today. By Monday all 22 clubs will be holding two-a-day workouts in preparation for the start of the exhibition schedule next Thursday. The regular season begins Oct. 12.

Bill Walton, Larry Bird and Magic Johnson are three new faces NBA officials are counting on to give the league a boost this season.

Walton, the 6-foot-11 centre who led Portland to the NBA title in 1977 and was the league's most valuable player the following season, signed a $1 million a year contract with San Diego as a free agent in May. He missed all last season because of a foot injury.

Bird and Johnson are the most publicized of the rookie crop. Bird, a 6-9 forward, led Indiana State to an unbeaten regular season while Johnson, a 6-8 guard, helped Michigan State to the Natonal Collegiate Athletic Association championship. Indiana State's only loss of the season came in the NCAA final against Michigan State.

Bird was drafted by Boston a year ago as a junior eligible and signed with the Celtics in June following prolonged negotiations. Johnson was the top pick in the June 25 college draft, signing with Los Angeles Lakers.

Ironically, the two teams that met in the playoff final will be the last two to open their training camps — the champion Seattle SuperSonics welcoming veterans Sunday and runner-up Washington Bullets starting practice Monday.

New Patriot

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — New England Patriots have signed veteran cornerback Mark Washington, 31, released recently by Dallas Cowboys after nine years with the National Football League team.

Driving title races going right to wire

NANAIMO — Terry Forsyth and Gordie Stone hold comfortable but not unsurmountable leads going into the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association championship races Sunday at Grandview Bowl.

Both the super-stock and stock car championship races are worth double points and action is scheduled to get underway with time trials at 1 p.m.

Forsyth leads super-stock drivers with 984 points and Stone, the 1978 champion, tops the stock car class with 943.

More than one-liners spouting in Tampa Bay

By Associated Press

There was a time when the only thing Tampa Bay Buccaneers had going for them was coach John McKay's steady stream of one-liners.

They're not needed anymore — but old habits are often hard to break. So, while the Bucs, having advanced from absurdity to respectability last year, continue on toward outright contention this season, McKay will still have his little laughs.

"Lee Roy Selmon always plays excellently. It's too bad he doesn't talk more to get more notoriety. Maybe he could carry a flag and wave it when he makes a good play,'' McKay said of his star defensive end, who led the charge that resulted in 10 quarterback sacks against Baltimore Colts last Sunday.

"This was my first overtime,'' the former University of Southern California coach said of the 29-26 victory over the Colts. "In college we didn't play overtimes. We figured if we couldn't do anything in 60 minutes, well, we'd bored them enough so let's go home.''

And on Neil O'Donoghue's winning 31-yard field goal on first down: ". . . fumbles and interceptions are in our playbook. Because it worked I'm intelligent and a hero. But if it had been blocked and returned for a touchdown . . .''

But it wasn't, so the Bucs won to raise their record to 2-0 and share first place with Chicago Bears in the National Conference's Central Division.

Tampa Bay has never, in its brief life in the National Football League, won three in a row. If the Bucs can do it this Sunday by upsetting Green Bay (the Packers are favored by less than a field goal), there's a very good chance they'll take sole possession of first place since the Bears are in Dallas with the Cowboys listed as heavy favorites.

As usual, there is a full schedule of games Sunday, including Seattle Seahawks' home stand in the Kingdome against the Oakland Raiders.

Crump returning to face ex-mates

By Canadian Press

Running back Richard Crump finished last year's Canadian Football League season as a Winnipeg Blue Bomber.

Two teams later, Crump is coming back to Winnipeg, wearing the colors of Ottawa Rough Riders for a game against the Blue Bombers Saturday.

Crump was traded to Ottawa by Calgary Stampeders after an unexplained five-day absence from the Western Conference team this week. He had come to Calgary in the trade which sent all-star defensive tackle John Helton to Winnipeg.

The Rough Riders need a victory to stay close to front-running Montreal in the east where the Alouettes visit the underdog Hamilton Tiger-Cats Sunday.

In other Sunday games, Edmonton Eskimos host British Columbia Lions in a battle for first place in the west while the third-place Stampeders try to hold off the winless Saskatchewan Roughriders at Taylor Field in Regina.

Crump won't be Winnipeg coach Ray Jauch's main worry against Ottawa. Jauch may be juggling his secondary before the game in preparation for an aerial attack from Rough Rider quarterback Condredge Holloway, who can always find tight end Tony Gabriel in a crowd.

Although the Rough Riders played well in a 44-4 win over Hamilton last weekend, Ottawa coaches are still trying to improve the lineup.

Along with Crump, defensive back Wiley Turner, a National League cut, is in camp for a five-day trial. Ian Mofford will play in place of injured slotback Peter Stenerson while import Calvin Prince fills in for fullback Mike Murphy, who has a broken thumb.

In Edmonton, the Eskimos have been holding closed-door practices to prepare for the crucial game against the Lions. Coach Hugh Campbell says B.C. had a spy in the stands last year, prior to a key meeting between the two clubs which Edmonton won 38-1.

Lions' quarterback Joe Paopao is eager for what he calls his first big CFL test since taking over from first-string pivot Jerry Tagge who is injured. Tagge, who has been in hospital with a blood clot on his knee, may be discharged in time to accompany the team to Edmonton.

Meanwhile, the Tiger-Cats have signed defensive back Larry Dorsey from the University of Hawaii to replace veteran import Ike Thomas, who goes onto the injury-reserve list.

After nine straight losses, Saskatchewan wants to prove Calgary has been over-rated this season, as well as chalk up a victory for the home fans.

Rookie coach Ron Lancaster has shuffled his roster by dropping linebacker Bob MacAuley and defensive end Tim Tennigkeit while bringing defensive lineman Stoney Parker off the injury list.

Wide receiver Lloyd Henry and linebacker Keith Miller were added this week and quarterback Danny Sanders was put on a five-day trial.

Good-sized coho replace the disappearing pinks

Some fairly hefty coho are showing in waters between Sooke and Pedder Bay to replace the bountiful harvest of pinks that has now tapered off.

Monday was a good day off Sooke. Alice Clarke boated a 14 pound, four ounce coho while trolling a plankton hootchie off The Bluffs and Mrs. J.A. Sears came back with a 12½-pounder taken on a minnow off Secretary Island.

Other good catches were noted on Krippled K's, Tom Macks and strip and a few small chinooks are showing for variety.

Most of the action has been found in the top 50 feet of water.

A few pinks are still showing at Becher Bay, where Gordon Strongman boated an 18-pound coho Wednesday on a Stingsilda off Beechey Head. It is the largest coho landed so far this season around Vancouver Island.

August Graf of Penticton did land a 15½ pound coho Tuesday while trolling an anchovy about one mile off Aldridge Point.

Drift-fishermen casting or mooching with Buzz Bombs have been connecting in a variety of spots around the Head and Church Island.

At Pedder Bay, Henk Benckhuysen caught a 14½-pound coho Wednesday while wielding a Buzz Bomb off the kelp bed and Loretta Grubert took a 14-pounder the same day while trolling a Silver Harvest luminous octopus right in the bay.

Numerous coho in the eight to 11 pound range, a few jacks and a few winter chinooks to 10 pounds have been taken right in Pedder, off Christopher Point, in Race Passage and along the coast toward Church Island.

The word from Oak Bay was "dead".

Sidney fishermen are landing a few chinooks to 10 pounds off Sidney Spit and James Island and fair catches of chinooks and a few coho were reported off Moses Point, Coles Bay and Wain Rock.

Chinooks to nine pounds are showing along the Bamberton shoreline at depths between 100 and 150 feet. Most were taken on dark-colored hootchies, strip or Apex Hot Spots.

Finlayson Arm is still a good bet with chinooks and coho averaging eight pounds turning up in a ratio of two-to-one.

Goldstream Island, Misery Bay and Chesterfield Rock waters are producing both for Buzz Bombers and trollers using a pound of weight, 150 feet of line and hootchies, Tomic plugs or Krippled K's.

Further up-Island, Sansum Narrows is yielding a few chinooks to seven pounds for trollers working near the surface.

Nanaimo fishing has suddenly turned hot again for coho to eight pounds and the odd chinook to 25. Best action has been on fresh-raked herring trolled at bucktailing speed right close to the surface near Hudson Rock, Five Fingers and Snake Island.

Strip or T-Spoons trolled with six ounces of lead and 75 feet of line have caught chinooks to 50 pounds from Ten-Mile Point to the top end of Alberni Inlet. One particularly good spot has been along the wall near Franklin River.

Fresh-raked needlefish (the main feed in the area), Buzz Bombs and bucktails are catching coho to eight pounds off Comox Bar, Hornby Island and Denman Island.

Campbell River fishermen are tying into coho to 16 pounds near the Red Can, Butlers Point, Indian Village and Cape Mudge. Fresh bait, hootchies and green and white bucktails or flashtails have produced the top catches from both surface and deep water.

Fresh water fishermen are starting to connect in a few Island lakes and streams as water temperatures begin to fall.

Spectrum triumphs

Spectrum and St. Michael's University School claimed the only victories in three "A" division matches played Thursday in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Field Hockey League.

Spectrum blanked Norfolk House 3-0 and St. Michael's edged Parkland 4-3 while Mt. Douglas and Victoria played to a scoreless deadlock.

In "B" division play, Dunsmuir tripped Mt. Douglas 7-0, Claremont downed Reynolds 5-0 and St. Margaret's defeated St. Michael's, 4-0.

Hurst handed Chelsea post

LONDON (Reuter) — Geoff Hurst, former England soccer striker, has been appointed interim manager of English Second Division soccer club Chelsea.

Hurst, who scored three goals in England's 4-2 World Cup final win over West Germany in 1966, steps up from his position as first-team coach to replace Danny Blanchflower, who resigned.

Casper lays out strategy

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — Billy Casper, who has made more moves than a chess master in preparing his United States team for the Ryder Cup matches, says strategy will play a key role in determining the winner.

The U.S. today went after its 19th victory in the 24-match history of the international golf series which is staged every two years. This year, the match is being held at The Greenbrier resort.

For the first time, the Americans are playing a combined team of British and other European golfers, a change from previous years when only British golfers made up their team.

The three-day 28-match series was set to begin this morning with four best-ball matches, and continue in the afternoon with four foursome matches.

Casper said that since he was named the non-playing captain in July, he has been mulling over how to best pair his team in the Ryder Cup. The captains determine which golfers play in which matches.

Casper had to do some shuffling Thursday when he learned that leading money winner Tom Watson had been called home to Kansas City by the birth of his first child, a daughter. Mark Hayes, a first alternate for the U.S. team, immediately flew in from Oklahoma City, Okla., but did not play today since he had not played the Greenbrier course previously and needed time to practice.

European captain John Jacobs, meanwhile, maintained a sense of history as he made his pairings for the best-ball matches. Paired for the first match were Spaniards Severiano Ballesteros and Antonio Garrido, the first non-British golfers ever to represent Europe in the Ryder Cup, which began in 1927.

Ballesteros and Garrido were paired against Lanny Wadkins and Larry Nelson.

Experience achieved but medals are scarce

MEXICO CITY (CP) — The 10th World University Games ended in a downpour Thursday, but for Canada it was a drought.

After 12 days of competition during which 100 gold medals were presented, the 155-member Canadian contingent managed to capture only three bronze medals. The Canadian medal winners were the women's basketball team, Helene Pelletier of Charlesbourg, Que., and Nick Montadi of Calgary in mixed doubles tennis and the women's 400-metre freestyle swim team.

But most Canadian officials were not dissappointed.

"I think we came down here with the hope of trying to achieve some personal bests and gain some experience and I think we've done that," said Rolf Lund of Kingston, Ont., a track and field coach.

"What's wrong with being fifth in the world," asked men's basketball coach Jack Donahue of Ottawa. "There was only one game I wasn't pleased with and that was against Bulgaria. We have to maintain contact with the best teams in the world by never finishing worse than fifth or sixth in any tournament and we did that here."

As the closing ceremonies, conducted in a driving rain, brought the Games to an official end, the Soviet Union emerged as the undisputed winner of the biennial event which attracted competitors from 95 countries.

The Soviets won 34 gold medals and 76 in all, far greater than the 21 golds and 51 medals over-all won by the second-place United States. Romania was a distant third with 13 gold and 30 medals in all.

But it was an Italian, Pietro Mennea, who will be remembered as the hero of the Games. Mennea set a world record in the men's 200 metres, clocking 19.72 seconds, breaking the old record of 19.83 seconds set on the same track by Tommie Smith of the U.S. at the 1968 Olympics.

The only competitor to win two individual track and field golds was Romania's Ilie Floroiu who took the men's 5,000 and 10,000 metre events.

The most individual golds won by an athlete was five by Soviet Union gymnast Bogdan Makouis. He also won a gold in the team event.

Closing-day winners were Helmut Schreiber of West Germany with a throw of 88.68 metres in the men's javelin; Wladyslaw Kozakiewicz of Poland with a vault of 5.60 metres in the pole vault; Evans White of the U.S. in the men's 800 metres in a time of one minute, 48.87 seconds; the U.S. men's 1,600-metre relay team with a time of 3:00.98; the Soviet Union in 43.14 in the women's 400-metre relay; and Gerd Nagel of West Germany in the men's high jump with a leap of 2.28 metres.

While incidents or protest were at a minimum — or non-existant — the Games were not without problems.

And to top it all off, there was little interest from the Mexican people. Stadiums were largely empty for all sports, even at the gold-medal soccer game in which host Mexico beat Uruguay.

The next Games will be held in Brazil in 1981.

Dougherty, Sanudo share Buick lead

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Ed Dougherty waited out a one-hour and eight-minute rain delay, then rammed home a 12-foot birdie put to earn a share of the first-round lead with Cesar Sanudo in the $150,000 Buick Open golf tournament Thursday.

Dougherty and Sanudo each fired a five-under par 67 over the 7,001-yard layout at Warwick Hills Country Club.

Five golfers — including PGA champion David Graham — were one stroke back of the co-leaders.

Others at 68 were George Burns, George Archer, Dave Eichelberger and Bob Eastwood.

Tom Weiskopf, a former champion, was at three-under 69 along with Scott Steger, Terry Diehl, Mike Hill, Morris Hatalsky and Jim Colbert. Colbert set a course record in Wednesday's pro-am event with a 10-under 62.

Dougherty, who teed off in the afternoon, played the back nine holes first. He had hit his tee shot on the 415-yard par-four ninth hole — his 18th and final hole for the round — when a thunderstorm halted play.

Dougherty, who has never won since coming on the PGA tour in 1975, said he had gone to the clubhouse, thinking play wouldn't be resumed until Friday morning.

When tournament officials ordered a resumption more than an hour later, Dougherty hit a wedge to within 12 feet of the pin and rolled in his putt for a birdie that gave him a share of the lead.

Saints hire Yepremian

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New Orleans Saints have signed placekicker Garo Yepremian to a contract for the 1979 National Football League season and expect the 35-year-old veteran to handle kickoffs and field-goal attempts.

Wide receiver Wes Chandler will do the punting for New Orleans.

If Yepremian is successful on his next extra-point attempt, he will break a league record of 16 consecutive conversions.

Yepremian, 35, was released by Miami Dolphins this year after nine seasons with the club.

Clown prince becoming a king

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Rodney Marsh, who burst into American soccer four years ago as the clown prince, leaves the field as a king in a two-day soccer tribute.

The highlight for the colorful English-born captain of Tampa Bay Rowdies is a testimonial game tonight at Tampa Stadium against Fort Lauderdale Strikers of the North American Soccer League.

Proceeds of the game go to the retiring Marsh, a visible and often controversial athlete who leaves a legacy in Florida of winning deeds and showmanship.

Festivities were to begin Thursday night with a roast.

At the end of July, Marsh, 34, announced his retirement after a 17-year career, saying it's better to bow out, "when people ask why rather than when they're asking why not."

He intends to coach and gets his first crack at it when he directs the American Conference champion Rowdies in his own testimonial.

Marsh is the charismatic kid from London's tough east end who was lured from Manchester City in 1976 by then-Tampa coach Eddie Firmani.

He became an instant hit with Fannies — Tampa-area crowds who flocked to the stadium in droves to see the sport. His wispy sandy-hair flying, his knee socks rolled down to his shoes, Marsh was a threat from either midfield where he deftly directed play or from the striker slot where he skillfully shot for goals.

In his four years with the Rowdies, Marsh garnered more honors than any other player to wear the green and gold: He was named to the NASL all-stars all four years and named most valuable player in 1977 and 1978.

Olympics finally connect

Times News Services

Canada's Olympic hockey team, paced by Paul Reinhart, won its first game in the five-country Rude Pravo international tournament at Prague Thursday, defeating Finland 3-1.

Reinhart, first choice of Atlanta Flames in the National League's draft, scored two goals for the Canadians, who wound up with a 1-3, won-lost record.

Mikko Leinonen scored Finland's goal while Doug Buchanan fired Canada's other counter.

The Canadians needed to win by four goals to finish third in the standings. They lost 9-2 to Czechoslovakia, 2-0 to Sweden and 5-3 to the Soviet Union.

Later, the Soviet Union defeated Czechoslovakia 6-4 to give the Russians the title with a 4-0 record. Czechoslovakia was 3-1. Sweden and Finland also finished with 1-3 records.

Sports of all sorts

Laurie Boschman couldn't believe the luxuries he found waiting for him when he entered the Toronto Maple Leafs rookie training camp in Toronto.

"When I walked in there were skate laces sitting waiting for us if we needed them," said the Leafs first-round draft choice from Brandon Wheat Kings.

"In Brandon, we'd have to hold the trainer down and threaten him to get a 47-cent lace. We wound up going to buy our own."

Boschman has yet to find out what kind of salary the NHL club is prepared to pay him. His agent, Bill Watters, is still negotiating a contract for the rookie who scored 66 goals and 83 assists for Brandon in the Western League last season.

IN TENNIS: John McEnroe, the United States Open champion, leads a talented U.S. team against Argentina in the Davis Cup American Zone final beginning today . . . McEnroe, who became the youngest player since Pancho Gonzales in 1948 to win the U.S. men's title, said the Open crown was a boost to his confidence . . . He will play singles along with the man he beat in the Open final, fellow New Yorker Vitas Gerulaitis . . . Yugoslavia won both reverse singles matches Thursday for a 5-0 victory over Portugal and advanced to the third round of the European Zone B Davis Cup tennis tournament . . . Israel took a 2-0 lead over Monaco when it won both singles matches in another match . . . Sixth-seeded Billie Jean King fought back from the edge of defeat and beat fourth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia 4-6, 7-5, 6-1 today to advance to the semi-finals of the $150,000 Tory Sillook tennis tournament in Tokyo . . . King advances to the semi-finals against second-seeded Dianne Fromholtz of Australia, a 6-2, 6-4 victor over No. 8-seed Betty Stove of the Netherlands . . . Third-seeded Evonne Goolagong Cawley of Australia will meet Ann Kiyomura of the United States in Saturday's other semi-final.

Canadians one-ton threats

AROUND OUR SHORES

Pat Dufour

Three Canadian one-tonners will provide some tough competition in the eighth annual Great Equalizer Race, sponsored by the Seattle Yacht Club, which starts in Seattle this evening.

Ken Pearce's 35-foot The Pearce Arrow of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club is certainly the boat to watch. Ken won both the Swiftsure and the Southern Straits of Georgia classics this year and is out to get the third big race around these parts.

His crew is stacked with expertise. There's Steve Tupper, the Canadian Yachting Association's national coach; Vancouver sailmaker David Miller, Marsh Pardey and, rumor has it, Don Martin, who's had quite a few winning streaks of his own.

Two Royal Victoria Yacht Club boats, however, will be giving Ken a run for his money.

One of them is Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer, who finished Swiftsure before The Pearce Arrow but lost to her by 3½ minutes on corrected time. Greg is a keen competitor. He and crew member Dave Richardson were washed over the side in the stormy PITCH regatta, held at Bellingham on the Labor Day weekend, but it takes more than that to dampen his enthusiasm.

The other boat is Level Crossing, the 35-foot Peterson formerly owned by Alex Foley of Royal Van. She was boat-of-the-year in Vancouver in 1978 and now is owned by Peter Dennis and Bob Buffam.

Peter is North Sails representative here and it is no surprise to hear that Level Crossing's sails are all from his company. Crewing with Peter and Bob will be Kim Olsen, Tom Hosie, Mike Cranston of Seattle and Jeremy Watney of Ocean Books in Market Square.

Other Victoria boats that will be racing in the Great Equalizer include Hugh Porter's Errigal and Bob Hosie's Meg. Ted Trenholme's Impatience was also slated to be there but she broke her mast in the PITCH regatta and is waiting for a new one to be installed.

RVYC dinghy enthusiasts will begin their fall and winter frostbite series at Cadboro Bay on Saturday. The first race will begin at 1:30 p.m.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, has a full schedule of racing slated for Sunday. Cruising class boats will have a 10 a.m. start for one of their races in B series while the squadron's Sailerettes will be competing for the Heaton Trophy. Dingy racers will have series racing, beginning at 1 p.m.

The 1979 Port Townsend wooden boat symposium begins Saturday and runs through until next Thursday, offering a curriculum that runs the gamut of almost every aspect of boat-building, as well as contemporary skills and techniques.

Earle Wakefield, Bill Kuss, David Jackson, David Mullins and Cecil Lange will be among those teaching boat-building techniques. Among those teaching design will be John Gardner, Ted Brewer, Ken Hankenson, Robert Harris, Lyle Hess and Charles Wittholz.

Well-known John Guzzwell will join Jan Gougeon and Del Saul in presenting a special coldmolding progra. Nick Benton will be there to teach traditional craft rigging while Lin and Larry Pardey will give hints on boat husbandry.

The curriculum also includes courses in sailmaking, repair and restoration of traditional boats, shop management, caulking and joinery.

You can get more information if you get in touch with The Wooden Boat Foundation at Point Hudson Marine in Port Townsend. The zip code is Washington 98368. If you'd rather phone, then dial 112-206-385-3628.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club will be out in force on Sunday for a paddling trip in the Sooke Harbor area. They'll gather at the King John Inn, Happy Valley and Sooke junction, at 10:30 a.m.

There was a good turnout for the club's Fun Day at Beaver Lake last Sunday in spite of the unco-operative weather. The Yellow Patch team of Dick and Mary Kirby, Bill and Elaine Skinner, Ron Johns, Terry Stirling and the club's newest members, Doug and Sharon Pearce, finished with the most points in the various competitions.

Henry Pejril headed the committee that arranged the successful event. Working with him were John Harding, Harry Marsh, Dowie Routh, Jack Akins, Walt Neilson and Dick Kirby.

Members of the Victoria Power Squadron set out today for their annual weekend cruise to Roche Harbor. Highlights will include a wine and cheese party on Saturday and a sailpast on Sunday with commander Gordon James taking the salute.

The squadron's night boating course begins Tuesday, Sept. 25 and Wednesday, Sept. 26 at Spectrum School, 957 West Burnside. Squadron members will be taking registrations at the school from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. next Tuesday and Wednesday for those who missed getting to their registration booth they recently manned in the Mayfair Mall.

Pendragon claims One-Ton honors

Times News Services

The West Coast yacht Pendragon won the One-Ton Cup world sailing championship Thursday at Newport, R.I., despite a protest lodged by the British yacht Indulgence.

Indulgence, skippered by Graham Walker, came in first in the long-distance race but Pendragon, owned by John MacLaurin of Santa Barbara, Calif., led in total points.

Two protests were lodged after the final race. Indulgence filed a protest against Pendragon, and Firewater filed a protest against Archangel. The race committee disallowed both.

Pendragon won last year's world Three-Quarter Ton championship in Victoria.

Indulgence was declared the series runner-up. Rounding out the top five were Archangel, skippered by Ted Kuttel of South Africa; Oystercatcher, Richard Matthews of England; and Firewater, Robert Barton, the United States. The sixth-through ninth-place finishers were all American yachts: Celebration, Woodpecker, Not By Bread Alone, and Special Edition.

And at Rochester, N.Y., Annette Henderson of Edmonton moved into fifth place while Karen McRae of Toronto slipped to third from second after the fourth race in the world women's Laser championship on Lake Ontario.

Henderson, who started poorly with a 22nd-place finish in the first race Monday, has come on strongly with two sixths and a fourth place in the last three races.

Gunilla Berg of Sweden retained her lead in the overall Laser standings.

Cathy Foster of Britain, defending world champion in the International 420 class, won her fourth straight race to strengthen her lead in that class.

Dianne Groome of Toronto moved to seventh from ninth. Fiona Kidd of Toronto moved to ninth from 13 and was tied with Genevieve LeVaillant of France. Sue Holt of Hudson, Que., was 16th.

Village Green tournament on Saturday

Meyers 'disappointed' but has 'no regrets'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ann Meyers, unsuccessful in her attempt to become the first woman to play in the National Basketball Association, believes her effort will create more opportunities for women in the sport.

"I know it (her three-day trial with Indiana Pacers) will open up a lot of doors for the women," Meyers said Thursday after assistant general manager Nancy Leonard announced that the 24-year-old UCLA grad would work for the team in public relations.

"It will give women's basketball a little more recognition," Meyers said. "And it will give young girls hope. It shows that anything is possible."

Meyers, a 5-foot-9, 140-pound middle child in a family of 11, said she was "a little disappointed" about remaining with the team as a non-player.

"I knew I had a slight chance, but have no regrets. It was the best decision for me."

The Pacers announced that Meyers' specific responsiblities were still undecided. The $50,000 contract she signed guaranteed her a position if she failed to earn a playing position with the team.

The decision to sign the contract means the 1976 United States Olympic star, who carried her countrys flag in the opening ceremonies, won't be eligible for the 1980 team.

"I've been to the Olympics," she said. "I've been to Russia (for the recent Spartakiad Games). This offer came at the right time for me. The Pacers offered me something I couldn't turn down for a lot of reasons."

The trial received some unfavorable comments from the Women's Basketball League, but Meyers said she ignored the remarks.

"I might want to play in the league in the future."

'Dungeons' boy found alive

DESOTO, Texas (UPI) — A 16-year-old genius missing almost a month and once presumed dead in an arcane fantasy game was reunited today with his family.

Private detective William Dear said he located James Dallas Egbert III, a Michigan State University student, in a small, dirty room at an undisclosed location Thursday. He flew the computer prodigy to the Dallas area where the boy was hospitalized for observation.

Egbert's family flew to Dallas from their Dayton, Ohio, home and Dear took them to the boy early today.

"The boy may or may not be in the hospital now," Dear said. "The family will not be talking about it."

Dear refused to confirm or deny whether the young student had been kidnapped but did say he had been "dickering" with people for several days seeking Egbert's release.

Egbert, who reportedly has an IQ of 190, disappeared from the MSU campus in Lansing on Aug. 15, supposedly in a life-like adaption of the intellectual fantasy game "Dungeons and Dragons."

Dear would not say if Egbert had been held against his will, only that no ransom had been requested and no criminal charges had been filed.

Dear said when investigators located the teenager, he told them only: "The (J.R.R.) Tolkien group is a far out group." The group, to which Egbert belonged, is named after the well-known fantasy writer and the "Dungeons and Dragons" game is based on his works.

Dear said that other than cuts on his chin and left elboy, the youth appeared healthy when he was found.

"He was not in as bad a shape as I had anticipated," Dear said today. "They just had him in a dirty old room. He didn't talk too much (on the flight to Dallas) and I didn't talk to him that much. I told him that unless he wanted to discuss it, he didn't have to. He chose not to.

"I don't know when, if ever, the veil of secrecy will be lifted from this case," Dear said. "Perhaps for the good of the boy it shouldn't ever be. The boy has undergone a tremendous ordeal."

Dear refused to say where Egbert had been staying but denied reports that he was found in Texas or Wisconsin. He said he brought the boy to the Dallas area because he thought there was less interest in the case there.

Dear said as a result of discussions with "some people," he had been expecting the release of the boy since Monday.

"I had been dickering with the people who said they would release him under the right conditions," he said. "First they said Monday and that failed, then Tuesday and that failed and then Wednesday. Finally yesterday afternoon we got a call from the boy."

Dear, who had announced he would wait in his Dallas office for phone calls concerning the case, theorized Egbert knew to call him because he had monitored media reports on his case.

Still, Egbert's return remained as mysterious as his disappearance.

Dear said Egbert phoned him three times within a 30-minute period earlier this week and that the student was crying intermittently.

He said that during the calls he heard a man's voice with a "yankee accent" saying "cool it boy, don't lose your cool." Dear said a $5,000 reward he offered for information about Egbert was never claimed and no ransom was involved in his return.

Myriad theories had been spun about Egbert's disappearance — many inspired by his somewhat bizarre lifestyle.

The young man, who finished high school in two years at age 14, was known to be active in homosexual groups on the MSU campus.

Dear, said, however, "Dungeons and Dragons" proved meaningless in the search.

Dear, who a few weeks ago said he believed Egbert was dead, later told reporters he changed his mind when he failed to find Egbert in underground steam tunnels around the East Lansing, Mich., campus.

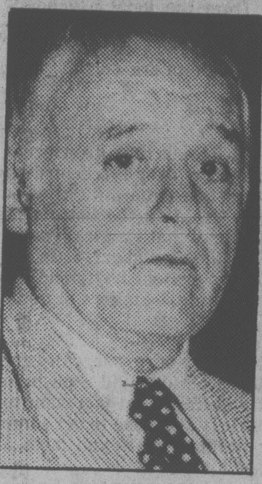
Looking for a unique way to spend the weekend? For $350,000 you can buy the blue-and-orange submarine Lloyd Bridges once used in his television series Sea Hunt. The sub was built 18 years ago for $1.5 million and is now on display with a Miami salvage firm. Before the sale, $100,000 is needed for repairs, including a new 50-horsepower electric motor and about five tons of batteries.

Has Jerry Ford got his periscope up for a look at the political seas and a run at the 1980 U.S. presidential race? Well, not likely, says wife Betty, who squelched rumors that hubby would surface for another run at the post. She said she prefers being an ex-first lady and doesn't understand how someone could be honest and get re-elected anyway. Joan Kennedy, meanwhile, says it wouldn't scare her to be in the White House should spouse Edward decide to seek the post and win. The two have been living apart for two years.



Steiger

Geology student John Sarles of Colorado has no time for politicians — he prefers snakes. His two-metre-long Burmese python ate $3 worth of rats a week, however, and he feared the young serpent would begin craving rabbits and eventually his cat. "In Burma he would probably grow to 30 feet and eat pigs," said Sarles, who sold the snake to a high school student for $150.

The Rev. Depaul Genska, a Roman Catholic priest who specializes in ministering to prostitutes, has urged Pope John Paul II to meet some of them on his U.S. tour and to extend to them a word of kindness and love. In a letter to the pope, Genska wrote that Jesus Christ "did not fear to choose a prostitute — Mary Magdalene — to be the apostle of the apostles. Your words will be evidence that we — the church — have not totally abandoned them."

Fascist dictator Benito Mussolini will live again in a $25 million flick to be produced by director Moustapha Akkad who has signed Rod Steiger for the title role.

There's a New York City law requiring appointment of a "fire guard" in theatres. September Thorpe has the job in one theatre and is to lead the audience out in the event of a blaze. Trouble is, if there's a fire, September will have to lead the audience out nude — herself nude, that is. She performs in the altogether as a cast member of Oh! Calcutta! playing at the theatre.

Dear Abby:

I'm all for taking care of our old people and giving them every possible break. But I think giving every person who reaches age 60 or 65 lower rates for transportation, haircuts, entertainment, etc., is just plain ridiculous?

I have friends and relatives who are loaded with money, but because they're "senior citizens" they take advantage of all these reduced rates and laugh about it.

I would like your opinion — and the opinions of others.

Poor Working Stiff

Dear Stiff:

Most senior citizen rates are intended to attract the senior citizen's business as well as give a break to older folks living on a fixed income.

To separate those who need it from those who don't, and then exclude those who don't, would be a horrendous task. Not to mention the inequities that could result.

Dear Abby:

An acquaintance of mine is about to give birth. She is married, but the baby is not her husband's. He married her when she was six months along, knowing the baby wasn't his, but he loved her anyway. (The baby's real father just took off.)

My question is this: After the baby is born, what should I say to her husband? Would congratulations be appropriate under the circumstances? Or do you think it would be in poor taste? After all, everybody knows he didn't have anything to do with it.

Curious

Dear Curious:

Congratulations are indeed in order. If not for the achievement, for showing himself to be more of a man than the baby's natural father.

Dear Abby:

I had a friend who would have been 84 tomorrow. She was struck by a car and died instantly. She had no family and left no will. She had quite a bit of money that she wanted to go to her favorite charities, but she never got around to putting anything in writing. Consequently, the Ottawa will get it all! She had some valuable furniture and jewelry which was auctioned off. The state will get the proceeds and strangers will have her precious personal possessions.

I am 41, and have learned a valuable lesson. Death may not be a pleasant thought, but it is inevitable and can come without warning, so I have made all my wishes known in writing — with copies to several relatives and friends. Even if things have only sentimental value, if no specific provisions have been made for their disposition, the public administrator can (and does) throw all personal items away. (Letters, pictures, etc.)

Brokenhearted

Dear Brokenhearted:

I agree with your suggestion but, in order to be absolutely certain that one's wishes are carried out, a lawyer should be consulted.

Carleton County jail in Ottawa closed its doors in 1972 and opened the next year as a hostel serving 135 travellers

Wanted: Hostel attitudes

By HUMPHRY DAVY

British Columbia should take a tip from Quebec and provide and manage recreational hostels for people seeking low budget accommodations.

While such hostels wouldn't prove any great source of revenue, they would pay off in later years when the hostellers, many of them students taking profesional or university training, emerge as a monied middle class able to afford regular hotel accomodation and the kind of vacations such people take.

That's the opinion of both European and Canadian students and holidayers interviewed at Cool Aid.

The British, French, German, Belgian, Dutch and Canadians all said they would prefer to stay at hostels at this stage of their life because they are cheaper than regular hotel accommodation.

And while Cool Aid lodging is good, there are too few hostels in B.C. to cope with visitors seeking low-budget shelter.

Quebec has 34 hostels compared to only six in B.C.

Although Cool Aid was set up for youngpeople in need, it is the only place in the Greater Victoria area where recreationists can obtain inexpensive lodging and meals in the summer.

John Hardy of Toronto, said in tourist conscious Quebec, the government attitude towards hostels is excellent.

"They seem to be aware that hostels are a major means of promoting the tourist industry as well as goodwill and understanding," Hardy said.

"For example in the small summer resort area of the Gaspe Peninsula there are four hostels.

Hardy said every summer these hostels cater to thousands of European students or young working men and women, Canadians and Americans. Most have middle-class backgrounds.

"These people return home with good impressions of Quebec and its hospitality. They tell their parents and friends and in the long run it pays off."

Richard Brenz of Hamburg, agreed.

"There is a more relaxed atmosphere in Quebec and and Ontario hostels," he said.

"The former I would say are the best but Ontario doesn't lag far behind."

Daniele St. Laurent, a Quebec student, explained there are two major hostel systems in Quebec.

One is operated by the Canadian Hostelling Association while the the other is subsidized by the provincial government.

"In Quebec they don't turn people away. They find bedding for them even if they have to lay mattresses on the floor. They go out of their way to help visitors. But in Vancouver, I saw many people turned away because of the lack of beds although they could have made room if they had wanted too."

She said many of the Quebec hostels are open 24 hours a day and guests can come and go as they please while in B.C., hostel doors are usually closed at 12 midnight.

"In B.C. you are treated like children - not adults between the ages of 18 and 30. I didn't find the people in the Vancouver hostel very helpful," she said.

If the visitors were not too impressed with hostelling in B.C., they were less so with those in Alberta. They described them as the cheapest and worse in Canada.

Laurie Smith, director of Cool Aid, said the reduction of federal grants is one of the reason why B.C. lacks low cost shelters for recreationists.

"But he added there was another reason why B.C. lagged behind.

"Many people have still a hazy idea of what recreational hostels are all about," he said. "In Europe they have been in operation for a long time. Traveling there is considered part of the education of young men and women."

He also said the high cost of real estate was stalling the establishment of a recreational hostel in the city.

"It would be a pretty costly project to buy a suitable home and to bring it up safety standards," he pointed "Then there would be costs for other facilities, such as showers and kitchen."

Graham Bell, Canadian Hostelling operator for B.C., agreed that the promotion of hostels greatly benefits the tourist industry.

"A recreational hostel is not operated for the poor," he pointed. "It is for people who place a higher priority on the purchase of goods, meals and special attractions rather than on expensive lodgings."

Slapping daughter triggers remorse

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

In a fit of temper I slapped my teen-age daughter. Her ear began to bleed. Could I have injured her ear permanently? I am miserable about this.

D.D.

Dear D.D.

I am certain that your daughter was examined by a doctor and that you now know the extent of her injury. The chances are great that the only residue of this experience will be your daughter's hurt feelings and your own personal guilt. Both of these can be repaired by a mutually respectful talk.

Many times a slap over the ear will cause a "blast" effect to the eardrum, and injure it. Sometimes, the drum may be perforated and with it comes an immediate loss of hearing. Almost always the injury to the drum is temporary and the hearing returns to normal. Many simple devices are used by the ear specialist to encourage the rapid healing of the drum.

Dear Doctor:

Two of my friends go to an osteopath for treatment. Another one goes to a chiropractor. What is the difference between the two?

M.U.

Dear M.U.

Many people confuse the two, although they are entirely different. The only similarity might be that both are involved in the manipulation of the bones and the joints of the body. And here the similarity ends.

A doctor of osteopathy is one who has completed a full four-year course in this approach to medical and surgical treatment. Although he does not have an medical degree, he does have a doctor of osteopathydegree which entitles him to treat patients with drugs and, when qualified, to perform surgery.

Doctors of osteopathy undergo rigorous training and can become specialists in a number of fields. Many have attained recognition and positions in universities and hospitals and are respected members of the medical community.

Hospitals of osteopathy exist in many cities, where, a full range of medical and surgical procedures are performed.

The chiropractor uses manipulative procedures on the spine and the bones of the body, but is not permitted to prescribe drugs not nor perform surgery.

Many patients ask about the value of chiropractic manipulation. I have always felt that when chiropractors respect their limitations they can make a real contribution to their patients. When, however, a chiropractor assumes the role of an all-encompassing diagnostician, there is the potential danger that some basic underlying disease may be overlooked.

"We forgot the food!"

WHEELS

by Mike Lamm

DEAR MIKE: What can I do about windshield wipers that leave a film on the glass? It's very dangerous at night. The film isn't road oil, because I've washed the windshield with detergent several times. Both blades are new. Is there a chance that the glass can be worn or etched? — CAN'T SEE.

DEAR CAN'T: Possibly. To get at the root of the problem, ask yourself: 1) Do I use hot wax at carwashes? 2) Has my car been repainted? 3) Have I run my wipers when dry? Hot waxes sometimes cause hazing in the rain. And when a car is repainted, paint spray often leaks through the newspaper most painters use to mask windshields. You can usually remove the overspray with repeated cleanings with lacquer thinner and clean, CLEAN rags. If you've turned on your wipers on a dry, dirty windshield, yes, it can cause scratching and scoring that never goes away.

DEAR MIKE: My 1977 Olds Delta 88 locks up its rear wheels when I hit the brakes hard. This needn't be a panic stop — just routine. It's especially bad on wet pavement, when the rear will lock up at 20 mph or more. I've had the rear drums turned and relined; also both rear cylinders rebuilt. Front discs are okay. The dealer can find nothing wrong. It's gotten so I'm afraid to drive in the rain. Please help. — ON THE SKIDS.

DEAR SKIDS: Sounds like the wrong equalizer valve in your brake system. Or possibly reversed brake lines at your master cylinder. Have your dealer check both.

DEAR MIKE: My 1973 Mustang is peeling its paint off the front bumper. This rubber bumper is the same color as the body — red, in this case. I've touched up the bumper but the paint flaked right off again. The bumper has some big nicks from lousy parkers. — PEELING PAINT

DEAR PEELING: There's a special epoxy paint made specifically for Endura bumpers. Stores that carry automotive paints stock it, and you can probably buy a pint or so for touchup.

You're invited to send your automotive questions to Michael Lamm, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 95207. Not all questions can be answered personally. Those of broadest reader interest will appear in future columns.

DRESSED TO CHILL is British actress Lynn Redgrave who turned up this week for her first skating lesson, joining classmates aged four to 10 at the Ice Studio in New York. The lesson was videotaped by a cable television studio for an ice skating special to be televised there later this month.

youth clinic

Dear Dr. Levine:

I am a 15-year-old boy and have big problems because I am homosexual.

A few days ago I read in a paper that homosexual people could be set straight in two weeks by counselling. It was researched by Masters and Johnson. I wonder if this is true and if I could get some counselling. I would not like my parents to find out and I was wondering if it was cheap. Please help me.

Answer: You state categorically that you are homosexual, even though you are just 15. You may well be, but at least there is an element of doubt in my mind. You also intimate that you want to become "straight" via counselling or psychotherapy, also an unequivocal position.

I realize that Masters and Johnson have recently come out with statements about homosexuality being an entirely learned response, and as such could be "unlearned." This is still a controversial area, and you will find many experts on both sides of the fence.

My recommendation to you is that you go to an adolescent clinic in your town, or speak to a sexual counsellor or therapist. Even though you are definite about your orientation and desires, I'd suggest that you discuss all this with a professional before you set about "straigtening" yourself out.

As for where to get such counselling, I frankly am not sure, but you could find out by speaking to your own doctor (in confidence, of course). Many psychoanalyists are of the opinion that homosexuality can be "reconverted" back to heterosexuality, and your doctor could probably get names from the local psychoanalytic society. The coast will obviously depend on whether the therapist is covered by your provincial health plan. Be sure, before you embark on this journey.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am 15 years of age and I think that I am pregnant. My periods have stopped for over three months and I have taken a pregnancy test from a kit from a drugstore and have a brown circle on the bottom of the tube. This is supposed to mean that I am pregnant. My parents would drop dead if they found out. I am not sure who the father is, but my present boyfriend offered to help me out and marry me. I am in a state of depression.

Answer: It is important to make sure you really are pregnant. Having missed three periods and a positive test would seem to be pretty definite, but you want to know how far along you are. It is also wise to get some medical care during your pregnancy. If you have a family doctor, arrange to see him.

It is hard to hide a pregnancy from parents. Unless you leave home your bulging figure will let them know eventually, whether you talk to them or not. You are too young to face becoming a parent alone.

There are several choices open to you. To marry your present boyfriend at this time is one of the least desirable decisions you could make. Do not wait any longer before talking to a social worker.

Dear Dr. Cotter: I know cousins are related to each other through their parents. Is it wrong for a boy and girl who are cousins to have a relationship?

Answer: Marriage between first cousins is not regarded as wrong. The relationship is by blood, since normally first cousins share two out of four grandparents. In such a case the intensification of genetic traits should not lead to problems, unless there are known inherited defects you wish to avoid.

Where two brothers have married two sisters, or variations on that, then their offspring share both sets of grandparents, and it seems to me that medical advice should be sought before such cousins marry.

Dear Mr. Vichart: I am a 14-year-old girl. The problem lies with my parents. They don't like the type of people I hang around with because they are older than I am and most of them take drugs. I think my parents are being a bit unreasonble wit a nine p.m. curfew and grounding me for the slightest mistake. I fear that this fall I will have to go to a private school, or get kicked out of the house. I listen to my parents to avoid a fight, but my life is already ruined.

Answer: I can't agree with you that your life will be ruined if your parents don't want you to hang around with older people who use drugs. It is probably their concern that if they don't set up fairly tight rules you will get involved in problem behavior. I can understand that you might not like their method of trying to be sure you are safe, but I wonder if they feel that it is necessary because they are not receiving your full cooperation.

How you let your parents know that you can take some responsibility for yourself is important. Do you let your parents know what you think about the use of drugs, sex, delinquent behavior, and other issues that are of concern to parents, and should be of concern to you? Do you talk about how you would handle different kinds of situations.?

By exchanging ideas and by demonstrating good behavior, you could increase your parents' confidence in your ability to be responsible. Then they may become less restrictive. If a person can control himself, he doesn't need to be controlled.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6323.

AFTERNOON AND EVENING CLASSES IN INTERIOR DECORATING

Joseph Egoyan

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on-location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egoyan to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection and proper use of pictures and accessories.

Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A.ED., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and California College of Arts and Crafts, has taught at Oakland Tech. High, Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experience in retail fields as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years and Ego Interiors in Victoria for eighteen years. Mr. Egoyan is a qualified artist and has exhibited his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.A.R. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show was displayed at The Victoria Provincial Museum, The Burnaby Art Gallery and is now at Ego Interiors.

For the past fifteen years this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egoyan twice yearly in three separate classes each week. At an average of twenty students in each class, more than a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE CLASSES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS, FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY 7:30 to 9 P.M.

CLASSES START SEPTEMBER 24th, 25th, and 26th at EGO INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF FIVE LECTURES ONCE A WEEK, $25.00.

Kill dreams if you must Changing careers in midlife — whether it be out of a desire to fulfil a dream, a sudden firing or demotion — can be a long and often painful process.

But the Dawson Vocational Centre in Montreal tries to bridge the gap by helping middle-aged men consider their futures in stages.

Carol Kahn, a counsellor at the centre, says that most of the men she sees are faced with difficult decisions to make.

"What's important," she says, "is to let people know that they do not have to make a change."

She says that "people often come in at the daydreaming stage."

"They may always have wanted to be one thing and because of circumstances became another."

Kahn says that they want to know whether they can go about becoming that first thing.

What follows is the long process of figuring out the risks and trade-offs that need to be made in order to get from what he is to what he wants to become, she says.

"Sometimes at the end or at the middle of that process, or even right at the beginning, the decision is made that it's not worth it," says Khan.

The outcome depends on the amount of risk the individual is willing, or able, to afford.

A man's willingness to make major changes in his career "hangs on all kinds of other issues," she says.

He has to ask himself questions such as: "How much security do I have? How much do I need? How many children still depend on me? Is my wife going to be willing to work for the next five years?"

A middle-aged man who has been his family's main source of support and is beginning to consider a career change must deal with far-ranging issues.

His decision involves not only himself, but "his community, family and often to a certain extent his bank manager."

In the midst of it all, there is also some sense of urgency.

"It can be hypothesized," says Kahn, "when a man no longer has children to support, he may feel freer to explore his own career options."

But at the same time, "when he reaches that age, he is facing his own older age and he may want to cover his own old age in a way that is secure.

"It may be very much a bind he gets into. Once he's through with his own kids, his parents may need support and his own needs have to be reconsidered in that light."

Psychogeriatrician hits care

The psychiatric needs of the elderly are grossly overlooked, a British psychiatrist told the Ontario Psychogeriatric Association's sixth annual meeting this week.

Tom Arie said the condition exists because most doctors underestimate those needs or do not think the elderly deserve their share of available resources and skills.

"Very old people with failing brains pose what is likely the biggest challenge to health and social services of all such countries as ours," said Arie, professor of health care for the elderly at Nottingham Universtity.

Most provinces will have 20 times as many persons over the age of 80 by the year 2000 — as it had at the beginning of this century — and 10 times as many over 65, he added.

He said the increase was due to reductions in infant mortality and medical advances that help the elderly live longer.

A demented or mildy demented older person needs care because often he is the agent of his own destruction by walking into traffic or setting fire to his own home.

However, Arie said one of the most difficult decisions for a psychiatrist is whether an elderly person must institutionalized.

The rule of thumb is whether a person's refusal to go derives from his mental illness, he said.

Dr. Martin Rodenburg of Kingston Psychiatric Hospital said many of Ontario's elderly are placed under long-term institutional care without adequate assessment because community care facilities are lacking.

He said a study of 193 applications for long-term care revealed that 20 per cent could have lived independently if there had been reasonable community care.

Advance information eases travel gas pains

Joan Watson
for consumers

With all the information coming out of the U.S. on gasoline shortages, Canadians from coast to coast are left wondering how it will affect their travel plans..

You might decide to do what the government is recommending: Stay home and spend your dollars visiting neighboring provinces. However, when you live in British Columbia and have always wanted to drive south along the coast, what are your chances of a hassle free trip?.

Basically, pretty good if you have a little inside information on how to beat the system.

First of all, your Canadian licence plate will get you preferential treatment at some gas stations. It depends on which state you're driving in. Check with the British Columbia Automobile Association before you leave, if you are a member, or the Visitor's Bureau at home or when you cross each state line and ask what special considerations are available for tourists.

You might find that legally you can crash a line-up or avoid the "odd and even" gas rationing system operating in some states Get the ruling in writing.

A lot of gas station operators arw unaware that their states have made provisions to help out visitors.

With your special status be prepared for some black looks from the hapless locals who have to wait while you whistle in. But I'm sure if your tank is close to dry you'll be able to cope with that. Above all, be pleasant.

Another little tip: The police have their own gas supplies and they help out fire trucks, ambulances, taxis and you, the tourist. Check with the police if you're stuck, but hopefully before you run out.

The main thing is to plan ahead. You'd be smart to rule out long-distance weekend travel. In some areas fewer than half the stations are open and regional residents are on the road to recreational spots.

Gas up in the morning, not at night. More stations are open, lines are shorter and with a full tank you can plot your driving route for the day.

Check with AAA or freeway authorities. Many of the fuel stops on thruways are owned by the oil companies and their supply of gas could be more generous. You might miss the beauty of the scenic routes, but if time is a factor you won't want to run out in a quaint village somewhere and have the police tell you that tapping the authorities for gas might work with a state trooper or a larger force but he hasn't any gas to spare.

If you rent a car you also could enjoy a privileged position. This fact is of particular interest to business travellers who fly to a destination and pick up a vehicle for local use. Major car rentals will often fill up their own cars if they can manaage it.

They make a point of giving you a car with a full tank and another depot will oblige by selling you gas as you travel along if their supplies permit. This service is not available to Americans renting a car for use within their own state.

It would be tempting to buy two or three five-gallon containers for stowing in your trunk. Fifteen extra gallons in case of emergency. Don't do it! It's against the law to transport gas in containers in your car in many states. The exception is an emergency situation when a car has run out.

The basis of this restriction is safety. We now have the new explosion-proof containers with the mesh inside. But some authorities still feel that in an accident, these tanks could be ruptured and the contents spilled on an already explosive situation.

Before you take off on your American driving trip, get a gas cap lock. They might not be completely tamper-proof, but they will make things tougher for an amateur thief with plans to siphon off your gas. It does happen.

Poisoning statistics in the U.S. in the last while show a dramatic increase in the number of people who have swallowed gas and most of them had been stealing it.

Because the scene is constantly changing and conditions could worsen before you take off, check your auto club or service station for the latest information or write or telephone Info Road U.S.A., in Vancouver. It is a U.S. government agency that basically gives out brochures on U.S. travel but during the gas crisis they are also compiling regular reports from more than five thousand service stations south of the border.

Rest and reflection

The exigencies of protocol carry even into hospital rooms, as Ofira Navon, the wife of Israeli President Yitzhak Navon, has discovered.

Mrs. Navon has suspended all public activities for the next half-year while she undergoes treatment following surgery to remove a tumor. But the cancellation doesn't affect certain official functions, and the 43-year-old Mrs. Navon spent her convalescent time in the hospital preparing for last week's trip to Israel by President Anwar el-Sadat and his wife, Jihan.

She discovered while reading that Mrs. Sadat was keenly interested in the physical rehabilitation of wounded soldiers and injured children.

So when she got out of the hospital in time for the Sadats' visit, she dispensed with the standard cocktail party and arranged a symposium in Haifa on neurological and orthopedic rehabilitation."

If a son or daughter in college is included on your auto insurance policy, a check with your agent may prove that your rates are lower when a student is away at school and driving only occasionally. Also, when a young adult reaches 21, rates often drop substantially. It pays to keep your insurance agent aware of such information.

The care label in her new, silky shirt said "Hand wash," but she tossed the shirt into the washer, then the dryer. It came out permanently wrinkled. Such labels can be read either as mild suggestions or dire warnings. Until more precise care labels are required on ready-to-wear (likely next summer), experimenting could be costly.

Autumn brides and wedding gift shoppers hoping to buy fine crystal, china or sterling might want to consider putting some of these elegant furnisings in layaway before expected price increases show up in retail stores.

'None of Above' for governor?

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — One of the candidates in the Louisiana governors primary has legally changed his name to "None of the Above" and wants to be listed that way on the Oct. 27 ballot.

Luther Devine Knox changed his name Thursday and asked the secretary of state to make the ballot change. The secretary of state's office referred the request to the attorney general.

Knox, considered one of three minor candidates in the nine-candidate field in Louisiana's open primary, said voters have never had a completely free election in America "because they have not had the opportunity to reject all of them."

"I'm interested in reform — anything to get the people interested again in the election process and get them out to vote. When people don't take an interest that's how you get a Hitler or a Caesar."

Knox said he was told by personnel in the secretary of state office that it would cost $430,000 to change his name on the machine ballots.

Eye-drop goof ends crack pilot's career

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Lt.-Col. Russell Tilton is a man of the air who finds himself earth-bound and about to lose his job because a simple tragic mix-up destroyed his perfect vision.

Tilton's eyesight was impaired last year when mislabelled drops were placed in his eyes during a routine flight physical.

He can see well enough to read, with glasses, but will lose his job as commander of all New Hampshire Army National Guard pilots as a result of the accident, his lawyer says.

Lawyer Richard Couser has filed a $50,000 damage suit in Tilton's behalf against the state and another claim for benefits with the federal government.

He says Tilton will never fly again.

Another $50,000 claim was filed by Tilton's wife, Florette, charging mental and emotional injury, weight gain and other problems.

The skills of the 47-year-old pilot are well known among aviators who have shared the risks of guiding small planes and helicopters on rescue missions through the forested wilderness and jagged peaks of New Hampshire's White Mountains.

In 24 years, Tilton logged more than 10,000 hours and survived three crashes. Then suddenly, on Sept. 9, 1978, it was all over. He hasn't flown since.

TILTON
. . . and wife sue

"I thought my flying days would end when a mountain tip or a pine tree crashed through my cockpit, not because of a mix-up in eyedrops," he said, irony creeping into his voice.

Tilton said "it felt like someone had shoved hot pokers into my eyes" as a senior flight surgeon at Pease Air Force Base in Newington administered drops that should have dilated his pupils for a glaucoma examination.

Instead, the medication turned out to be a caustic solution of hydrogen peroxide and alcohol used to preserve stool samples.

Tilton's eyes were immediately and severely damaged, the claim said, but several doctors who examined Tilton at the time said they expected his vision to "improve with time."

With glasses, he can see well enough for routine activities like driving or watching television. But even with corrective lenses his vision is 20-40, not good enough to pass a flight physical needed to maintain a pilot's licence, military or civilian, the claim said.

Tilton will turn over his command of the state's 12 helicopters and two small planes on Sept. 30.

FBI sniffs new Jordan charge

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The FBI has expanded its investigation of alleged cocaine use by White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan after receiving a charge that Jordan was seen sniffing cocaine at a party in Beverly Hills in October 1977, according to sources.

The new charge was made within the last few days from a person who attended the party at the home of Leo Wyler, an aerospace executive who was finance chairman of the Carter campaign in California in 1976, the sources said.

Under provisions of the new Ethics in Government Act, the Justice Department must investigate any specific criminal allegation against high government officials. The investigation started a few weeks ago when two indicted owners of New York's Studio 54 disco alleged Jordan used cocaine there last year.

The person who made the latest charge against Jordan did not claim to see the White House aide use cocaine, but named another person who allegedly did, the sources said.

Justice Department and FBI spokesmen refused to comment on the incident Thursday night. White House press secretary Jody Powell said, "That story was floating around a year or so ago and has been denied by everyone involved. Some papers checked it out then but didn't publish because they couldn't substantiate the charge.

"Now, because someone apparently made some general allegation to the FBI, they are forced by the new law to investigate and you guys (in the press) feel compelled to write about it."

Powell said Jordan stands by his blanket denial that he ever used cocaine. "This is just not the way the system ought to work," the White House spokesman said. "Someone who is innocent has no protection from innuendo and smear. And once it's done it becomes almost impossible to erase the mark."

Stanfield talks with mayor of Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Robert Stanfield, a special envoy studying the proposed switch of the Canadian Embassy to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv, held a private breakfast meeting today with Mayor Teddy Kollek as his visit to Israel neared a close.

A spokesman for the Jerusalem mayor said the two men discussed general subjects concerning the Israeli capital rather than the proposed embassy move, which has aroused indignation throughout the Arab world.

During the Canadian election campaign, Conservative Leader Joe Clark promised to move the embassy, but the matter was postponed after Clark became prime minister and most Israelis doubt that Canada will stand up to Arab pressure and go through with the move.

Most countries do not recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capital and maintain embassies in Tel Aviv.

The spokesman said Stanfield asked Kollek about Arab-Jewish relations in the formerly divided city and Jerusalem's development since 1967, when Israel annexed the eastern sector.

Since arriving on Monday, Stanfield has met Israeli officials and toured the city. "He's done his homework," the Kollek aide said.

Stanfield leaves Israel this weekend on a Middle East tour that will take him to Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Syria.

SEPTEMBER
Gardening Guide

General Care:
PLANTING and PRUNING
Bulbs and Flowers:
This is the most important month for spring flowering bulb planting. Plant all perennials, wallflowers, violas and pansies.
Trees and Shrubs:
Plant evergreens and all container-grown nursery stock.
Berries and Small Fruit:
Plant raspberries, strawberries, gooseberries, currants, etc. An easy way to propagate boysenberries and blueberries is to bend canes and firmly cover tips in the ground.
Vegetables:
Still time to plant winter vegetables. Lift and dry onions.
Lawns:
Time to plant new lawns and rejuvenate old lawns with application of fall fertilizer.

CONTROL OF GARDEN PESTS:
When buying bulbs, be sure to pick up some Later's Bulb dust. This will prevent Thrips and rot. This dust can also be used when bulbs are stored for winter.
Pear slugs may be found on pear, cherry and prune-plum trees. Use either Later's Methoxychlor or Diazinon. Spray for peach leaf curl with Later's Copper Spray.
If insect problem persists on vegetables close to harvest, dust with Later's 1% Rotenone Dust.
Clean up lawns by killing weeds. Chemicals are available to kill dandelions, plantain, crabgrass, couchgrass, veronica, buttercups, horsetails, blackberries, etc. such as Later's Mecoprop.
Get rid of weeds in driveway, around fence posts, along fences, in ditches, etc. by using a vegetation killer or soil sterilant such as Calcide Hybor D.

FERTILIZING
Fertilizing with high phosphate foods in the fall promotes root growth in lawns without excessive winter topgrowth. Excess fall feeding, or application of fertilizers high in nitrogen, encourages the growth of new and tender foliage tissue which is very susceptible to late season frosts.

Test your child: What's 2/3 of 9?

U.S. 9-year-olds stumped

By ALBERT CRENSHAW
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — American schoolchildren have grown perceptibly worse over the past five years in their ability to solve relatively simple mathematical problems, according to a survey of mathematics education to be released today.

Fractions, percentages and word problems of all kinds — even ones as simple as "what is the sum of 54 and 21?" — defeated large numbers of the 9-, 13- and 17-year-olds tested, the survey found.

Fewer than half of the 13-year-olds and only 13 per cent of the 9-year-olds (mostly fourth graders) could determine "what does 2/3 of 9 equal?" (6).

Slightly more than a third of the 13-year-olds and a bit over half of the 17-year-olds could "express 9/100 as a per cent" (9 per cent).

Nearly a quarter of the 9-year-olds could not correctly answer "what is the sum of 54 and 21?" although if it were set up for them as 21(plus)54, 90 per cent could provide the solution (75).

Performance at all three age levels has declined between 1973, when the tests were last given, and 1978 when this set was run, with the falloff sharpest among the older children.

Educators affiliated with the survey pointed to the discrepancy between computational skills and problem-solving and linked it to the "back to basics" trend that has surfaced in education in the interval between the tests.

"I think we should be asking ourselves if we are creating a generation who can compute but who don't know when to compute," said Roy H. Forbes, director of the National Assessment of Educational Progress, which conducted the survey.

"What is missing is problem-solving performances," Said Dr. Shirley A. Hill of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics. "Often (the pupils) give answers that are not even reasonable."

Hill, a member of a panel of educators who interpreted the test results, pointed to a question in which the children were asked to figure out how many cars would be required to transport a number of people. Many, she said, gave fractional answers.

Hill charged that there has been "an excessive narrowing" of mathematics teaching. Schools have "been responsive to public pressure" to emphasize computation to the point where the teaching of application has been slighted, she said.

The decline, however, parallels a long-term one that has been recorded in college board aptitude scores. That decline, which began in the mid-1960s, encompasses the old math, the new math, and the back-to-basics math, and Hill said that she might be overemphasizing the role of recent curricula.

"One doesn't ever really know" the causes, she said, noting that a study of college board scores several years ago cited "multiple factors" that could be responsible for the decline.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress is a long-term, government-sponsored program to try to evaluate how well American children are doing in a variety of subjects.

Soviet camps hold 5M?

BRUSSELS (AP) — Russian dissident Yuri Orlov says in a report smuggled out of a Soviet prison that at least five million of his fellow citizens are serving time in forced labor camps, the newspaper La Libre Belgique says.

The newspaper quotes Orlov as saying two per cent of the people in the Soviet Union are in prison camps.

La Libre Belgique says Orlov's 20-page typewritten report will soon be published by Cahiers du Samizdat, a Brussels-based monthly that issues texts by Soviet dissidents.

In 1978, Orlov was sentenced to seven years' forced labor and five years' internal exile after he was found guilty of agitation against the Soviet Union. He is in a camp near Perm in the Ural Mountains, 1,500 kilometres east of Moscow.

Ships sink in Baltic

TURKU, Finland (Reuter) — Three crew members died and one was missing after two West German vessels sank in the Baltic Sea during a heavy storm, coast guard officials said today.

The four were from the 880-ton Rebecca, which sank in international waters off Estonia.

A Swedish helicopter took off four surviving crew members and the bodies of three others. The captain was missing.

The crew members of the other vessel, the 496-ton Annika M, were reported to have been picked up by another West German ship.

'Drug of abuse among affluent'

Cocaine trade in the billions for upper, middle classes

By ROBERT LINDSEY

LOS ANGELES — Increasing demand for cocaine among middle- and upper-income Americans is fuelling an illicit, newly white-collar trade that may exceed $15 billion a year, law enforcement officials say.

The investigators say that the smuggling and sale of cocaine have become so profitable, and the odds of being arrested so long, that the trade is attracting a new kind of entrepreneur.

"You're getting a lot of people from legitimate business enterprises, doctors and lawyers in the business," said Jerry N. Jenson, Western regional director of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration here. "Lawyers especially. They get involved in a case representing a defendant and see how much money there is in cocaine and they wind up in the business."

The use of cocaine by members of Hollywood's movie, television and record industry colony has long been well publicized. But investigators here and elsewhere say cocaine is now being sold and used over a broad spectrum of American society: in dark taverns frequented by automobile workers outside Detroit, in the noisy discos of Manhattan's Upper East Side, on college campuses in many states.

Drug for affluent

"Cocaine is now socially acceptable in Philadelphia," says David Abrahamsen, chief of the district attorney's narcotics unit in that city. "It's the drug of abuse among the affluent."

William P. O'Neill, a vice squad detective in Wilmington, Del., estimates that the use of cocaine in his city has doubled in the last two years. "Some people who wouldn't be caught dead in the same state with a heroin trafficker don't think twice about snorting cocaine," he said.

Researchers of drug use say a relatively small percentage of Americans regularly use the drug, which is processed from coca leaves grown high in the Andes Mountains of Peru and Bolivia. But they add that cocaine, like marijuana before it, seems to be losing much of its social stigma, especially among those who can afford its high price. It costs up to $2,000 an ounce, or about $20 for a 15- or 20-minute "high."

Advocates of using the drug maintain that cocaine is not physically addictive and is virtually harmless. They say that it generates a sense of intense self-confidence and optimism, clarity of vision, boundless energy and euphoria and, for some users, enhanced sexual sensitivity.

Its critics assert that it is "psychologically addictive," and they cite studies indicating a recent rapid increase in medical problems related to cocaine, such as ulceration of the nose and allergic reactions.

He said many of today's white-collar cocaine profiteers were proving to be more sophisticated antagonists than the typical drug dealers of the past. They tend, he said, to be more cautious about selling drugs to undercover agents, less likely to allow agents to infiltrate their organizations and more effective in concealing the flow of their money, all factors making prosecution more difficult.

Investigations here indicated, Jenson said, that over the past two years or so drug dealers had invested many millions of dollars from cocaine profits in California real estate, especially luxury homes and commercial property, and in small businesses.

A cocaine-dealing ring that was broken up in Grenada Hills, a Los Angeles suburb, included real estate developers, he said, adding: "They were making so much money that they didn't have time to count it, so they bought two money-counting machines. They had an aircraft and a pilot who stayed at the Beverly Hills Hilton between trips. Over a two-year period, he made 15 to 19 trips, and each delivery he made was worth over $1 million. There was another group that was taking in so much money that instead of counting it, they weighed it."

Similar patterns

Officials in Florida, Texas, Arizona and New York, which, with California, are considered the principal centres of the trade, reported a similar pattern of business and professional men and women without criminal records having recently entered the drug business. A federal narcotics agent in San Antonio said people known as civic leaders were heavily involved in the drug business.

Although the relatively high price of cocaine as against marijuana has made it most popular among the affluent, especially young professionals, show business people, professional athletes and others with substantial incomes, investigators say it is also becoming more popular at the lower rungs of the economic ladder. Some blue-collar workers finance their use of the drug by selling it, according to police officials.

A survey of seventh- through 12th-grade students in New York State last year indicated that 10.8 percent had used cocaine at least once. According to the National Survey on Drug Abuse, in 1977 nearly one of every five Americans from 18 to 25 years of age had tried it at least once, "more than twice the figure" of five years earlier.

The current cocaine boom is the country's second, drug agents point out. Its stimulative powers were discovered by the European upper classes in the final third of the last century, and before long the use of cocaine, packaged sometimes as patent medicine, had become a fad in certain quarters in the United States. Until the federal government banned it in 1906, cocaine was one of the principal ingredients in Coca-Cola.

In a recent report, the Federal Drug Abuse Warning Network said that the number of "cocaine-related" deaths from overdoses or smuggling accidents had almost tripled, to 41, and the number of hospital admissions related to problems with cocaine had increased by 86 per cent since 1976 to 5,433.

In congressional testimony recently, Peter B. Bensinger, the administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, estimated that last year 19 to 23 metric tons of cocaine, about a third of the world's production, was brought into this country, most of it illegally, after being processed in Colombia.

Jenson said that a kilogram (about 36 ounces) of pure cocaine paste, bought in South America for about $10,000, was worth about $40,000 after being smuggled into the U.S. After it is "cut," (diluted with lactose or other material), increasing its original volume by about eight times, the drug's retail value has soared to more than $800,000, he said.

Army camp hit

MANILA (AP) — Police in the Philippines have launched a major assault on a training camp of the Maoist New People's Army, authorities announced Tuesday. A spokesman said an estimated 600 to 700 armed members of the NPA, fighting arm of the outlawed Communist party of the Philippines, are in the area.

Church of Scientology jolted by court ruling FBI raid legal

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - A federal judge Thursday handed a setback to the controversial Church of Scientology by ruling that FBI agents acted legally in seizing 48,000 documents from the sect's offices in Los Angeles in 1977.

The action by U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey in denying the church's motion to suppress the evidence paved the way for a criminal trial of nine Scientologists to start this fall.

The trial, presently set for Sept. 24, will be based largely on documents that the FBI obtained at two Scientology offices in Hollywood on July 8, 1977.

The documents seized in the raids had been stolen, apparently by church members, from offices of the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of Justice, government lawyers have contended.

Richey, who held three weeks of hearings in Los Angeles this summer on the legality of the raids, said he regretted their massive scope and the fact that a religious group was the target. But in a 49-page ruling upholding the conduct of FBI agents, the judge declared:

"No one in our civilized society is pleased by searches of churches lasting 20 hours and involving over 150 FBI agents.

"However, the Fourth Amendment does not provide a mechanical rule that prevents searches of certain places, at certain times, by more-than-so-many people.

"The bottom line is reasonableness. Over-all, the FBI agents who executed the (search) warrants at issue in this case performed a very difficult job in a most reasonable manner."

Church officials reacted sharply to Richey's ruling, saying the judge had given the government "a licence to steal."

"Judge Richey's ruling has given the FBI a green light to ransack the private papers of citizens and groups, especially those involved in social reform," the church said in a statement.

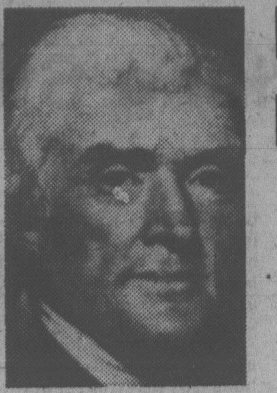
Eleven high-ranking church members, including the wife of Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbard, were indicted by a federal grand jury last year for allegedly conducting a wide-ranging conspiracy that included infiltrating, burglarizing and bugging the Department of Justice, IRS and other federal agencies.

Only nine officials, however, are expected to stand trial. Two others have remained in Great Britain where they are fighting U.S. extradition proceedings.

Richey's ruling on the Los Angeles raids differed from an opinion handed down on Aug. 24 by Chief U.S. District. Judge William B. Bryant, who ruled that a simultaneous FBI raid two years ago on church offices in the District of Columbia was illegal.

Richey, however, said Bryant's ruling would have no bearing on the Scientologists' trial. Documents obtained in the District of Columbia raid were never shown to grand jurors who returned the indictments, and only the Los Angeles documents would be used at the trial, he said.

Born-again Jefferson? Dalai Lama has hunch



JEFFERSON

DALAI LAMA

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI) — The Dalai Lama, exiled spiritual leader of Tibetan Buddhists, says he may be the reincarnation of Thomas Jefferson.

He said during a visit to the University of Virginia, which Jefferson designed, that he was impressed during an earlier tour of the Jefferson Memorial in Washington.

He said he liked the statue's serene expression and the quotations at the monument's base.

"I am very happy," he said of the visit to the monument.

"I felt maybe I am the reincarnation of Jefferson."

His followers believe the Dalai Lama is the 14th reincarnation of Buddha.

ROME (Reuter) — An extremist group that claims to have kidnapped Sicilian financier Michele Sindona in New York last month, has sent a photograph of the banker and a list of demands to a Roman lawyer, police sources said today.

Working Stiffs: Shades of Harold Lloyd

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Television programs often "borrow" from the past — but they usually don't reach back as far as Harold Lloyd.

But Lloyd — whose clumsy stupidity always had him teetering high above disaster — springs to mind in the premiere episode of Working Stiffs, as Michael Keaton hangs from the hands of a clock atop a Chicago skyscraper, encouraged by Jim Belushi crouched on an outside ledge.

In case you haven't guessed, Working Stiffs is as subtle as a pratfall, something viewers will discover when the half-hour situation comedy makes its debut on CBS Sept. 15.

The situation in this comedy concerns Belushi and Keaton, older and younger brothers with the combined IQ of Laurel and Hardy.

They talk their uncle into hiring them as janitors in the office buildings he owns, which is run with time-clock efficiency by Neil Thompson.

At least, it used to be run that way before Keaton and Belushi arrived.

Belushi's character is bossy and brash ("I'm talking equal partners, 60-40," he tells his kid brother) and not very bright ("All right, all right, 60-60," he concedes).

Keaton is fast-talking, sly, and accustomed to being bullied by his stronger brother.

The boys work well together and if you like slapstick, this promises to be a fast-talking, fast-moving show with lots of action and little sense.

Lots of action and little sense also could describe the plot of The Paradise Connection, but the CBS made-for-television movie has som" plus factors going for it, also.

Paradise, which also goes on Sept. 15 has as its major drawing card Buddy Ebsen, old "Barnaby Jones" himself (wait till you see his Kung Fu), along with his daughter, Bonnie, a brief appearance by a couple of other younger Ebsens, and some of the loveliest scenery this side of Hawaii Five-O.

"The Paradise Connection" ends like a pilot, leading into a series that could be titled "The Defenders in Paradise." But that's not possible while Barnaby Jones lives on in the ratings.

Talks stress tight budgets

OTTAWA (CP) — Two days of British-Canadian cultural affairs talks concluded this week with agreement to limit tight budgets to exchanges of solo or small ensembles of artists and performers for the next year or more.

The talks, held every two years and now in their 10th year, included representatives of the British and Commonwealth Office, the British Council and the Arts Council of Britain.

Scott's World

By Vernon Scott

Sexy . . . and with reason

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — England's Joan Collins, thanks to her autobiography, movie roles and a surprising public poll, remains a sex symbol at age 45, long after most glamor girls have packed it in.

Earlier this year a London publication polled a cross-section of Englishmen from 25-35 asking who was, in their opinion, the sexiest woman the world.

Collins won, followed by Raquel Welch, Farrah Fawcett and Jacqueline Onassis.

Doubtless, Joan's recent movie, The Stud — a hit in England due for release in the United States this month — and her autobiography, Past Imperfect, contributed to her victory.

Past Imperfect relates her romantic flings with a number of men, including Ryan O'Neal and Harry Belafonte. It has never been published in this country.

In The Stud Joan appears nude in several scenes playing a sophisticated woman with a ravenous sexual appetite.

In any case, Joan finds herself inescapably possessed of a lurid reputation not altogether unjustified.

"Yes, I am a sensual woman," she says. "Either you've got sex appeal or you ain't. If you've got it, you can't very well disguise it. If not, there's not much chance of getting it.

"I thought the poll in England was a hype until I went shopping in Harrods (a London department store) and one of the clerks told me he had voted for me. So I guess it was an honest tabulation.

In The Stud, a novel written by her sister Jackie who also wrote the screenplay, Joan portrays a wealthy married woman who escapes boredom by opening a discotheque as a means of enticing young men to her bed.

"In one scene she seduces him in an elevator in which she's hidden a video camera. Then she shows the tape to her girlfriends for laughs. She's looking for kicks and ways to fight boredom.

"Fontaine is beyond liberation. Sex is her hobby."

The success of The Stud (being released by American International) has spawned a sequel, The Bitch, in which Fontaine is seen after she is divorced by her multi-millionaire husband and deserted by her playmate, the stud.

Joan's husband, Ron Kass, was involved in the production of both films. They've been married eight years and are the parents of a seven-year-old daughter.

They apparently are happily married despite Joan's candor about her private life, including her two previous marriages.

For that reason she says she will never have the book published in the United States, although it was a best-seller in Britain.

"I accepted a $100,000 advance from Warner Books for the publishing rights in the United States," Joan said. "But the reaction to my life story in England was so upsetting I sent back the cheque.

"Now I'm working on another book. This one is about beauty and sex but it doesn't include anything about my private life."

"Cindy got three games just like the one I gave her, but she liked mine best."

Contract Bridge — B. Jay Becker

You have the following hand, both sides vulnerable:

♠974 ♡10 ◇Q76 ♣AK9873

1. Your partner bids One Notrump and your right-hand opponent bids Two Hearts. What would you bid now?

2. Your partner bids One Spade and you respond Two Clubs. Partner bids Two Spades. What would you bid now?

3. Your right-hand opponent bids Three Hearts and, after two passes, your partner doubles. What would you bid now?

4. Your partner bids One Spade and you respond Two Clubs. Partner bids Two Notrump. What would you bid now?

1. Three notrump. You can't guarantee three notrump, but the odds heavily favor making it. Partner is extremely likely to have at least one heart stopper, and nine tricks in notrump are therefore very probable.

Five clubs could theoretically be a better contract, but there's no practical way of investigating that possibility without giving up on the notrump game. You could bid three clubs over two hearts, but most players treat this bid as non-forcing and that might end the auction.

2. Four spades. True, you have only 9 high-card points, but game is neverthelss probable after partner rebids spades, showing at least five of them. Your singleton heart has enormous value, It woud be overly cautious to bid only three spades, because you shouldn't expect partner to lose four tricks.

3. Five clubs. You can't afford to bid only four clubs, since you'd also do that with Q-x-x-x-x-x of clubs and nothing else. You represent your values fairly accurately by jumping to five clubs. If partner passes you'll probably make just five; if he raises to six clubs you'll probably make that also. To respond only four clubs would not do your hand justice.

4. Three spades. You have the values for a raise to three notrump, but, considering your 6-3-3-1 distribution, notrump should not be your first choice. If your partner has five spades, the hand will almost surely play better in spades.

The three spade bid (forcing) asks partner to choose between spades and notrump, depending mostly on his spade length. It is best here to let partner make the final decision.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, September 15, 1979
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spotlight on home, personal environment, relations with family members. Security, redecorating, possible change of residence—these areas command attention. Your opinion is sought on luxury item or art object. Be diplomatic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Refuse to be pushed, cajoled, rushed into making premature judgments. Key now is to be selective. Ideas and suggestions abound—take your time in selecting quality material. Impatient relative believes in dictum, "Misery loves company." Don't play the game!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on production, financial prospects, investments, the enhancing of your security. Older individual will provide what had been missing. You are on brink of a profitable discovery. Investors could be beating a path to your doorstep!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You gain added recognition, better distribution and display of products. Take initiative, highlight originality, independence of thought and action. Your instinct about what is right and what should be discarded is likely to be on target.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Obtain valuable hint by studying Cancer message. Take steps to eradicate groundless doubts, fears. Areas previously dark will receive benefit of greater light. You make new contact which aids in finding outlet for creative resources.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You find way of transforming wishes into actualities. Aquarius, Leo, Cancer persons figure prominently. One who taught you in past is due to make reappearance. Intuitive intellect serves now as reliable guide. Business investment pays dividends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Reputation, honor, prestige could be on the line. Make inquiries, ask questions—answers will be forthcoming from "surprise" sources. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure prominently. What failed twice is likely to succeed on third try.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Good lunar aspect coincides now with travel plans, locating proverbial escape hatch. Time of confinement is finished—you are ready to spread emotional wings. Aquarius, Taurus persons help in pursuit of "higher education." Publish views.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on relationship that is more serious than originally anticipated. Money and love dominate your personal scenario. Gemini, Virgo and another Sagittarian figure prominently. Be ready for exciting changes, speculation and adventure.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be discreet, go slow, play cards close to chest. Home situation commands attention. Family member has money question and may expect you to have answers. Be positive of legal sources, rights and permissions. You will pass an important "test."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Read between the lines, study fine print, avoid get-rich-quick schemes. Perfect techniques, streamline procedures and confront associate with "facts of life." Pisces, Virgo natives play significant roles. Check medical-dental appointments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Imprint style. Make your own mark; this is your creative power play day. Accent on change, variety, intensified relationship an a very special emotional commitment. You gain access to confidential data. Capricorn individual and the number 8 figure prominently.

IF SEPTEMBER 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY major domestic adjustment or change of residence should occur in October. During September, you gain through written word and through exciting, new contacts. Love is very much a part of your personal scenario. You have unusual voice, could make an excellent teacher and you are perceptive to point of being psychic. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio individuals play significant roles in your life.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"You'll like our new house," said Terry. "We didn't move far. Only a short way down the road and still in the low hundreds."

Karen smiled. "That's good. What's the new number?"

"Something like the old one in a way," Terry replied. "If you add the old one and the new numbers and multiply by their difference, you get one less than their product."

That's what the man said, so what were the numbers?

309 IN MEMORIAM

EDWARDS - In loving memory of John F. Edwards, who passed away September 14, 1978. Fondly remembered by his wife Muriel, son William & Judy.

TOOKER — In loving memory of my dear wife, Mary who passed away, 14 September, 1977.
Time goes by each passing year
But our time together will always linger..
—Sadly missed by husband, Eddie.

309 IN MEMORIAM

DAVIS - In loving memory of our beloved Husband and father Clarence, who was laid to rest September 14, 1976.
Today recalls a memory
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of him today,
Are the ones who loved him best.
The flowers we lay upon his grave
May wither in a day.
But the love for him who lies beneath,
Will never face away.
Always remembered, your loving wife and family and granchildren.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in

Bylaw bursts ESP bubble

WINNIPEG (UPC) — British clairvoyant Simon Alexander failed to foresee the effects of an obscure Winnipeg by-law and as a result was forced to cancel a scheduled performance at the Winnipeg Art Gallery.

A spokesman for the city's licence department says clairvoyants, psychic readers, palm readers and ard readers must be city residents for 12 months before they can apply for a licence to entertain.

Algeria still holds Bella

PARIS (Reuter) — Former Algerian president Ahmed Ben Bella is still being held in a guarded villa more than two months after Algerian authorities announced his release, his French lawyer said Thursday. The Algerian authorities announced on July 4 that Algeria's first president had been freed after 14 years' detention.

Fresh flavor is the bonus

Local vegetable plots are giving more than normal returns this year perhaps because of the dry warm days of July and August. With adequate water supply, growth was rapid, and vegetables produced good results.

The dollar value calculated at current prices must have been satisfying too, and the fresh flavors of home-grown produce a bonus.

But with September come the vegetable from seeds sown back in July and August. The end of the bounty is not in sight.

Early sown peas and beans have been stripped of their last pods and the plants pulled from the ground to go on the compost heap. Take time to go over the vines once more as I did. You may find another small picking, more mature to be sure, but maturity means a richer taste.

Pea-beans grown for the first time, and soybeans, bore such large crops that it was impossible to keep up with them as fresh green beans. They were deliciously flavored that way; quite different from conventional bush beans.

As beans were found to be maturing, they were left on the vines and only the new young ones were picked for the last couple of weeks. This system stopped production of new pods. The older ones were hastening to ripen.

Just before the showers on the weekend, the vines were stripped of the dry pods which were then spread on trays in an airy shed to dry completely. They are now awaiting another rainy day to have time to shell them. The dry beans will be stored in glass jars in a dark dry cupboard to use in winter meals.

July sowings of both peas and beans are now bearing, and young Scarlet Runner beans can still be found, though many large older pods are still on the vines.

Runner pods grow to an enormous size with many beans. When they become dry but before they open, they will be picked. They even stand a few degrees frost because of the thickness of the pods. The shelled large purple beans will make a good meal or two in late fall.

Squash vines are still producing fruits. Use the small ones each day, leaving larger ones to mature enough to keep a few weeks. Hubbard, Acorn, Buttercup and Butternut are the true keepers for winter. They must develop hard outer skins to protect the flavorful flesh inside. When finally gathered before a hard frost the skin should be firm to the fingernail test. If the nail with moderate pressure punctures the skin, the fruit will not keep so put it aside to use within the next few weeks.

Large size Zucchinis that have lost their delicate tenderness can be kept for later use; some need to be used in various baking dishes and in breads and cookies, others will keep through to early winter.

Tomatoes are ripening faster than we can use them, and that is usually three times a day. The bright red fruits will be welcomed for canning and juicing by many homemakers.

The golden yellow ones with lower acidity must NOT be processed by the simple boiling water bath method since there is a high risk of the deadly botulism developing. A pressure canner method is recommended as for other low-acid type foods. Follow instructons exactly.

Lifting potatoes from warm soil is still a major thrill of gardening for me. I feel that every child should have the adventure of discovering this wonderful store of energy below the surface of the garden soil. There is so little indication above ground now the green tops are dying down. As the careful turning of the soil continues, the results of planting one small piece of potato are realized. For true adventure, take your time in lifting the potato crop.

If you are already taking in the fall show of Victoria Horticultural Society today and Saturday at the First United Church hall, you can double your weekend pleasure by going over to see the Salt Spring Island Fall Fair at the elementary school at Ganges. The grounds opens at 10 a.m. Saturday and there will be much to see — old farm equipment, a mini-museum, novelty events, a wood-bucking and shake-splitting contest, an egg toss and beef barbecue. The day will wind up with a dance in the secondary school auditorium at 8:30.

Have a wonderful late summer weekend.

Meet Maggie's look-alike

Virginia Podessar says looking like Margaret isn't all bad

TORONTO (CP) — Strangers in the street demand her autograph. Photographers hound her in clubs and restaurants. Stewardesses stare at her on flights.

And occasionally, some particularly aggressive fan refuses to believe her assertion that she is not Margaret Trudeau.

She's not.

Virginia Podessar, a Toronto model, just looks remarkably like her.

Even people who know or have worked with Mrs. Trudeau, such as hairdressers, say there's something in Ms. Podessar's smile, her voice, the tilt of her head, that brings the estranged wife of the former prime minister to mind.

"I personally feel I don't look that much like her," says Ms. Podessar, 25. "It must be just flash moments, the angles, something that happens.

"Yet it always comes as a bit of a small shock. When it happens I say, that can't be, it's impossible, they just have an imprint from some photograph they've seen.

"I still feel I'm my own person."

But she admits most people make the mistake and that it's not all bad. It has just won her her first acting job.

She has been signed to play the president's wife in a new Canadian film, The Kidnapping of the President, based on the novel by Charles Templeton.

Producer John Ryan and director George Meneluk cast her because of the resemblance. They thought it would give the film the Canadian flavor they want it to have.

"Acting is someting I've long aspired to try," she said in an interview. "This Margaret Trudeau image helped me get my foot in the door and that's great."

As the Maggie connection has grown, so has her curiosity — and mixed feelings — about her double. She says she has recurring daydreams about meeting her and wonders, if they passed each other in the street, whether they'd recognize — or terrify — each other.

"I'm sad for her. I know now what it's like to be a celebrity — in these brief moments they think I'm her. You don't stand a chance against the public."

Tight gasoline supplies seen

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government hopes it will not have to impose oil and gas rationing this winter, but supplies will be tight, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn said Thursday.

"Clearly, the department is having ongoing monitoring with regard to the whole supply situation, and we're very much looking at that in the Canadian interest," the energy minister said.

"It is going to be a tight situation, but hopefully we will be able to get through the winter without having to implement rationing," Hnatyshyn said as he entered a meeting of the inner cabinet.

"We will be taking steps to ensure that there are enough supplies for our own use."

Earlier this week, Hnatyshyn said light crude exports to the United States could be halted this winter. He told reporters Thursday, however, northern states could continue to receive supplies by trading U.S. oil for Canadian.

Last spring, after forecasts of oil and gas shortages, the former Liberal government passed legislation to allow emergency rationing of petroleum across the country.

Hnatyshyn said the Conservative government was "thinking very hard" about more effective conservation measures. "I am personally concerned about the consumption pattern ... and disappointed that Canadians have not cut back."

Energy deparment officials have been working throughout the summer on a conservation program to help make Canada energy self-sufficient. Officials expect the program to be announced this fall.

Hnatyshyn said he had ordered the National Energy Board to assess Canada's ability to export oil each month and decide the amount of surplus light crude oil that could be shipped to the United States.

"It's simply giving them notice of the fact the 55,000 barrels that we have been exporting could be on an exchange basis," he said. In addition to net exports, Canada also swaps oil with the United States.

Gold soars a record $13

Times News Services

Gold took a big jump in Europe today to open at yet another record price spurred by Thursday's late surge on the New York bullion market.

The price catapulted by $13.250 in Zurich, topping last week's record leap of $11, to open at a record $346.25 U.S. an ounce. In London, the price jumped $10.875 to $346. ($402.29 Canadian, at today's exchange rate.)

"The gold market has gone berserk," said precious metals expert Peter Gignoux of the international brokerage house of Bache and Co. in London.

Gignoux said much of the gold buying was by dealers frantically trying to cover short positions taken earlier this week in the belief that gold prices would go down.

A number of analysts had predicted price corrections following a $40 rise in a month. And gold prices did subside markedly in the last two days after touching an intra-day high of $341.75 in Zurich Sept. 6.

The price slipped a fraction at the morning fix in London to $345.750.

"The overnight jump in New York caught the market by surprise and caused heavily renewed speculative demand," a dealer in Zurich said.

Mocatta and Goldsmid reported the market was nevertheless steady. "Gold was strong in London this morning but actual business was steady," a dealer said.

One explanation for the jump came in reports of a possible gold shortage because of lower South African sales.

There is a physical shortage of gold for several reasons, according to New York analyst Louis Vigdor, vice president of bullion dealers Manfra Tordella Brookes.

"While South Africa releases production figures, we don't know how much gold it is actualy selling. There are rumors, which we haven't been able to confirm, that they might be trading gold for oil from a non-OPEC country."

Vigdor said he also believes some gold being sold by the United States has been disappearing into central banks. "For example, look at West Germany's gold reserve figures, which have built up to around 90 million ounces," he said.

This appeared to confirm a claim by Canadian fiancial analyst and noted "gold bug" Vernon Myers, who said Thursday the central banks were buying gold and this presaged a major financial collapse.

Myers, who now lives in the U.S., a fugitive from Canadian tax authorities, told a meeting of financial analysts that gold would continue to soar as the west reels under the collapse of paper money. (See page 16).

The U.S. dollar opened slightly firmer on most money markets, although the rate in Frankfurt was unchanged at 1.8130 marks.

In Tokyo, the U.S. dollar closed at 223.975 yen today, up from 222.125 Thursday.

Dealers said the jump was due to rising interest rates in the United States, making the dollar more attractive.

Goods which cost $100 in 1971 had almost doubled in price to $192.80 in August, Statistics Canada reported today.

And while the the August price rise of four-tenths of one per cent was the smallest monthly increase this year, it pushed the annual inflation rate up to 8.4 per cent from 8.1 per cent a month earlier.

The federal agency credited the small monthly increase to a seasonal decline in food prices, but said the annual inflation rate was pushed upward when combined with increases in the previous 11 months.

Statistics Canada said its monthly consumer price index, which measures the cost of a basket of commonly-purchased goods and services, rose to 192.8 in August from 192.1 in July. A year ago it stood at 177.8, and in 1971 it was $100.

Put another way, the purchasing power of a 1971 dollar in August was about 52 cents — virtually unchanged from July — down from 56 cents a year earlier.

Statistics Canada said food prices declined seven-tenths of one per cent in August after an increase of 1.7 per cent in July.

Prices for food consumed at home in August were 9.8 per cent higher than a year earlier while the cost of food away from home was up 11.9 per cent.

Statistics Canada also noted its monthly survey found prices for alcoholic beverages consumed in licensed premises were up as were the costs of men's haircuts and women's hairdressing services.

The increase in the annual inflation rate to 8.4 per cent pushes it closer to the nine per cent that Finance Minister John Crosbie has predicted will be the average inflation rate this year. That compares with 9 per cent inflation in 1978, 8 per cent in 1977, 7.5 per cent in 1976, 10.8 per cent in 1975 and 10.9 per cent in 1974.

Still to be recorded in the inflation index are the higher gasoline and heating oil prices resulting from a $1-a-barrel increase in the domestic price of oil that took effect July.

Economic forecasters have predicted little relief in inflation rates in the year ahead, particularly with still-higher energy prices looming.

Vancouver shows the lowest annual inflation rate of the cities surveyed by Statistics Canada, and Victoria, while not included in the survey, is considered to have similar trends.

Storm victims in blackout

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) — Thousands of storm area residents remained without electrical power today in the wake of hurricane Frederic.

Armed National Guard troops aided local and state police in patrolling expensive beachfront homes and businesses to protect against looters.

Police and Civil Defense authorities said they had decided to reopen the Pensacola Beach, Fla. area today, but only to residents. Officials said some residents would have to be taken to their homes by shuttle buses because of damage to roads and debris.

The suburban area of about 1,000 homes was especially hard hit by the hurricane that smashed ashore Wednesday night and early Thursday. Police said a curfew would be in effect from 8 p.m. until 6 a.m. to discourage looters.

President Carter today flew to the Gulf Coast for an aerial inspection of the damage caused by the hurricane's 200 kph winds.

Carter planned to make a helicopter inspection of damage in the Mobile area, then fly to Pensacola to view the destruction there, before returning to Washington by mid-afternoon.

In Mobile, a 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew was also in effect and police have arrested 15 people during the night for curfew violations. However, there were no new arrests during the night for looting.

Mayor A.J. Cooper of nearby Pritchard, Ala., ordered his officers to give looters two warning shots and then "shoot to kill" if they don't surrender.

Alabama Gov. Fob James warned looters they were "taking their lives in their hands" and said they would be "dealt with in the most severe manner" by guardsmen armed with M16 rifles. Sixteen looting arrests were made on Thursday.

The resort communities of Gulf Shores and Dauphin Island in Alabama were almost uninhabitable today. A draw bridge that was Dauphin Island's only ground link to the mainland was destroyed. Police and guardsmen used four-wheel drive vehicles to reach Gulf Shores, where most of the vacation homes stretching from the town 40 kilometres to the tip of the Fort Morgan Peninsula were heavily damaged or destroyed. Roads there were covered with several feet of sand.

Several motels at Gulf Shores, which depends on tourism for its economy, were levelled.

Three in race for mayor's job

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Ald. John Hayes today announced he is running for mayor of Victoria, and similar but semi-official announcements quickly came from fellow aldermen Murray Glazier and Bill Tindall.

Tindall, manager of the Better Business Bureau, said it's been known for several months he's going to run.

"Later this month I'm going to make an official announcement on it."

Glazier, who is chairman of the Capital Regional Disrict, couldn't be reached by the Times today but he told a radio station that he, too, is in the race.

"I'm running for mayor but I just haven't decided when to announce it."

The ambitions of both men have been a poorly-kept secret for months, but Hayes is the first candidate officially to announce his entry into what is expected to be a crowded race for retiring Mayor Mike Young's office.

"What we need is a nonpartisan mayor who can get council operating as a team," Hayes told a press conference today.

The 37-year-old property appraiser quit his job 10 days ago at Morguard Properties Ltd. to run for mayor. He was elected to council in early 1976 in a byelection brought about by the resignation of Sam Bawlf.

His platform is a mixture of a more open municipal government, promises of more policemen and warnings about serious problems that the city will have to deal with in the 1980s.

"There's a feeling that we're still somewhat of a backwater of North America and eccentric," said Hayes. "It isn't so.

"We're faced with some big city problems and we

Airline ticket fraud netted agent $1.5M

NEW YORK (AP) — A 28-year-old travel agent pocketed more than $1.5 million in ticket sales from three airlines then apparently flew out of the country, authorities said Thursday.

The scheme, which took advantage of a built-in lag time in airline ticket-accounting procedures, may have netted the agent as much as $3 million, depending on the value of airline tickets still outstanding, Brooklyn District Attorney Eugene Gold said.

Gold said Chaim Einhorn has been indicted on 12 counts of grand larceny.

The indictment alleges Einhorn failed to report and pay for approximately 2,000 airline tickets ordered over a 10-month period from British Airways and Trans World and Pan American airlines.

Gold said the agent opened Vacation Planning Center, a Flatbush Avenue travel agency, in January 1978, authorities said. The agent pocketed revenues from the sale of tickets from April 1978 to February 1979.

Airlines agents, investigating debit memos for $136,000 in outstanding tickets, discovered in February that Einhorn had disappeared with his family and abandoned his agency, Gold said.

Gold said the agent wrote himself a $2,100-ticket from New York to Zurich, Switzerland, Tel Aviv, Israel, and London.

Einhorn allegedly wrote and sold tickets, but never submitted weekly sales reports to the Air Traffic Conference, an airline enforcement agency that regulates the sale of airline tickets. The reports document sales and authorize payment for tickets from the agent's bank account.

Gold said the agent was able to bilk the airlines because of an accounting procedure that requires airlines to match a carbon of the ticket submitted by the agent with the carbon submitted by the passenger on boarding the flight. The lag is at least 90 days at TWA, six months at Pan Am and nine months at the London-based British Airways.

When ticket carbons were not matched, the airlines submited debit memos to the Air Traffic Conference, whose officials investigated and notified the district attorney.

Foothills line gets B.C. vote

DELTA (CP) — The provincial government has endorsed the Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd. proposal for an all-land pipeline route to carry Alaskan oil south.

At an impromptu news conference Thursday, Premier Bill Bennett said the endorsement is part of the government's energy policy to be disclosed prior to the first ministers' conference in November.

But Bennett said he will oppose any plans to ship Alaskan oil south by tanker along the B.C. coast.

Bennett said the $1.5-billion Foothills pipeline would take advantage of the proposed energy and transportation corridor along the Alaska Highway, which passes through northeastern B.C.

"We reject and oppose those proposals that would put tankers off B.C. waters or into the fragile area of waters that would be affected by B.C.," Bennet said.

The pipeline parallels the proposed $15-billion Alaska Highway gas pipeline to transport natural gas from Prudhoe Bay to the continental United States.

Bennett said he was disclosing the government's endorsement now because of the time factor. U.S. President Jimmy Carter has promised a decision on an oil pipeline by December and Canada's National Energy Board is to hold hearings in October.

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said the all-land route was one of four alternatives being considered.

Verigin denies torch order

NELSON (CP) — Orthodox Doukhobor leader John J. Verigin denied Thursday that he has the power to place a curse on anyone nor has he ever told anyone to burn buildings or commit any acts of violence.

Verigin repeated the statements during his two-hour testimony at his county court trial in this southeastern British Columbia community on three charges of conspiracy to commit arson.

"I say before people and before God, never have I ever in my lifetime counselled or even suggested burning or bombing — that would be contrary . . . to what I revere in life," Verigin said.

"Never have I been with them for their stated purpose," Verigin replied firmly when questioned about statements by several acknowledged Sons of Freedom Doukhobors who testified that Verigin ordered them to burn various buildings.

Asked by his lawyer Harry Rankin, if he has the power to curse people, he replied: "Good God, no; I am an ordinary human being with no supernatural powers . . . these statements by fanatics . . . take me back to the dark ages."

Freedomites who testified for the Crown said that Verigin had threatened them with a seven-generation curse if they did not carry out his orders.

"In folklore among peasant people it is a common expression 'You be cursed,' when one is angry," Verigin said.

"In Doukhobor mythology, the only reference to a curse is made if you do something wrong against God's will, God's wrath will be upon you — following the principle of you will reap what you will sow."

Crown counsel Dennis Overend of Vernon asked Verigin about Freedomites who testified against him, and who said they consider him their leader.

"I have never accepted their regard in that sense," Verigin replied. "I do not want to associate with anyone who commits acts of violence."

Verigin testified that he had a drinking problem, but

THE BYRDS
SO THEY'VE DONE SOMETHING ABOUT EXPLODING BOTTLES; WHEN WILL THEY DO SOMETHING ABOUT EXPLODING PRICES?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Until last week, Jim Dillon was a struggling artist who drove a bus to pay his bills.

But now the bus ride is over for the 36-year-old North Vancouver resident. He's still an artist, but he no longer has to struggle because he was presented Thursday with a Loto Canada cheque for $1 million.

Dillon was one of six winner's in last Friday's draw.

"I've only bought about a half dozen tickets before," said Dillon.

"I would also like to take a little sailing trip and I want to establish myself as an artist."

Dillon quit his job as a bus driver Monday.

CN sells Hotel Fort Garry

WINNIPEG (CP) — The long-rumored sale of Hotel Fort Garry was confirmed Thursday with an announcement by CN Hotels that the 65-year-old landmark has been sold to Harvard Investments Ltd. of Winnipeg.

Takeover date for the 265-room hotel, officially opened Dec. 23, 1913 and situated near the junction of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers in Winnipeg, is Nov. 1. Sale price was not disclosed.

The sale was announced jointly in a news release by J. G. Cormier, CN's vice-president of public affairs and hotels, and J. D. Perrin, president of Harvard Investments Ltd.

They said the property will continue to operate as a hotel and CN is prepared to provide management assistance for up to six months.

Bell, CNCP to interconnect

OTTAWA (CP) — Bell Canada and CNCP Telecommunications are attempting to work out technical aspects of providing interconnected services to the business public, a CNCP spokesman has said.

Jim McDaniel, CNCP general sales manager, said during a government computer conference that the service will be the result of a three-year battle by CNCP to achieve interconnection with the Bell Canada network.

The federal cabinet in August rejected an appeal by Bell and other telephone companies to defer a decision by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission ordering the link-up.

McDaniel said Bell refused to meet with CNCP until after the cabinet decision, but now Bell was co-operating in a friendly and professionaal way.

McDaniel said interconnection is an evolutionary step in Canadian telecommunications and the benefits would be long-term rather than immediate.

On the curb exchange, Oriana Development was down ½ at .40½ on 127,000 shares and Burlington Gold was up .03 at .79 on 57,700.

New York

The stock market rallied sharply today, shrugging off the rapid spread of a record 13 per cent prime lending rate in the banking industry.

Many of the nation's banks raised their prime rates this morning to 13 per cent, joining New York's Chase Manhattan Bank at that record level. But the news came as no surprise to Wall Street.

London

The London stock market firmed up near the close of moderate trading today.

The Financial Times index was up .9 to 468.5.

Golds, banks and industrials advanced. Oils were steady.

Canadian stocks eased.

L.J. BUSH

The appointment of L.J. Bush as Vice-President of Canadian International Paper Company has been announced by C.S. Flenniken, President and Chief Executive Officer. Mr. Bush joined the company in 1947 and, after holding various positions in the financial area, was appointed Comptroller in 1967. This appointment is effective immediately.

A sampling of new crop

Brand new programs and season premieres are now lighting up the tube so frequently that it's quite a job just to keep up. This week, for example, brings its own new crop and Prevue offers this sampling, just a few of the many:

On Saturday, there's the season's premiere of 30 Minutes featuring a profile of a real-life "Rocky" and a unique community program aimed at preventing teenage suicide. Co-editors Christopher Glen and Betsy Aaronare examine these subjects on the season's premiere at 1:30 p.m., on Channel 7.

Sunday offers an opportunity to go to the opera or, if you are more adventurous, visit the Congo. Channel 9 viewers will be watching the shining culmination of a long and varied history of the opera in the American West, when the San Francisco Opera Company performs La Gioconda, Sunday, at 2 p.m. The performance stars soprano Renata Scott and tenor Luciano Pavarotti in this tragic drama about unrequited love in Venice. Henry Morton Stanley, the first white man to travel the length of the Congo River, is the fascinating focus of this week's episode in the exploration series Ten Who Dared. After Dr. Livingstone's death, Stanley announced his intention of completing the exploration the doctor had left unfinished. Henry Morton Stanley (1840-1904) can be seen on Channel 9 Sunday, at 10 p.m.

On Monday, there's an interesting program about a man who said what he meant and meant what he said — none other than feisty Harry S. Truman, former president of the United States. Truman surges through a wide emotional range — from the decision to drop the atom bomb to a light-hearted workout at the piano — while offering candid opinions on the likes of Richard Nixon, Dwight Eisenhower, Joseph Kennedy, FDR, Fidel Castro and General Douglas MacArthur. Channel 9 at 11 p.m.

HITCHHIKER'S DIARY
Friday at 9 p.m. on 4, 13

Tuesday, there's the premiere segment of NBC's comedy series, The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo. In this one Lobo's plan to con a group of fishermen out of thousands of dollars explodes when he attempts to put this mechanicl plastic shark into a lagoon — unaware that a real shark is waiting to nibble on him. At 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

A double choice is also offered on Wednesday. Would you beieve symphony and sex? Leonard Bernstein will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra with tenor Kenneth Riegel and the men of the Tanglewood Festival Chorus under the direction of John Oliver in Liszt's A Faust Symphony at 9 p.m. on Channel 9. Also on the twin bill is a new motion picture-for television, Sex and the Single Parent. This is a realistic comedy-drama about how two divorcees cope with the laughs, tears, problems and pleasures of single parenthood.

It often is said that the Volga flows in the heart of every Russian. Thursday's suggestion is a trip with the National Geographic Society rare along this waterway rich in Russian history, and in Russian blood. The Volga airs Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channel 9

Finally, for Friday, Prevue suggests Diary of a Teen-Age Hitchhiker. Viewers will see an entirely different Charlene Tilton, the sassy, young Lucy Ewing on Dallas, in her hiker role. It's at 9 p.m. on Channel 4 and Charlene says the subject is important for kids to see.

CLUES ACROSS

1 TRILL not drill. Recruits at drill are hardly expected to be quite perfect. Also, being shouted at by a sergeant is not what one thinks of as "criticism," a term more applicable to the case of a singer (TRILL).

9. TARTAN not tartar. TARTAN is "associated" with the Scots, but Tartar is actually one of the people in question (who were of a mixture of races, anyhow).

13. RIND not ring. The clue tends to view this in the sense of "something one wants to remove," in which way RIND is more apt. Also, "work" of a moment links up better with RIND, the removal of which may be a little job.

17 GAME not name. For example, a boxed GAME of fittingly juvenile nature may be "suitable for giving to a child." This wording suits name less well; a name simply is, or isn't, a first name or given name.

19 REST not jest. A REST when and where one should be working merits reproof. Whether a mere jest is all that bad, is very much more a matter of opinions.

20 LANE not land. LANE is the more significant answer, being something "marked out," e.g., for traffic or for runners. The idea of land being "marked out" (for what?) is less self-explanatory.

22 PARTS not party. PARTS, e.g., for cars, directly cost money as suggested. Strictly speaking, you pay for drinks, etc., rather than for the party.

24 SINGER not sinner. It is rather in the capacity of SINGER that one knows, or doesn't know, the words of a song or hymn.

25 FAN not man. It is not just any wealthy man, but, rather, a FAN that is apt to be a benefactor.

26 REEDS not reefs. "Over the years" suggests less time than the centuries it takes reefs to build up.

CLUES DOWN

2. RELAXED not related. They "seem" to be RELAXED, but, rather, they are said or implied to be related, by the style of their billing, etc.
3. LINER not linen or lines. The clue tends to assume an outdoor location, favoring (ocean) LINER. Also, "if white" is hardly necessary for linen, which one would assume to be white anyway.
4. HURT not curt. If you are apologetically trying to smooth a person's ruffled feelings, the idea is that they shall not feel HURT, rather than they should not be curt.
5. STARE not start. The pedestrian gives a start because the sound of the horn takes him by surprise; it's not a question of reacting (as with a STARE) to the motorist's giving him a "rude blast," as such.
6. CREAK not break. If they break, they are complete rotten; this is not much worse than merely "not exactly ideal."
10. WIDE not side. The clue-hints that the entrance is WIDE, though "not quite WIDE enough." A side entrance may be too narrow for anything at all (much less "really" massive).
15. BETTING not beating. Since a beating can occur in so many forms of competition or adversity, "BETTING" appeals as having the more specific connection with "racing, etc.," in the sense of various fields of gambling.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

As the World Turns for Julie

HEART TROUBLE. For the past two months, Annie Spencer (played by pretty Julie Ridley) has been involved with two heartthrobs on As the World Turns.

The very married Dr. Douglas Campbell (played by Dennis Romer) and the dashing Dr. Jeff Ward (Robert Lipton) want to be more than just friends.

Julie refers to her character, Annie, as stainless steel. A very moral, strong, career-minded woman. Julie feels that she herself is not as controlled as Annie, that she's much more emotionally expressive.

Julie feels that's the crux of a soap character's success. "They don't feel sorry for themselves, they let the audience feel sorry for them."

Julie didn't start out as an actress. From Atlanta, Ga., she originally worked as a newsroom assistant at a local television station — but she couldn't shake her childhood desire to act. Despite the reservations of her father, who is chief of surgery at Piedmont Hospital in Atlanta and who hoped his daughter would pursue medicine, Julie came to New York to study drama. Her goal was to land a soap role.

"I like daytime TV," says Julie. "I think the acting is better than prime time."

After two years of making the rounds, she finally landed the featured role of Annie on As the World Turns.

And at least she is not a total loss to the ambitions her father had for her: Julie's character Annie is a medical student at Oakland Memorial Hospital and Julie now spends as much time in the hospital as her dad does. He told Julie of a day when he had just scrubbed for surgery but the assisting team was nowhere to be found. In a rage, he stormed into a lounge where he found them clustered around a small TV set. You guessed it — they were watching Julie.

Knowing that her friends in Atlanta watch, Julie asked the producer for some calming advice. He just said, "Don't worry, The whole world will be watching you!"

JULIE RIDLEY

CHANNEL CHATTER. Search for Tomorrow celebrated its 28th anniversary with a gala party for cast members at the Fives, a popular Manhattan restaurant. The stylish nightspot is co-owned by John Aniston, who plays Martin Tourneur on the show. All of the Search stars were present

David Greenan is the new face on Guiding Light, playing Dr. Gregory Fairbanks, Rita's (Lenore Kasdorf) first love. In the plotline, he's attempting to woo Rita from Ed, now that their marriage is on the rocks. David was a regular on Battlestar Galactica and has appeared on Search for Tomorrow and Another World and is slated for a part in the upcoming Neil Simon film, "Chapter Two"

John James (formerly Tom Bergman on Search for Tomorrow) is getting rave reviews in Butterflies Are Free at Tiffany's Attic in Kansas City. Fans in the area have until September 28 to see their former soap idol in the flesh

PLOT PORTENTS. Little Hope needs her mother Julie badly on Days of Our Lives, but Mom needs to have her head straightened out. Poor Amanda had to get a therapeutic abortion and Trish is haunted by a face from the past.

Vicious Vanessa continues to feed on Lorie's jealousy on The Young and the Restless. Jill and Stewart finally come to terms about their marriage and Kate pulls one more wicked stunt on wily Suzanne.

Mike takes Ross Marler on as a partner in his law firm on Guiding Light, and Ross brings a few clients of his own including Elizabeth Spaulding. Peter receives a direct threat concerning Holly and things are not well with Ed and Rita.

Rae becomes enraged by a message from Frank on Ryan's Hope. Meanwhile, Roger's actions could spell trouble for him and Siobhan shows up at a bad time.

TV MAILBAG

SHHH — Did the movie Silent Running ever win any awards? When, if so? Also, who played the part of the man trying to save the animals? — B. W. Rooster, Ohio.

Although it marked the film debut of special effects whiz Douglas Trumbull (2001, Close Encounters), Silent Running won no awards. Bruce Dern starred as the space-station botanist.

MORE AGES — Would you please send me more information on Greg Evigan, Please include his age. — T.K.R., Russell, Ky.

We're not in the business of sending information, but I can tell you that your hero is 25 years old, 6-foot-4 and an aspiring singer-songwriter. You may recall he starred for several weeks in "A Year at the Top" before "BJ and the Bear."

WHY GALACTICA? — Why did ABC cancel "Battlestar Galactica?" It can't be over ratings because the space program received respectable ratings most of the season. — U.B., Castro Valley, Calif.

According to ABC, "Battlestar Galactica" was chopped from the network's upcoming fall lineup because of ratings. The three networks look for two things in ratings — a show's ranking among all prime-time programs for the entire week and a show's ratings during the specific time spot.

"Battlestar" consistently placed in the middle section of the Neilsen ratings on an overall basis but trailed poorly in its time spot against "All in the Family" and "Alice" on CBS and "The Wonderful World of Disney" on NBC.

ABC executives apparently felt they could not improve the ratings by shifting.

CAL TALK — I have written before asking about an actor by the name of Cal Bellini. He played in several TV Programs — "Hawaii Five-O," "Mod Squad" and the more recent movie, "Little Big Man," as Young Bear. I would like to know more about him. — Sonja Glasgow, Richmond, Va.

Since you've asked several times, here's one big, fat answer. Cal Bellini's done quite a few episodes of "Hawaii Five-)." and probably will do more, because he loves getting that trip to Hawaii. He is currently being considered for the role opposite Raquel Welch in "The Legend Of Walks-Far Woman.' Other roles in the offing are for the most part Indian parts. Bellini often plays an Indian. He also often plays an Italian. In reality, he is half-Indian and half-Italian. The family was in Singapore when he was born. He also spent some years in Japan, and in England, where his father ultimately settled. And, from the time he was 15, Cal lived in New York and considers himself primarily a New Yorker. He enrolled in Princeton, as a premed major. But he also acted, which finally took precedence. He did some plays both on and off-Broadway.

Then he was discovered for movies. "Little Big Man" brought him to Hollywood. But he says that acting is not his main source of income. Somewhere along the way of life, he became an expert in antiques. And he says that his antique trading underwrites "my acting habit."

BING'S BOY — Please settle an argument. My sister-in-law says that Bing Crosby is the father of Norm Crosby. I say she is wrong. What are the names of Bing's older sons?— V.E. Music, Kathleen, Fla.

Norm and Bing share a last name, but that's as far as the relationship goes. As for Bing's older sons, they are Gary, Dennis, Philip and Lindsay.

Making Ends Meet

Making Ends Meet is a new televison presentation on the Ida Clarkson Show (Channel 6, 12:15 p.m.) on alternate Mondays, beginning September 17, designed particularly for women living on a low income

This is an innovative approach by Camosun College and Prime Time to bring a community education program to the public via television, and to involve the community in its planning.

A committee of women living on a low income selected topics that would be of special interest and practical use. Topics include information on nutrition, buying food and clothing for the family, low cost insurance, credit-buying and debt counselling, and how to lower fuel costs.

Here is the list of subjects,all at 12:15 p.m.: Sept. 17, Buying Clothes for the Family; Oct. 1, Nutrition and Food Buying; Oct. 15, The Tempting Tricks that May You Buy; Oct. 29, How to Buy Low Cost Insurance; Nov. 12, How to Save on Your Energy Bills; Nov. 26, Debt Counselling and Credit Buying.

Monty's new Beat

Monty Hall, popular game show host of Let's Make a Deal for 13 years, will present the updated Beat the Clock. Premiering Monday, Sept. 17, it will feature three teams competing against each other, as well as against the clock, to win the prize money.

Each team consists of three generically-related members (for example: three airline flight attendants or three police officers); each team will compete for the entire week.

'Ponch' on the mend

Erik Estrada, star of CHiPs, is recuperating at home following his Aug. 6 motorcycle accident. The length of his recupertion is unknown, but because of skillfull juggling of scenes already completed, Estrada will appear in every episode during the new season.

Reference to the unfortunate crash will be made in an episode entitled The Return of the Supercycle, as a stuntman recreates the accident and establishes Ponch's temporary disability. The actual footage of Erik's real accident will not be used.

Beachcombers back tonight

The Beachcombers starring Bruno Gerussi, CBC-TV's most popular family adventure series returns for an eighth season on Sunday, September 16 at 7 p.m.

Gerussi, as log salvager Nick Adonidas, finds himself in funny, touching and sometimes perilous situations, while running his business with partner Jesse (Pat John). The old sea rat Relic (ACTRA Award winner Robert Clothier), Nick's competitor in the salvage business is back again this year, as is Molly Carmody (Rae Brown) owner of Molly's Reach, the best seaside diner on the Sunshine Coast of British Columbia.

Songwriters, the first episode of the new season features Rene Simard as guest star. Nick is inspired to break into the glamorous world of pop music when Jesse and he write a song called Play It Again. Fate seems to be on Nick's side when, longing for a holiday, Rene Simard comes to Gibson's in search of a vacation hideaway.

Determined to get a hearing for his song, Nick hounds Rene relentlessly, crooning bits of unfinished melodies at him, while a star struck Margaret (Juliet Randall) moons and swoons over her idol. Desperate for some peace and quiet Rene finally agrees to sing Nick and Jesse's song, and what a job he does!

CBC's longest running adventure series, The Beachcombers, with more than 150 episodes completed, continues to attract weekly audiences of close to two million. The series has been sold in over 14 countries and Bruno has been hounded by autograph hunters from Moscow to Australia.

Twitter under a black hat

Cloris Leachman said she was not going to talk about any of her subjects. That eliminated acting, comedy, Mel Brooks, vegetables, bringing up babies, granola, fat people and the Miss America Pageant of 1946. Oh, well.

She had arranged herself on the front fender of a trashed-out jalopy in front of the City Rescue Mission, twittering under a black cloche hat and wrapped in a black ensemble that looked rather like it was out of a 1920s update version of "The Merry Widow" being staged by Ken Russell.

The costume was for a role in a new film, Scavenger Hunt, being shot on location in San Diego. Cloris plays the sister of a crochety deceased multimillionaire who leaves a will stating that his $200 million estate will go to whoever wins a knockabout scavenger hunt. But she vows not to talk about bizarre roles and bizarre films, either. Oh, well, again.

"I hate to talk abut ordinary things," said Cloris, teasingly adjusting her black hat.

"Who wants to know about the characters and the plots? It's not interesting. And, I'd have to put my mind to work to think about those things."

She tossed her head back, giggling. Thinking was something Leachman wasn't occupying herself with this particular afternoon. She had begun work on Scavenger Hunt after finishing two other films. One, a comedy with Gary Busey, Tony Randall and Eddie Albert, entitled Foolin' Around, is to be released shortly. The other, SOS Titantic, was done on a $6 million budget with British and Irish character actors as a television movie in America and as a feature in Europe with Cloris as Molly Brown — "the unsinkable Molly Brown," she said.

"I'm usually in the middle of these things," she said. "Ask me what it's about, I don't know. I just like to run around in the middle of them and not intellectualize. Sometimes I'm asked questions like, 'Do you think there's a future for cable TV?' or 'Do you think women are getting more roles than they used to?' or, 'Do you prefer features over television?'

"I love to watch and be involved with human behavior or animals," Cloris continued. "Animals, any kind. Especially, the ones that are being . . . the voiceless ones that you can hear their voiceless cries.

"Well, I don't know about all that. I don't want to know about all that. I mean there are other people who are very . . . uh, ahem, are working in those areas.

Oh, did I say that? Well, you know, the tortured ones in laboratories. That's a huge giant scandal, a blot on us that bothers me a lot. It's a $4 billion-a-year scandal in our country and they're bringing in all the emerging countries as part of the economy. They think it's good business, but it's a terrible thing."

Aha, was Cloris getting on her subjects, making a soapbox of that old front fender, after all?

"It's not that I like or don't like thinking of myself as a soapbox," she said. "It's that we tend to categorize each thing and pigeonhole each other and label each other and it dehumanizes us. It stops any . . . communication. It looks nice, but it's very seldom the truth once you label something. That tends to just narrow it, and then you've got a symbol for something removed from the experience. A snapshop of something. You can refer to it, but you shouldn't think that's it. It's not the situation or the problem or the subject anymore."

Cloris Leachman talks a lot.

She also talks like what she says always surprises herself. On television talk shows, she has been known to talk so much about everything she has had to be bleeped into silence to give a few other guests a chance to say hello. But, at 53, she just keeps on talking and acting with the kind of high vitality she has been known for since, as Miss Chicago, she was among five finalists in the Miss America Pageant of 1946. Cloris did't win the title, but the pageant launched her career — a career marked by an immense amount of versatility ranging from serious stage roles to the lightest of film and television comedy.

Looking at stars

By RUTH THOMPSON

Marlon Brando doesn't have to do much in a movie these days to get star billing. As witnessed by "Superman" and "Apocalypse Now," his presence helps ticket sales. Marquee value is what theater managers call it. Television doesn't have a word for it, but it has its equivalent big names. So, to no one's surprise, in the fierce early battles for ratings in the new season, prominently billed are two perennial favorites with viewers, Raymond Burr and David Janssen.

Burr, the long-time Perry Mason and also long-run Chief Ironside, guests in the first two shows on NBC's "Eischied," as a New York police commissioner, the first this Friday (Sept. 21).

Next Sunday (Sept. 23), Janssen gets top billing in ABC's "S.O.S. Titanic," which is reported to be almost docudrama-like in its fidelity to the known facts of the pre-First World War sea tragedy.

Both men, by the way, have other TV movies in the works. Later in the season Burr will appear in a train disaster thriller, "Coastliner" for ABC. And Janssen (for NBC) stars as a forest ranger on a rescue mission in "High Ice." Nice, nice, nice to be popular. Profitable, too.

Ah that Bob Hope. With the non-stop schedules of his U.S.O. tours now history, Hope, though he's still a travelin' man, has learned to schedule in some fun for himself along the way as well as for his audiences.

So, for his back-home briefing on how his three-week visit to Peking and Shanghai evolved into NBC's three-hour Sunday special (Sept. 16), Hope invited a trainload of reporters to Wilmington, Del., a spot as new to many of them as China. Clearly, Hope already knew the way. Seems by now he's chums with his Du Pont sponsors and no stranger, either, to their golf courses.

How nice. Peter Falk apparently didn't mean it when he said, last year, he would never do another "Columbo." Because the good word is that he is rearing to don that beat up old trench coat again if scripters can come up with a new batch of tricky villains for him to outwit next year.

And he may not be the only returning sleuth. Rumor says that Telly Savalas may be back as "Kojak." But with an occasional special, a la the "Columbo" format and not weekly.

Eileen Fulton is in the midst of a real-life drama of her own — divorce — and is handling matters much better than does Lisa, that popular meanie she plays on "As the World Turns".

As her eight-year marriage to Dan Fortunato heads for its final court phrase, Eileen is keeping busy weekends, too, flying around the country as one of the stars of Joyce Becker's Soap Opera Festivals.

Morgan Paull, last seen in "Centennial," has landed a most suitable role in a CBS development project, "Beyond Westworld," as a Navy submarine officer. You see, Morgan's great-great granddaddy was the granddaddy of the U.S. Navy, John Paul Jones. (As the record notes, the Revolutionary War hero's real surname was Paull, not Jones, which was a later addition.)

Most of us have a pet golden-oldie movie worth staying up late for — including Laura Z. Hobson. One of her favorites is "Gentleman's Agreement," starring Gregory Peck and based on her own novel probing anti-Semitism.

However, she has set herself guidelines for when she will — or won't — give her personal classic another look. If the schedule lists 90 minutes she doesn't tune in. She tried it once and said so much was cut that none of it made sense. But of the full-length version, as it ran in theaters, Mrs. Hobson says, "I'm surprised — and, of course, pleased — at how well it holds up."

John Hearn's collectibles

Janet Leek of Vancouver asks what, precisely, is ironstone? Does it have any iron in it?

A nice question. Ironstone China was first introduced by Charles Mason in 1813. Present day marketing experts could not come up with a better name. The colorfully ornamented but delicate chinaware from the Orient had been popular in England for more than half a century, but only as Sunday best; its extreme fragility ruled it out for everyday use. The challenge to English potters was to come up with something of comparable elegance but greater durability.

The Masons worked on the problem for a long time. Back in 1804, Miles Mason was advertising a British made product as "more durable and not so liable to snip at the edges." Nine years later Charles took out his patent for Ironstone China, a trade name which embraced all that was most desirable in toughness and beauty — but what was ironstone?

According to the patent the key ingredient was 20% Prepared Ironstone — a finely ground slag which was left behind after processing iron ore. It sounds reasonable enough but 150 or so years later, Geoffrey Godden, the distinguished authority on china and porcelain, had one of Mason's Ironstone dishes analyzed chemically and the nearest thing to iron which they discovered was less than .5% ferric oxide. Silica and alumina made up 95% of the total ingredients.

Godden claims that the product described in the patent would never have made a workable ceramic body and must therefore be regarded as a misleading front, registered with deliberate intention of confusing the competition and buying valuable time while Mason gained a stranglehold on this lucrative market.

Finally others realized that they were being fooled and soon both Spode and Ridgeway were producing their own "Ironstone" dinnerware. The interesting thing is that ironstone is monstrously clumsy stuff and by no stretch of the imagination could it be considered competitive with the delicate Oriental product.

Glancing through an American magazine I came across an article about the joys of collecting old glass piano stands. I had thought by now that there was nothing left to collect but I am constantly surprised. Piano stands, so the article by John Gilbert assures us, are "not difficult to locate and collect. Besides being found in old rubbish dumps and among junk they are often used as ashtrays in cafes. They are now sought by collectors and sometimes fetch high prices in antique shops."

The writer of the article is presumably English and a picture is conjured up of dumps rich with intriguing rubbish and cafes where smokers casually stub out their butt ends in valuable antiques. The mind is boggled.

Piano stands are also known as caster cups, caster rests, piano rests, piano feet and sounders. Sounders? The idea is that the resonance of the piano which might otherwise be absorbed by the carpet, is reflected back with brazen force when the piano legs stand in glass caster cups.

The main purpose of the cups was to protect the flooring but secondary virtues appear. "Often a liquid such as alcohol was put in the cups so that insects such as bed bugs and wood boring beetles would fall into them and be drowned." From dumps littered with piano stands to bed bugs falling out of musical instruments is but a short step.

If my comments sound patronizing, let me hasten to apologize. I am intrigued. Mr. Gilbert would, I am sure, agree that piano stands rank among the trivia of collecting — but trivia is precisely what makes the whole subject so interesting. There is no object, however humble, that does not have its little history, its link with other times and a wealth of fascinating lore waiting for the dedicated collector who goes looking.

Cliffhangers ahead

Only the gifted actress Katherine Helmond, who plays Jessica, in the hit CTV comedy series Soap can resolve the quandary she found herself in at the end of last season.

She's not at liberty to give away any forthcoming crisis for Jessica or her fellow Soap-ers because it's a continuing story calling for a sort of cliffhanger at the end of each season.

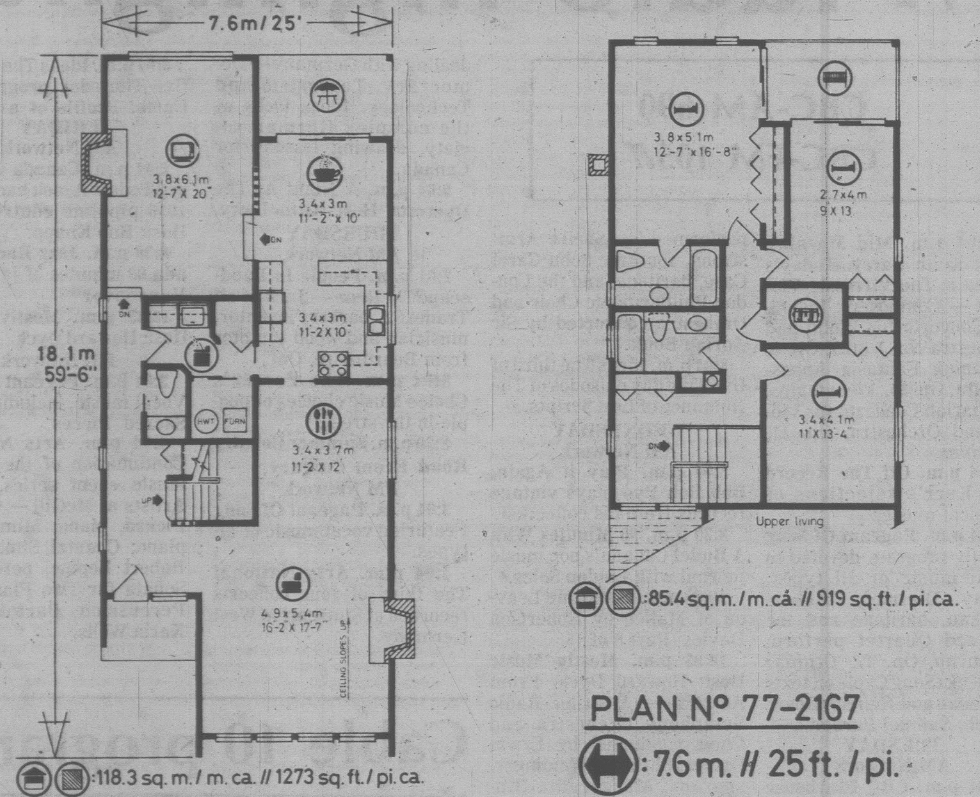
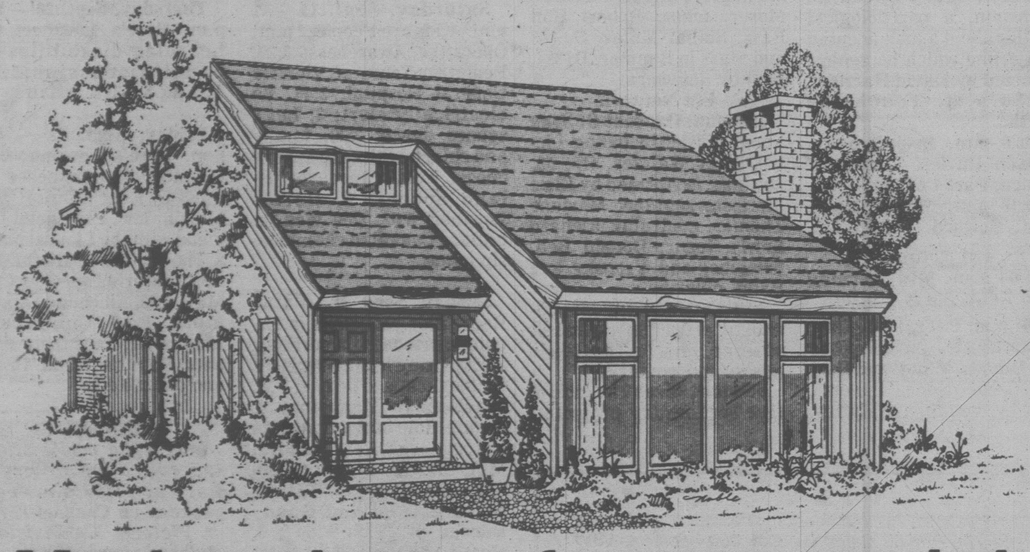
Home of the week





Modern home for narrow lot

Here's a delightfully modern three-bedroom home design which is perfectly suited to the very narrow urban building lot, and which contains a wide range of convenience features and abundant useable living space for the medium-size family.

The mixed vertical and diagonal channel siding of the exterior, combined with the heavy shakes of the sharply sloping roof, creates an impression of a holiday chalet in the mountains. The full-length, front-facing windows provide abundant natural light and excellent view, while the smaller side windows provide privacy from the adjacent homes — a desirable feature in narrow lot homes.

The deeply weather-protected entry leads naturally into a small foyer and directly into the long rectangular living-dining area. The living room features a bold and dramatic sloping ceiling and an optional fireplace. The separate dining area divides from the kitchen via space-saving pocket door for privacy when entertaining.

The U-shape kitchen has abundant work counter area and an excellent work triangle for step-saving convenience. The kitchen separates from a separate dinette area via cupboards and counter, which could easily be adapted to a snack bar counter for those who prefer this convenience feature. The dinette has wide sliding glass doors leading onto a sizeable rear patio for easy access to outdoor dining in fine weather.

A large family room, sunken two risers from the dinette and main entry hall, provides the conviviality of a raised-hearth fireplace and an excellent view to the rear of the home.

A central utility complex contains the washer and dryer in a side-by-side configuration, abundant laundry storage area and a two-piece vanity bath. In the same area, the furnace and hot water tank are easily accessible for servicing through sliding doors.

All three bedrooms are positioned around the central bath and linen storage area. Each has excellent natural light and ample closet storage. The large master bedroom has a three-piece ensuite with tub, and access to the upstairs balcony via sliding glass doors. A central luggage storage separates the two secondary bedrooms, and a large hall closet is centrally positioned at the top of the stairs.

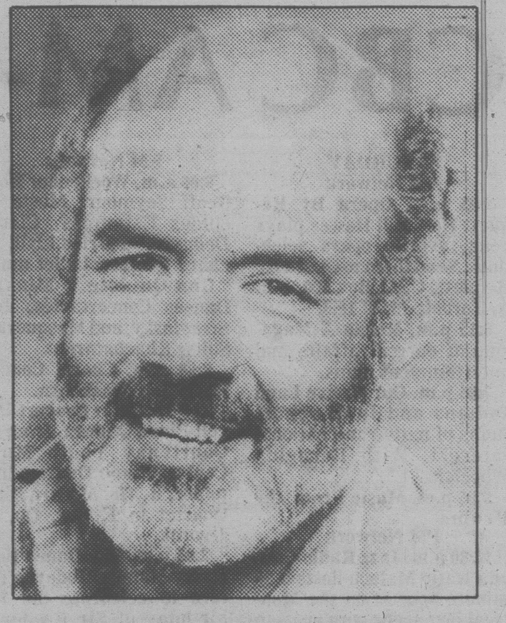
A highly convenient home plan, realized in high style.

Plans for design No. 77-2167 may be purchased either by the single set, at a cost of $85 for the first set and $14 for each additional set, or by the package. A five-set plan package, including the first set, is economically priced at $120 and an eight-set plan package, also including the first set, is only $150.

Whichever method you choose, please include $5 for postage and handling. B.C. residents add 4% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of, Select Home Designs magazine, Series 42, featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus 320 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.75 ($2 plus .75 cents postage and handling).

To order any of these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Times, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.



ROBERTS . . .people are inhuman

Pernell's now Trapper John

HOLLYWOOD — When a grown man cries, the viewer has mixed emotions.

Sympathy overrides uneasiness, but the uneasiness remains.

So it was with relief that the interviewer saw Pernell Roberts check himself quickly and heard him apologize for his brief loss of control.

No apology was necessary, of course. He'd lost his voice and found tears for an endearing reason.

Roberts grew up in Waycross, Ga., on the verge of the Okefenokee Swamp and has been asked how often he went home.

He was going immediately, he said, to see his father who was "having a bout with cancer."

And that's when his voice broke. He lowered his head and then pulled himself together with an apology.

He was very fortunate, he said, to have had his parents, a couple who taught him integrity and who consistently gave him encouragement.

"They may have had misgivings about it (his becoming an actor)" Roberts said, "but my folks were always very supportive."

Prior to becoming an actor, Roberts worked for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. Next, for two years, he was a Marine.

Then, in 1949, he enrolled in the University of Maryland which, because he was "in a state of rebellion," he left rather quickly to become an actor by way of summer stock companies.

When Bonanza began, he was one of Lorne Green's sons and continued in the role from 1959 to 1965, when he decided to quit the show.

Those who stayed waxed wealthy and even more famous as the years rolled by, to reach a total of 14.

But Roberts said he's never regretted his departure.

"I just left," he remembered. "Very quietly."

The fall television season finds Roberts starring in a new CBS television series, Trapper John, M.D. in which he'll portray a middle-aged version of the maverick doctor Wayne Rogers played in M-A-S-H.

Regardless of the popularity of Bonanza, he argued that it didn't do much for his career, noting, "I was a fairly well-known working actor when I took that on.

"I have been very lucky. I have worked all my life, all my career," the new Trapper John continued. "Acting is hard. I have friends who have been on the fringes of it as long as I've been in it. But if you like it, you do it.

"You don't always make a lot of money from acting, but you can get gratification and satisfaction from it."

While Roberts spoke with love of his parents, he also declared, "I rejected a great deal of my culture and my environment."

Yet, he hasn't found vast differences between Waycross, Hollywood, New York and the rest odf the world.

"In my travelling," he said, "I've found an incredible amount of sameness in the religiosity, the politics, the racism.

"The kind of behavior you see in one part of the world, you see in the rest. It doesn't matter whether it's sexist or racist or whatever. People are very inhuman to each other whether they are male or female or whatever their religious philosophies.

Pat Barclay

From Canadian victim to international hero

"Monty Haynes was an extremely handsome, dextrous, well read and well travelled young public relations man in the O'Brien company whose bright future was tempered only by a moral sensibility slightly above the subsistence level." Even this level is enough to sink Monty in Canadian business, however, and he is fired for refusing to write a press release white-washing the manner of his boss' death. (He died, not "peacefully at home", but of a heart attack while in the company of a call girl at the Honey Dew Motel.) Monty's refusal earns him a credit rating, in the eyes of Canadian employers, "comparable to that of a married nun in the Vatican".

Out of work, unemployable and disillusioned in love (he has just been seduced by a former classmate whose principal object is to get him to father her child), our unfortunate hero is reduced to reading the "Help Wanteds". There he spots the following: "A new private company in Lalonga in East Africa is looking for an English speaking (public relations) professional with at least five years practical experience. For an interview, apply in strict confidence to . . .", etc.

So. By page eight, novelist Eric Koch (The French Kiss, The Leisure Riots, The Last Thing You Would Want to Know) has created his hero, disposed of his past and lined up his future. With equal dispatch he marshals Monty through his job interviews in Toronto and London and packs him off to Africa, where numerous surprises (and moral dilemmas) await. Koch's new novel is titled Good Night Little Spy. It's witty rather than funny, provocative rather than blunt and superficial rather than deep. It's also a light, refreshing book which leaves the lingering impression that by reading it, one has learned a thing or two about black African vs. white Western psychology.

During Monty's London interview, for example, his interrogator launches into a lecture on the basic difference between "white and black minds". The white mind, he insists, is rational and logical. Traces of superstition persist, but these are miniscule compared to the "ancestral memories" of witchcraft, sorcery and magic which permeate the black mind. "I may have a dozen Ph.D's from a dozen European universities", explains Mr. Mwanga, "I may have a Nobel prize for nuclear physics, it makes absolutely no difference. Deep down where it counts, all my reflexes are irrational."

KOCH . . . a clever satire

This is why Monty, with his (unfortunately moral) "white mind", is of value. His Lalongan firm realizes it needs a white perspective to accomplish its devious aims. (What these actually are, it takes Monty to the end of the book to discover.)

Whether Koch is serious about all this is difficult to tell, but I think he is. Good Night Little Spy both trades on and seeks to explain the phenomenon of Idi Amin by establishing a similar tyrant in an imaginary country and probing into the reasons for his rise to power. Along the way Koch takes time out from this (admittedly moral) preoccupation to thrust his hero into a variety of diverting situations.

There is, for example, the lecture Monty is asked to give a Lalongan adult education class on the subject of Hamlet. ("He explained where Denmark was and that there was a king, 'let's call him a chief' — who lived in a castle called Elsinore, a kind of northern fog-bound homestead", etc.)

Lalonga, by the way, has been given a pseudo-authentic location between the borders of Kenya and Tanzania, in the triangular-shaped area bounded by Mombasa, Tanga and "Guseto" (Taveta, in reality). Monty Haynes spends five weeks there. They remove another layer of his apparently incurable innocence and play havoc with his notions of subsistence-level morality. They also transform him from a Canadian victim into an international hero.

Good Night Little Spy is accomplished, disciplined satire. With this novel Koch demonstrates that he has learned to narrow his focus and avoid the pitfalls that accompany excess. The result is a book that is moderately funny, moderately sexy, moderately colorful and moderately exciting. Lest this appraisal sound moderately damning, let me hasten to add that Good Night Little Spy is also superlatively well-written and inordinately clever. Eric Koch, at 60, is definitely a writer to watch.

Two poets who care about mankind

By DOUG BEARDSLEY

In the last few years I've often heard it said that McClelland and Stewart have one of the least interesting poetry lists in the country, outside of the group of major writers they signed up years ago such as Layton, Birney, Gustafson, Purdy and Newlove. It seemed that whenever they turned their attention to the younger poets in Canada the editors came up short, producing beautifully designed books of second-rate poetry while consistently overlooking some of the best of the new writers.

The two books listed below go a long way toward reversing that trend.

On The Road Again, David McFadden's tenth book of poems, is dedicated "for the dedicated," as well it might be. I know of no one who is indifferent to McFadden. Some see his work as prosaic, boring, even sadistic, while others have felt there is a finely controlled humor and a deep caring for mankind at the centre of his best poems.

McFadden's humor is both downbeat and deadly, his writing moving from the real to a surreal imaginative dream world and back again in a tone so colloquial the reader is hardly aware of the shift. He has an uncanny ability to transform the ordinary into the extraordinary, twisting and time-looping his way across our cultural landscape, giving free rein to fact and fantasy alike, as in "The Voice of God":

> I had spent months and was > three-quarters finished > a 1,600-piece jigsaw puzzle > of Lake Louise > and a little voice in my head said
> You will never finish this puzzle.
> Puzzled, I worked > for another hour on it > then dumped the whole mess back > into the box
> and gave it to my sister,
> the religious one.

It's true that some of the longer poems seem to simply fade out like bad film endings, but they never lose their narrative skill and dead-pan humor.

It's a joy to read these fine poems, but there is an element of horror as well, for some poems have a nightmarish edge bordering on the sadistic. "Lennox Island" is one of several pieces where the protagonist's "clumsy, poisonous presence" infects the poem, and yet, I can't help feeling that McFadden cares deeply about people and the problems they encounter in living in this "bloodiest of centuries."

"How to strive to become relatively pure" when we become "more and more aware of (our) powers of destruction" is one of the central questions of our age. McFadden faces the possibility of evel in himself and in each one of us, and it is no wonder we recoil at the harshness and the horror of his poetic vision. Only the laughter his poems engender lifts us above the beasts.

Though like McFadden Pier Giorgio Di Cicco has many small press publications to his credit, The Tough Romance is his first major collection.

From the opening poem we are aware that we are dealing with a new poetic in Canadian literature, a poetic based on a rich associative imagery with echoes of the best of the modern Latin American poets. All contemporary signposts are down, line breaks appear arbitrary, even wrong, the occasional punctuation seems incorrect, rational thought patterns are upset, and Di Cicco is in full control, aware of every rule he is breaking.

Di Cicco's poems detail "the tough romance" of the tarnished American dream as seen through the eyes of his Italian immigrant family, cut from their ancestoral roots. These are poems of deep compassion; compassion for Di Cicco's fellow man, father, family, and friends.

I get the feeling that these are free-form poems; improvised, with little or no revision, and sometimes without theme.

Di Cicco's love poems resonate with a delicate pain that is the force of life itself. Here is "Lady", from the centre of the book:

> These are the words that fail, the words > clambering > up to make asynonym for you. Dove, > woman,
> hijacker of a dream, you.
> I am done with making prayers asking that > you stay > put. I want to stand stock still, see how far > you can get before the call back, the inescap> able > flight of the heart going from one hand to the > other.

These poems embody "the sadness of one man, arranging footsteps — backwards into his life . . . the heart brought up proper — to be knocked into sense by the loss of things."

There is a curious falling off in the last part of this chatterbox of a book, as if the volume has been puffed with a number of less successful poems.

Nevertheless, if poetry is fully-felt feeling charged with the experience of everyday life, then Di Cicco is, indeed, "a little marvelous" with the stuff of life that offers us poems such as these that we can all touch. This is the best book of poems I've read so far this year.

The romance of science

By JULIAN REID

Good science popularizers are in perpetually short supply. Carl Sagan, at his best, is as good as they come. His new volume, Broca's Brain, offers a generous sampling of that best, along with a slightly more generous handful of lesser pieces, and in the process offers some indication of just how the ablest science-writing transcends the often cut-and-dried material with which it deals.

Unlike its Pulitzer Prize-winning predecessor, The Dragons of Eden, Broca's Brain was not conceived as a single unified whole. Instead, it is a collection of 25 separate articles on miscellaneous loosely interrelated subjects, varying from UFO's to the history of more Earth-bound forms of transportation, from parapsychology to the climate of Titan, Saturn's largest moon, from science-fiction to the dedicated scientist's near mystical experience of intellectual understanding as "a kind of ecstasy."

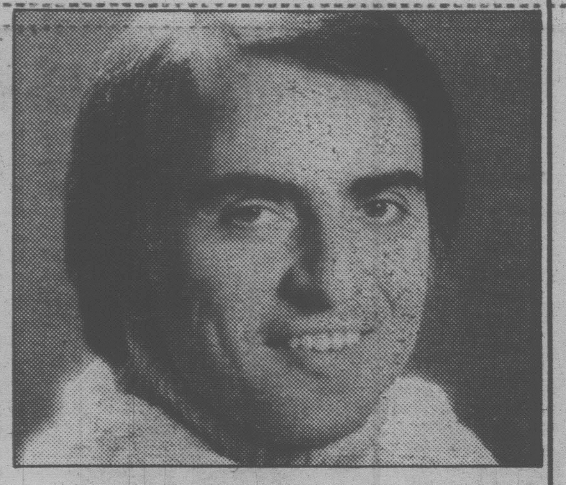
The book contains two pieces, "Experiments in Space" and "The Past and Future of American Astronomy," which are unlikely to thrill anyone other than Sagan's fellow-professionals and dedicated amateur astronomers — though, needless to say, both are engagingly well-written. But the remaining chapters are pitched at a more popular level.

The longest among them, though easily the most technical in the book, is nevertheless one of the most fascinating and popularly appealing: a genuinely fair-minded assessment of Immanuel Velikovsky's Worlds in Collision, which is absolutely devastating in its cumulative effect.

Just how good Sagan really is as a science-writer becomes apparent when any of these pieces are compared with Who Goes There?, a thoroughly competent but fundamentally uninspired exercise in popularization by journalist Edward Edelson. The contrast is particularly apparent because Edelson's chosen subject is "the Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence," "SETI" for short, a field in which Sagan is unquestionably one of the leading lights.

Edelson's account is worth reading as a clear, comprehensive and generally up-to-date overview of one of the most exciting frontier-areas in contemporary science — and it has the unusual virtue of offering a thoroughly realistic assessment of the political and economic considerations which are increasingly coming to dominate the field.

But despite these merits, Who Goes There? is almost completely lacking in any sense of what the author himself describes as "the poetry that has been the driving forcee behind SETI until now" — a poetry, as it happens, which was vividly communicated in two now-dated but still infinitely more evocative classics of the same genre, Walter Sullivan's best-selling We Are Not Alone and the somewhat more technical Intelligent Life in the Universe, written by the Soviet astronomer I. S. Shklovskii in conjunction with (who else?) Carl Sagan.



Carl Sagan . . . a poet's power

It is a poetry which is also very much present in two of the latter's more recent treatments of the subjct, "Life in the Solar System" and "The Quest for Extraterrestrial Intelligence," both included in Broca's Brain. Here, in the narrow compass of 17 pages, Sagan manages to be far more provocative and open-mindedly stimulating than Edelson does in 197. This is the difference between inspired popularization and merely competent science-journalism; and it makes, for the ordinary reader, all the difference in the world.

Of these two books, each creditable in its own way, Edelson's is by far the more systematically informative — but it is Carl Sagan who possesses the poet's power to fire the reader's imagination and evoke his vicarious involvement in the excitement of the scientific enterprise. "The search for extraterrestrial intelligence," Sagan reminds us, "is the search for a generally acceptable cosmic context for the human species. In the deepest sense, the search for extraterrestrial intelligence is a search for ourselves."

Friendship and reality

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

"Perhaps the essence of friendship," Paul Pendrake muses, "is an immunity against circumstance, distance, or the passage of time."

And so, years after his friend Kobie September throws himself from a window after torture by the Security Police, Pendrake recounts his friendship with the man — a friendship that grew and flourished even as the South African democracy degenerated into a racist police state. When they were both children the black child gave his spirit to the white boy; as Kobie's mother Grietjie says, "we are only the shadow of the keeper of our spirit."

That keeper, Paul, grows up and goes to war, falls in love with an Italian woman, studies medicine, marries a woman he doesn't love and practises his trade in a society he finds increasingly restrictive. His friend Kobie follows him through the war and marries the Italian woman, establishes himself in business and becomes a power — silently, with little fanfare — in the black and colored community of Cape Town.

And then he is arrested after committing a crime; he is questioned and tortured. He dies. The story is over.

But it isn't, of course. There are too many survivors — people coping with, suffering under, and aiding the strange society that has established itself in South Africa.

Mr. September, then, charts a dual reality, and John Trengove (who, like his protagonist is a doctor and who now lives in Canada) reserves his bitterest comments for that society and for the people who enable it to function.

People like Paul Pendrake, the erstwhile hero of this tale.

"Where does human responsibility begin or end?" Pendrake asks. "Is the casual passerby who passively watches a child screaming in the window of a burning building any less accountable than the psychopath who kindled the blaze?"

So Pendrake recounts for us his own accountability for the volatile situation in his homeland. His chief crime is that of silence, a silence that both protects him and allows him to enjoy the fruits of the system he finds so disgusting. Without that kind of silence it's difficult to imagine the regime surviving for very long.

Not everyone is silent, though. Pendrake's uncle Gert, for one, is vocal in his contempt for the regime, and his comments help Paul to understand the historical and social roots of the regime and the psychology of its supporters.

"The new Afrikaner," Gert tells us, "hates every other white race, every colored race, every other religious denomination . . . And, above all, they hate the English. Especially their English compatriots . . ."

A simplification, perhaps, of a complicated situation, but one that provides at least a starting point for anyone wishing to grasp that situation.

This is John Trengove's first novel, and given the circumstances of its composition and its auther's primary trade, most readers will find it exciting and painfully real.

The decline of Steinbeck

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

John Steinbeck lived 66 years (1902-1968); produced 20 books of fiction, eight of nonfiction, two plays, two screenplays, and a large volume of letters, and won the Nobel Prize for Literature. A comparatively long and productive career for an American writer, whatever one's final estimate of it may be. (My own is confused by the fact that I read most of Steinbeck's books, and certainly his best ones, in a single burst of passion during early adolescence, and have barely looked at him since.)

Still, it seems an estimable career. So why does Thomas Kiernan devote only about 300 pages to it in The Intricate Music: A Biography of John Steinbeck? At first one suspects a once-over-too-lightly treatment, one's confidence undermined not only by the book's relative brevity, but also by Kiernan's introductory declaration that as a college student in the mid-1950s he "took a liking to the work of John Steinbeck," and his announcement further along of his "admiration for Steinbeck's works as a writer."

But as it turns out, The Intricate Music is brisk, dramatic and absorbing from start to finish. It immediately wraps you up in Steinbeck's arduous struggle to become a writer in the face of his family's disapproval and a lack of any early signs of talent. It makes the climactic second act of Steinbeck's search for a way of wedding his philosophical ideas to his fictional technique, and the payoffs he eventually achieved in his masterpieces, Of Mice and Men and The Grapes of Wrath. And it succeeds in compressing the last third of Steinbeck's life, which was marked by artistic failure and literary lionhood, without creating a sense of anticlimax.

Yet Kiernan doesn't stint the complexity of Steinbeck's career — the ponderous yet ambitious philosophical world view; or the deceptive attitudes toward the causes his books seem to champion; or his relationships with his three wives, his intellectual mentor, the scientist Edward F. Ricketts Jr., and his devoted editor, Pascal Covici. And one comes away with a feeling for the varied tones of the life from year to year, as well as a sense of its overall shape.

Kiernan masters Steinbeck's life by keeping a uniform distance from the day-to-day details of his subject's life, and by concentrating on what Steinbeck himself once told him was the only worthwhile reason for doing a biography of a writer — namely to reveal how the writer works out in his art the conflict between his actual self and the self he yearns to be.

Of course, certain details and textures are bound to get left out of such an approach. What a longer version of The Intricate Music might have been can be seen from reading Thomas Fensch's Steinbeck and Covici: The Story of a Friendship, which is an account of the writer's relation with his editor, seen through the prism of their correspondence. Here we get details about Steinbeck's writing habits (he was obsessed with having a ready supply of pencils, which he insisted Covici himself procure for him), gossip about his broken marriages (Kiernan describes Gwyndolyn Conger as angry and vindictive; the letters reveal some of the things she actually did); and a day-to-day sense of what Steinbeck was like when he was elated over work or dejected.

The only trouble is, Steinbeck is mostly dejected, because the correspondence begins about the time The Grapes of Wrath was being published, and thus reflects only the period of his artistic decline. Fensch, who teaches at the School of Communications at the University of Texas, doesn't bother to point this out. He is too busy nudging us with his interpretations of the emotional subtext of the letters, as if they couldn't speak for themselves.

But a reading of Thomas Kiernan's The Intricate Music makes it clear where the correspondence fits in. It also suggests several reasons why Steinbeck was never again able to write up to the level of The Grapes of Wrath — not least among them that he was undermined by the fame it helped win him. But by saying even that much, I am interpreting Kiernan. And the beauty of his book is that it presents a model of Steinbeck's life that can't be scaled down any further.

The magnificent human body

By LAWRENCE K. ALTMAN

What distinguishes The Body in Question is Jonathan Miller's deftness and originality in using metaphors to clarify so accurately much of the biological basis of medicine. Rarely have metaphors been used so well to communicate complex medical concepts and to pay tribute to the magnificence of the human body.

Metaphors are one of the most powerful literary devices and tools of communication, used every day, among other things, to convey feelings and moods, to propose changes in attitudes and to explain difficult theories. Although the origin of many metaphors is obscure, medicine clearly has contributed descriptions to our vocabulary about the non-medical world.

In everyday conversations we speak of political purges, a rash of complaints, ailing programs, the heart of a matter, contagious ideas, bleeding economies, infectious courage, a plague of war and desolation and feverish excitement. In the current metaphorical fad, cancer and malignant are used to describe social evils and serious problems. And we borrow terms from mental illness to describe the insane pace that someone keeps or a person's craze for money.

Despite the advantages of metaphors, doctors have failed to use them to maximum advantage as a teaching device to explain medicine to the public, even to the profession. It is unfortunate, because the debates about health care make this a particularly important time for doctors to communicate the complexities of medicine.

Medicine's scope is enormous. Undoubtedly, it is this vastness that has led to so much confusion in recent years among the biologic, experimental, humanitarian and political aspects of medicine and the system in which it is practised and researched.

Dr. Miller is a British physician best remembered in North America for his wit as a performer on the stage in the revue "Beyond the Fringe." The Body in Question is an outgrowth of his BBC series that the Public Broadcasting Service plans to televise this year. Yet Miller is also a medical historian who provides the insights that act so synergistically with his metaphorical mind.

It was not until the 17th century that William Harvey discovered that blood, pumped by the heart, circulated through arteries and veins. It is such a simple concept that now we wonder why it took man so long to understand it. One reason, Miller contends, was the lack of satisfactory metaphors for thinking about the phenomenon. It took an industrial revolution with development of a mechanical pump to provide the basis for Harvey's hypothesis and experimentation.

Today, Miller argues in explaining the advances in caring for someone in coma, "the unconscious patient is treated as if he were an astronaut in orbit; his safety is monitored and managed for him; he is carefully steered through all the natural risks until he is ready to link up again with his own command module and assume these responsibilities for himself."

Among the many conditions that can lead to coma is shock from bleeding and fluid loss. Shock is a physiological condition that has been experienced by, among others, former President Richard M. Nixon as well as wounded soldiers and auto-accident victims. Miller's metaphorical description is superb:

"If more than a pint or two (of blood) is lost in a short space of time, the system goes into a state of almost irreversible hydraulic shock. It is like a rubber syringe, which, if it is filled and then squeezed, produces a powerful jet of fluid; but if the bulb is not replenished, the jet becomes feebler at each succeeding squeeze, and eventually the pressure falls below the level where it can overcome the resistance of the tubes through which it has to pass. In the body, if this happens faster than tha system can replace the loss, certain vital organs begin to fail for want of oxygen and nourishment. The most delicate organ, the brain, fails first, which is why people feel faint and lose consciousness when they lose blood rapidly . . ."

Jonathan Miller . . . a master of metaphor

Clotting to stop bleeding is at least a 12-step process, one of the most complex in biology. Consider Miller's succinct description:

"It is rather like the series of orders, locked safes and sealed levers which prevent the accidental launching of a nuclear missile."

The Body in Question is no substitute for a medical textbook. But medical educators might ponder its style, because a better command of metaphors just might help doctors communicate more easily with patients and help narrow the intellectual gap between medicine and the public.

Two biographies of unique stage women

By ANTHONY JENKINS

In the "golden age" of opera, when the consumptive Mimi was likely to be an elephantine diva, Maggie Teyte, with her petite and slender figure and her air of "untutored innocence," proved to be a radiant exception to the norm. For Debussy, when she took over the role from Mary Garden in Paris, she was Melisande.

Yet, as this new book sympathetically illustrates, that graceful exterior hid a determined abrasive personality. At 84, she could still say of herself, "I'm a fighting person. I butt everybody."

The English soprano was christened plain Margaret Tate in 1888, and music was her life. At fifteen, she was heard singing Tosti's Goodbye in a London church and became the protegee of a wealthy musical family who passed on to her their fashionable distaste for oratorio and sent her to study with De Reske in Paris. There, in the private theatre attached to his house, she learned the flawless diction and vocal technique that were to make her the century's greatest interpreter of French song.

Her operatic career oddly never achieved its potential. In a way she was born at the wrong time, for to progress at the Opera one needed either money to pay for one's debut or the favor of the company manager, also at a price.

Teyte married her first husband, a lawyer, to save herself from the life of an operatic cocotte, only to find a husband hindered rather than aided her. Other, more-established singers, also stood in her way at the world's major opera-houses, and there was something about her creative idealism which limited her repertoire: "You could envisage her singing Mimi or Melisande five times, but hardly fifty, and never five hundred: the effort of repetition was too taxing on her sense of individuality."

Yet that determination to find her own way was eventually responsible for an exceptionally long career in which she pioneered operatta on the BBC, toured wartime Britain as a concert artist, and made what still, to many, are definitive recordings of French art-songs.

This biography by Gary O'Connor, the son of the orphaned niece whom Teyte so unwillingly brought up, portrays the indomitable woman in all her contradictions. The early chapters provide entertaining glimpses into an opera singer's life before the First World War and throw interesting sidelights on to the characters of men like Maeterlinck, Ravel, Debussy, and Beecham. But it is his compassionate understanding of Teyte herself that distinguishes his book.

Aggressive, obstinate, unfeeling and dominating, she is yet a completely rounded and thoroughly understandable person. While we're shown the flaws that wrecked her second marriage, we can still sympathize with its failure when she stood in her garden and "howled like a dog."

She bullied her friends, cut herself off from her family, said what she felt, yet that brusque spirit made her the artist she was and increased her vulnerability in old age as she moved apartments and fought off inflation and declining health.

Carole Klein's biography of Aline Bernstein, one of the pioneers of American stage-design, is entirely flawed by its author's shaping hand. Bernstein was the complete opposite of Teyte: warm, observant, greedy for life, a woman of immense energies and wide interests. She was also the mistress of Thomas Wolfe, the novelist, and it is that eight-year love affair which dominates the book.

Everything in the 45 years of Aline's life before they met is made to point towards that eventual union, and the book falls away after the break-up of their relationship. That romance also seems to have set the tone of Klein's prose which ranges from the colourful to extravagant gush.

The stormy affair between a happily married woman and an untidy genius 20 years her junior is, of course, dramatic and becomes, in fact, singularly moving when Aline tries to hang on to Tom and her own youth despite her better judgment.

The story has already been told in Wolfe's Esther Jack novels and in Aline's own The Journey Down. Klein's version derives, too, from the pair's unpublished letters, and her third view can be more objective, emphasizing Wolfe's egotism and need, his hatred of Aline's Jewishness, his fear of being mothered, and her renewal of spirit and final despair.

But in a book which purports to be a first biography, Aline does not stand clearly in her own light.

We're kept at one remove from the way Aline's family felt about her love affair. Her daughter is still alive and "opened doors" to many of Aline's surviving friends; despite that co-operation Klein's reticence may therefore be understandable.

But the book lacks a first-hand sense of the energetic figure that Aline was. Readers will get nearer to her early life in turn-of-the-century New York and its alleyways from Bernstein's own An Actor's Daughter. Here, this extraordinary personality remains in the shadow of Tom Wolfe.
